The Sacramento Jockey Club held a spring meeting, commencing April 17. A dash of 2½ miles in which "Mollie McCarthy" confirmed her title of "queen of the turf," by winning in the fast time of 3:40, was the principal event.

The nation's four fastest trotters, "Goldsmith Maid," "Bodine," "Rarus" and "Occident," with Eastern drivers of equal note, went to Los Angeles to contend for purses offered by the racing association there.

SUSPICIOUS SILVER SHIPMENT.

A man giving the name of John Paul appeared in Marysville, Yuba County, with fifteen bars of silver which he, through a bank, sent to the mint by express and received from the bank an advance of $1,000. J. B. Hume, a detective, saw the shipment as it passed through the express office in transfer at Sacramento and, knowing there were no silver mines in California North, investigated the shipment, with the result that he found that the name of the man was Paul and that he had been an employee of the Bonanza mines in Virginia City and had shipped the silver bars concealed in a box of household goods from Virginia City to Marysville. Paul skipped, but was later arrested. There was no doubt that the Bonanza owners could swear it was their property.

John H. Carr, aged 24, the son of Prof. E. Carr, state superintendent of public instruction and employed in the State Capitol, was found dead April 9 in a hotel room in Sacramento, with a pistol ball fired into his brain. It was decided

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

MANUFACTURE OF HOUSE FURNISHINGS AND ACCESSORIES IN SAN FRANCISCO

Capen A. Fleming

(MANAGER, INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

HOW MANY TIMES, WHEN YOU LOOK up at the stately twenty-six-story Telephone building, do you think of its window shades? Perhaps, never,—yet they were made in San Francisco. Not only were the 1,300 shades made here, but the shade cloth itself was prepared here,—more than 3,500 running yards of it, two miles of shade cloth in one building.

In this article, we shall survey the field of house furnishings and decorative accessories produced locally. The manufacture along this line is so varied, so many of the things we see about the home being made here, that reference to most of the items will necessarily be brief.

Let us first see how our San Francisco plant makes shade cloth. Muslin or cambric cloth, according to the grade used, is woven in mills in North Carolina. It comes here in large rolls ranging from 36 inches to 150 inches wide. At the San Francisco plant, frames 36 inches high and 182 feet long, and also those of varying height ranging up to 150 inches, but all 182 feet long, hang suspended from overhead tracks set at intervals at right angles to the suspended frames. The tracks permit lateral movement of the frames to allow space for operators. Muslin or cambric is unrolled and glued on the edges throughout the 182 feet of the upright frame, and stretched. With bristle brushes, 38 inches wide, a glue sizing is applied on this tightly stretched cloth. One day is required for it to dry, and on the next the desired color of paint is applied with the wide brushes. The paint also requires a day to dry, after which the cloth is cut from the frame and rolled. In the San Francisco shade cloth factory there are 188 frames, each 182 feet long. This company made 1,500,000 square yards of shade cloth in 1926.

When the cloth is prepared, the various window shade factories make it up to take its place in the home or office building. First the rod is cut to length, and, by the way, the patent of the spring roller goes to the credit of a former San Franciscan, although the rods are all made in the East. The cloth is tacked to the rod with special brads. A crank turns the rod to which the end of the cloth has just been tacked, winds the desired length of cloth on it, trims the sides as it winds, and when cutting off the shade cloth at the desired length, simultaneously creases it so as to form the hem to hold the curtain stick. The hem is sewed on another machine.

San Francisco-made shades manufactured from San Francisco-made shade cloth are sold all over the coast, most of the largest local buildings and hotels being equipped with them. Oakland and Los Angeles also have shade cloth factories.

Then we have curtains and drapes made here in at least two loft factories, besides the many work rooms in which purely custom-made curtains and drapes are made. Towels, sheets and miscellaneous linen are also made in the curtain factories. One of these factories made 1,500 pairs of curtains for a large down-town hotel here.

Rugs and carpets, unless we except the rug works which make rugs out of old carpet stock, are not made here, not, for that matter, anywhere in the West. We have here, however, a comparatively new rug processing industry, and an important one. In years past all importers of fine rugs found it necessary to route their entire shipments through the Port of New York, owing to the fact that Oriental rugs have to be processed and toned down, and the only processing plants were in New York. For the last two and a half years, San Francisco has had such a processing plant of its own, the only one in the West, and now importers throughout the West and Middle West bring in their stocks of rugs through the Port of San Francisco direct. After being processed here, they proceed to their destinations.

It is a curious fact that newly imported rugs have nothing of the softness, lustre nor color that they have after being processed. The steps in processing consist of washing the rugs in a chemical solution in large revolving tubs. This mellows and sets the colors, but it causes any cotton, which has been slyly made up into the rug, to lose its color and appear white. These cotton threads in the nap are then patiently pulled out. Persian rugs have even to be retouched to gain the proper subdued color effects.

This San Francisco processing plant has recently moved into fine new quarters, and is said to occupy the largest floor space of any of its kind in the country.

San Francisco has several large factories which would prove of great interest to women who are continually on the lookout for the colorful in house furnishings. In these large establishments, one of which occupies an entire building of three floors and a basement, and another about as much space on three floors, are made all kinds of novelties from floor lamps to "sleeping cats." These several plants present a maze of finished and unfinished articles. A forest of floor lamp stands, for instance, close together on the floor, await final touches. Lamp shades are being hand painted by the score, or ruffled and sewed, according to the type being produced. Wire frames are shaped and the joints welded together electrically. These concerns turn the wooden standards and do the necessary metal work on the metal stands, all operations being done in the factories except the base, which is of cast iron and made in some one of San Francisco's foundries.

In these plants, in addition to floor lamps, there are made bed lamps, table lamps, consoles, coffee tables, fern and fish-bowl stands, fireside screens, fireside seats, fancy silk cushions, etc. The very highest class of wrought iron furniture with onyx tops, or with beveled edge plate glass tops, are included in the large production. From San Francisco, this line of manufactured product is shipped and sold throughout the Western states.

Another group of factories specialize more in art novelties, and it is here that we find volume production of book ends, candle sticks, Chinese girl heads, French doll pin-cushions, including the manufacture of the doll head, dogs, elephants and sleeping cats. This last item of sleeping cats, cast from plaster of Paris, painted, trimmed and varnished, enjoys especially wide distribution. As a matter of fact, our manufacturers ship these cats all over the country, including the Atlantic seaboard.

That which is basically furniture is not being touched upon. In fact, it has been possible to mention only a few of the many novelty articles made here for the adornment of the homes of the West, but one further item should claim our attention, and that is the local manufacture of electrical fixtures.

One of San Francisco's manufacturing concerns producing electrical fixtures began business in New York 102 years ago, moving to San Francisco in 1847. This concern lays claim to being the oldest producer of lighting fixtures in the United States. But the local field is shared with two other manufacturers of these goods. A high quality line is made. Glass crystal chandeliers, as found in our large downtown hotels, were all made locally. The very large chandelier hanging from the ceiling of one of our newer spoken-drama theaters was designed and made here. This is ten feet in diameter, by eighteen feet high, carries two hundred lights and weighs two tons. It is lowered by means of a windlass, for renewing lamps and for cleaning. Homes, apartment houses and hotels, from one end of the coast to the other, are equipped with San Francisco-made electrical fixtures of all kinds. These factories also make other household articles of metal, such as mirror frames, tables, high-class floor lamps, fireplace screens, andirons, etc.

All operations, such as forging, plating and decorating, are done in the electrical fixture factories, but the specialized work of casting is left here, as in the lamp and shade factories, to the San Francisco foundries.

The work of the foundries, too, is interesting. Special casting sand is used to make clean-cut impressions of the article to be made of molten metal. The box has an upper and a lower compartment, and the pattern of the article to be cast is carefully embedded down to its center in the damp sand of one of the compartments. The impression of the protruding part of the pattern is made on the damp sand surface of the other part of the box by bringing this surface of the second half face to face with the first in which the protruding pattern is embedded. The halves of the box are now carefully separated, the pattern removed, a trough made in the sand through which molten metal flows into the pattern cavity, and the two halves are again put together, a hole having been made through to what is now the top of the closed forms. Through this, the metal is poured. The casting can be removed as soon as it is cool.

When a casting must be hollow, as in the case of an electrical fixture, which must be wired, a sand core, reinforced by small wires, is made. This is suspended in the impression in one-half of the sand box so that when the impression in the other half is placed over the first, the core is in the middle. When the metal is poured, in this case, instead of filling the impression solid, it fills in around the core between it and the walls of the cavity. When done, the surplus metal at the ends is cut off and the wire and sand core are easily removable, leaving a hollow casting.

The electrical fixture manufacturer, who has designed the casting in the first place, assembles the wrought iron, the castings, the metal leaves and flowers, the crystals, etc., and produces a fixture which we all admire.

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

RICHEST AGRICULTURAL COUNTY IN NATION

LOS ANGELES HARBOR EXPORTED TO thirty foreign countries during 1926, according to the marine exchange of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, 1,443,414,378 gallons of bulk oil, valued at $71,658,397. The oil was shipped in barrels of forty-two gallons each and was divided into eight classes: fuel, gasoline, crude, kerosene, diesel, tops, distillate and lubricating.

Great Britain consumed the largest amount of the local oil exportations, with a total of 5,011,079 barrels. Canada was second, with 4,823,657 barrels; Panama, with 4,324,802 barrels was third, and Chile, with 4,099,125, was fourth. Japan was fifth on the list, with 4,045,600 barrels. Fuel oil was the petroleum product in greatest demand, 20,177,434 barrels being exported.

Other countries to which Los Angeles oil was shipped included Alaska, Argentine, Australia, New Zealand, Azores, Brazil, China, Cuba, Danish East Indies, Ecuador, France, French Indo China, Germany, Hawaii, Holland, Hongkong, India, Java, Mexico, Morosco, Nicaragua, Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, Strait Settlements and Uruguay.

The value of agricultural and livestock products in Los Angeles County for 1926 was $89,817,515, according to the agricultural department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. This was about a half-million increase over the 1925 valuation. "This figure," declares the department, "will maintain for Los Angeles the undisputed claim to the title of the 'richest agricultural county in the nation'."

The chamber's agricultural department maintains an efficient statistical division, which each month issues "Southern California Crops," a market and field report on agricultural conditions in California South. This report was recently accepted by the United States Department of Agriculture as an authentic source of agricultural statistics for the southern section of California.

REGISTER, AND VOTE!

April 3 is the last day that citizens may register to participate in the May 3 nominating primary. Register, and vote, if you are interested in the welfare of Los Angeles City.

The property owners are being systematically and outrageously taxed, through regular levies and assessments, for public improvements. Due to incompetency and other reasons, the "goods are not delivered," but the taxpayer has to deliver his pro-rata just the same.

The condition of streets during the recent storms, in districts where heavy assessments were levied and collected for "storm drains" that did not drain, should arouse the citizens to vote-action.

There is only one way to correct the present deplorable state of public affairs in Los Angeles City, and that is to put into office men capable of conducting the business of a giant corporation such as this metropolis is—men who will see that none but competent employes are engaged by the city and that every dollar exacted from the taxpayer is honestly invested.

Such men can only be put into office by nominating, and then electing, them at the polls. That's the duty of the loyal citizens, and unless they perform that duty they, as taxpayers, will have to continue to "pay the fiddlers," and the city will continue to suffer from the effects of the fiddling.—C.M.H.

SIXTY NEW NATIVE SONS.

Sixty native Californians became identified with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West at the Los Angeles County class initiation March 18 in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch. Ramona Parlor No. 109 (Los Angeles) supplied thirty of the candidates, Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 (San Pedro) ten, Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 and Monrovia Parlor No. 266 five each, Hollywood Parlor No. 196 and Vaquero Parlor No. 262 (Los Angeles) four each, and Glendale Parlor No. 264 two.

The ritual was exemplified by a picked team from the county Parlors, and was made up as follows: John W. Topham (Hollywood No. 196), senior past president; Earl Lemoine (Los Angeles No. 45), junior past president; Burrel D. Neighbours (Ramona No. 109), president; Julius Leuschner (Los Angeles No. 45), first vice-president; Willard Buchanan (Sepulveda No. 263), second vice-president; Howard Bentley (Los Angeles No. 45), third vice-president; Ralph Harbison (Ramona No. 109), marshal; Joe Crowell (Long Beach No. 239), inside sentinel; Permin Calderwood (Ramona No. 109), outside sentinel; Julius W. in attendance, were Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Past Grand President Herman C. Luckenbeimer and William I. Traeger, Fresno, also were large delegations from every Los Angeles County Parlor and representatives from San Diego Parlor No. 108 and Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116.

Following the initiatory ceremonies a program was presented. In addition to addresses by Grand First Vice-president Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president Wilson and Grand Third Vice-president Dodge, each Los Angeles County Parlor supplied an act. Burrel D. Neighbours was master of ceremonies for the evening. The affair was held in Ramona's headquarters in Patriotic Hall, and was arranged by the Interparlor Committee, Southern District.

GOING TO SELMA.

The officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. journeyed to Santa Barbara and San Diego last month and exemplified the ritual for Parlors there. "Billy" Newell's jazz orchestra was along, too, and made a big hit. At the request of Deputy Grand President Sidney Witkowski, the officers will go to Selma, Fresno County, April 23 and initiate a large class of candidates for Fresno Parlor No. 25 and Selma Parlor No. 107.

Los Angeles' program for April includes: 7th, election of delegates to the San Pedro Grand Parlor; 14th, a surprise entertainment—the nature of which is being kept a close secret by the good of the order committee—followed by refreshments; 21st, initiation.

U. C. L. A. BUILDING PLANS.

Definite plans regarding the building program of the University of California at Los Angeles have been announced. The construction will be of reinforced concrete with brick facing, and the buildings will be erected on the natural contour of the hills, instead of grading to give them a level site. This will add to the beauty of the site, by preserving the natural beauty of the campus.

The classroom building is to be the first constructed, and it will be designed to care for all the students who are expected to attend the institution. It will have an auditorium that will seat between 1,800 and 2,000. The library building is the second on the program, and is to be designed to meet the needs of the university for the next quarter of a century or more.

Whatever is left of the $3,000,000 voted by the people at the last election for buildings on the new site will be spent for the departments of chemistry, physics, biology and mathematics. It is hoped two buildings may be erected for this purpose.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS CO-OPERATE.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124, Long Beach Parlor No. 154, Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 (San Pedro) and Santa Ana Parlor No. 235 N.D.G.W. were represented, by invitation, at the March 11 meeting of the Interparlor N.S.G.W. Committee, Southern District. Several matters of mutual interest were discussed, among them this year's Admission Day celebration, and the Daughters pledged co-operation in all activities for the advancement of both Orders.

The Interparlor Committee meets every Friday evening at Patriotic Hall, and in future the Native Daughter Parlors will have representatives at the second meeting of each month.

RAMONA'S BIG SHOW APRIL 29.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. will elect thirteen delegates to the San Pedro Grand Parlor April 1. It will have, by far, the largest delegation at the session. An additional twenty-two members will give it its fourteenth delegate, and there is little doubt but that the required number will be initiated before the Grand Parlor meets. It is just possible, says President Dwight Crittenden, that the twenty-two, and more, will be annexed at the class initiation billed for April 22.

The April boys' birthday anniversaries will be celebrated the 29th. Ralph Harbutton, in charge,

HOLLYWOOD, THE UNIQUE

The Beautiful Residential Section of Greater Los Angeles Where Art, Science and Industry are Happily Combined

COMMUNITY CENTERS COMMENDED

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

PROPOSAL OF THE STREET COMMITtee of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce to connect Arden boulevard with Rossmore to Vine street is having a stimulating effect on realty business along Vine street, the Hollywood Branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board is informed.

Vine street has become the principal artery connecting Hollywood to Wilshire and Los Angeles, and to provide for this constantly increasing traffic, the major traffic plan proposed to continue Vine street south from Melrose into Arden boulevard, widening Arden to at least eighty feet to Wilshire, thence south into Eighth street. The new plan provides for using Rossmore for all southbound Vine-street traffic and Arden for all northbound Vine-street traffic.

Using this plan will avoid the expense of widening Arden boulevard and will only necessitate the opening of a diagonal connection from Arden into Rossmore at a point one hundred feet south of Melrose and the widening of Rossmore from that point to Melrose to a width of one hundred feet. In connection with this opening and widening, it is also proposed to complete the widening of Vine street from Melrose to Santa Monica. It is generally understood that the City Council will pay from the major highways fund a considerable portion of the cost of this project, thus materially reducing the burden on property owners.

During the year 1926 over $2,500,000 was expended in new buildings in Vine street, while leases and sales of lots totaled more than $12,000,000. New projects for 1927, it is believed, will far exceed those of the past year. The 233 Club plans a $1,500,000 height-limit building at the northeast corner of Vine and Hollywood boulevard. Frank R. Strong and associates have begun a ten-story building on the southwest corner to cost $750,000. Important improvements are planned for the Paramount tract and nine new stores are being added to the Hood building at Vine and Sunset boulevard. Two drive-in markets are being built by an investment company, one at Vine and Fountain and the other at Barton and Vine. That Jess Willard believes in the future of this traffic artery is evidenced by his acquiring four important corners between Sunset and Santa Monica boulevard, giving him a frontage of 508 feet.

Community centers concentrating business development, as distinguished from shoestring, scattered growth, was commended by Gordon Whitnall, director-manager of the City Planning Commission, in a recent talk before the Hollywood Branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board.

Melrose avenue is a good example of this community center development. The paving of the center of the street from Larchmont avenue to Fairfax avenue, for which plans are under way, and the paving of Melrose from LaCienga westward to Doheny drive, is stimulating much building activity.

Between Highland and LaBrea avenues a thriving community center is growing by leaps and bounds. Numerous buildings are in process of erection and many new ones are planned.

The pride of the community is the handsome new John C. Fremont Branch Library on the corner of Melrose and June streets. This is a one-story structure of modified Spanish type with a main reading room ninety by one hundred twenty-five with a fireplace at either end. A story room for children and club activities, a spacious office for the librarian, and other unique features make this building most attractive and homelike.

The nucleus of another community center is the hub at Melrose and Orlando avenues and Melrose drive. Many new residences are being erected along Melrose west of Fairfax boulevard, and new buildings are springing up along every north and south street.

"Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, but let him work diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own shall be safe from violence when built."—Abraham Lincoln.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"THE SPANISH HOUSE FOR AMERICA."
By Rexford Newcomb; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $3.50.

Perhaps nowhere in America are Spanish houses more popular than here in California, and particularly in the southern section. In Newcomb's book, "The Spanish House for America," the Spanish house is viewed and reviewed, from the "bleak and bare fachada" to its very heart, the sunny patio.

Chapters deal with the historical evolution of the Spanish house, its exterior—materials and construction, the walls, the roof, the doorway, the windows, the balconies, the stairway, the pergolas, the chimneys. Then, stepping across the threshold to the long, low living room, the interior walls, the floors, the ceilings, the fireplace, the furniture, the fixtures and, most important of all, the patio, each and all are minutely described. The last chapter, "Bibliography of Spanish Architecture," is particularly interesting.

The book furnishes not only enjoyable reading, but is beautifully illustrated. It contains a frontispiece in color and ninety-seven plates of Spanish houses and their architecture.

For those who would build a real Spanish house, much help and knowledge can be derived from a study of the book's contents. For those of us who would like to, but cannot, have one, "The Spanish House For America" gives at least an opportunity to appreciate, recognize and criticise intelligently those that have been built by others.

"ALL AT SEA."
By Carolyn Wells; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Murders on land are difficult enough to deal with, but when one occurs in the ocean, then it has even the best of detectives "all at sea." Try to unravel this latest Fleming Stone mystery.

Garrett Folsom, a man of about fifty, is dragged out of the sea, presumably drowned. Investigation, however, reveals that Folsom was murdered by a stab wound in the abdomen. Witnesses are called and their testimony brings out the following details: Folsom was a rich bachelor whose immediate family consists of an adoring sister and a contemptuous nephew. Considerably a man of the world, he was of the ordinary gay clubman type, except for one eccentricity. Never far from his sight, wherever he traveled, he kept some half-dozen beautiful Parisian dolls, of the appearance so often affected by society women of the day. Each of these dolls, however, seemed to have a complete individuality of its own; in fact, they all closely resembled women Folsom had once known. He used to converse with these dolls as though they were truly human.

At the time of his death, Folsom was holding to the life-line, jumping breakers with two fashionable society women, friends of his. Standing next to him was Ned Barron, copper king, who was devoting all of his time and attention to the safety of the beautiful wife at his side. Both the rope and the sea were crowded with swimmers, though the breakers were coming in strongly. Folsom disappeared under a big wave, without sound. No one heard any unusual outcry, but near the spot where the dead man had been bathing were found an ancient pickax and a sheath of Oriental character.

UNEXPECTED COLOR NOTES IN HOSIERY

FLOWERS ARE AN IMPORTANT DETAIL. They are worn usually on the shoulder, but the tendency is more and more to place them where they best form a trimming accessory, on the belt, or at the point of a "V" neck. They are usually of the dress fabric for daytime types and of shaggy, ragged outlines for evening wear. A chiffon flower on a fox fur is a fashion frequently seen, and often the flower has a definite importance in the color scheme of the costume.

A bouffant evening frock of black taffeta, for instance, may be relieved by creamy white flowers with yellow centers.

Hats for early spring are small, with little brims turned down or up; or with no brim at all, in skull cap types, with pointed or curved lines at the edge following the lines of the hair. Plaid straws are a novelty in keeping with the vogue of plaid accessories.

Felt straw is among the many supple straws included in the new season's hat modes, being soft enough to drape easily and to look somewhat like fabric. The influence of the skull cap shows itself in shapes that follow closely the outline of the head.

Shoes are divided into two chief types, the light sandal, cut away as much as possible, and the pump style, that comes well over the instep, with more practical shoes on the order of oxfords. Both kinds are notable for a wide variety of materials.

In daytime types all kinds of reptile leathers are used, such as snake, alligator and lizard, besides kid, patent leather and calf in familiar and unusual versions, with all kinds of combinations to harmonize with compose effects.

Evening shoes especially adopt the sandal idea and are sometimes cut out at the heel. The materials include metal kid, metal cloth, brocade and satin and are often richly trimmed with jeweled buckles.

Reptile still retains a place in hand-bag styles, though many of the latest bags are of suede, smooth-finished leathers, fabrics, or combinations. The envelope is among the leading hand bags, though this season it has taken to new shapes and novel combinations of materials to match compose costumes. Pouch purses, with handles, are also smart.

In traveling bags, a crying need is satisfied by the new dressing-case bag of calf with a box-like under compartment for those things which must be laid flat. A tray is fitted for toilet articles, and on top is a bag for everything else.

A complete wardrobe, that may be packed in one small trunk, is the immediate aim of the smart woman at this season of the year, - for every one has some place to go. A complete wardrobe is reduced, by discriminating taste, to but seven separate outfits that will be adequate to the demands of every occasion and every location.

Two outfits are chosen for sports wear. The new sweater is distinguished from that of the winter by its lacey weave and stripes, and is worn with a finely plaited skirt. A jumper of tan and blue printed silk is combined with a tan crepella skirt.

Beige to rust, is the rule for the skirt of a jumper costume of knitted silk and wool. Two shades of green jersey are joined by seaming to a finely pleated skirt of beige. A beige belt and felt hat carry out the compose idea for golfing.

The sports ensemble, which comprises a long, simple straight-line coat, is of yellow angora jersey. A wrap-around skirt is made of the same material, bordered in rose, and has a tricot jumper whose horizontal bands shade through yellow and rose.

The attempt is apparent in the treatment of knitted apparel to get away from regular stripings that, for some time past, have made "knit" and "stripe" synonymous.

Bathing suits, too, reflect the recognition of knit media and interest in abandoning the stripe. The jersey suit predominates in the latest showings over the woven types and mottled treatments, together with silk.

The sponsoring of the lighter weight woolen fabrics alone, or in combination with silks, is an important feature of sports dress collections in homespuns, washable flannels, etamines and wool georgettes.

We see elaborate variations of the plaid, navy and twill coats and crepe ensembles. Navy with white is a compose effect which is being accentuated in crepe roma. Scallops are outlined with stitching on the frock and are accentuated with a pleated band on the coat.

The use of bows and the violet corsage are details of style interest. A ribbon bow of taffeta at the shoulder line is a trimming note which is the cause of considerable style comment.

Two large black taffeta ribbon bows trim the white flat crepe blouse of a two piece dress which adopts a black knife-pleated skirt of soft fabric. One bow is placed at the right hip length and the other upon the left shoulder.

The old-fashioned printed silk has at last come into its own, for fashion has beckoned to it for the schoolroom and the summer afternoon tea party, and given it a very dignified role to play this spring. It may be tailored, tucked, pleated and seamed in an infinite number of ways. It lines the coat and makes the matching of the smartest ensemble. The printed blouse is a popular accessory to the tailored suit.

Two decidedly unexpected color notes are creeping into hosiery lines. The very sheer navy chiffon, to compliment the tailored suit, and the gray tones, which are especially strong just now. It is thought that the gray hosiery will be widely favored, especially since the new footwear features so many of the gray kid and reptile trims.

In the chiffon weight, french nude hold first place, gray second, with pinky beiges holding third and fourth places. Since the chiffon is so decidedly the weight selected by well-dressed women, and beige the popular choice as well as gunmetal and blue, this proves that women are quite willing to accept other shades of hose which may not be so flattering as the flesh tints. Clocked hose, both embroidered and shadow, remain in the luxury class.

LOS ANGELES MADE HOSIERY NOW IN DEMAND EVERYWHERE.

The Beverly Hosiery Mills Inc., a strictly California concern incorporated in 1923, uses only the purest of silk and mercerized yarns in the manufacture of women's and men's guaranteed silk hosiery. Its sales policy is, direct to wearer only, thus saving the retailer's and jobber's profits, and its products are made only as needed, thereby assuring fresh-made merchandise.

People in every state of the union, as well as in almost every foreign country where silk hosiery is known, now wear the products of this company. They are not sold by solicitors or agents, to bother the busy housewife at her door, but are on sale only at the Beverly Hills Mills Inc., 332 South Hill street, Los Angeles.

"LUTHER BURBANK"

Placerville—In recognition of Arbor Day, Recording Secretary Josie P. Beach of Marguerite Parlor No. 12 N.D.G.W. composed the following song entitled "Luther Burbank," to be sung to the tune of "America":

Our Burbank! 'Tis of thee,
Friend of the busy bee,
Of thee we sing.
It was in your power,
To breed a new flower
You successful grower,
Let nature ring.

Wizard of creation!
From ocean to ocean,
Thy name we love.
We love thy useful trees,
And the fruit from all these,
The capture of thy leas,

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees,
Good Burbank's song,
Let all the birds rejoice,
Let all that will give voice,
Praise the wealth of thy choice,
Thy work prolong.

Lover of children! thee,
Friend of humanity!
Wonderful mind!
Long may our land be bright
With gifts from thy great light,
God grant that by thy might,
Long live your kind!

WILD FLOWER AREAS BECKON THE MOTORIST

ALTHOUGH THE CALL OF THE OPEN road becomes insistent at this season of the year, another louder summons to the open spaces comes from the wild flower areas and the desert country. The plentiful rains promise a veritable paradise of wild flowers in all sections of California South this spring, according to preliminary reports of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Almond and cherry blossoms already are in their glory, and the state flower, the glorious poppy, is beginning to dot the hillsides. Perhaps the most unusual and gorgeous spectacle will be found in the desert stretches, where prolific blooms come only after generous rains. Motorists appreciating the beauties of nature will find a riot of colorful beauty along the highways and in the canyons that usually are infrequented.

As the desert comes into bloom motorists will be offered a variety from which to choose. Beyond Cajon Pass, in the Mojave Desert, is the haunt of the joshua or praying trees. These bear magnificent blossoms of white and are members of the lily family. Here also will be found the spanish bayonet and yucca.

Between Eagle Mountain and the San Bernardino Mountains, on the road to Cottonwood Springs, reached via Mecca and Shaver's Well, the ocotillos, or desert candles, are among the odd desert dwellers.

In the thousand Palms country, via Indio, will be found the barrell cacti, palms, mistletoe, screw bean mesquite, smoke trees and other varieties of desert flora. Devil's Garden is a favorite trip for lovers of desert flowers. This is found in Marongo Valley, the road to which turns off the main highway seven miles below Banning.

The Garden Club urges that the wild flowers be spared so that they will be perpetuated for future beauty and enjoyment. Many species of wild flowers that once carpeted the hillsides have become scarce and even disappeared through wanton destruction. The club urges that moderation be used in picking, and that where the roots are easily pulled up, scissors be used so as not to destroy the plant. Flowers of annuals should be picked very sparingly, because the supply of seed is the only hope for their future life. Most wild flowers fade soon after picking. Automobile parties gather them in large quantities and haul them home to throw away. If picked moderately there would be plenty left to bloom for the continued enjoyment of all visitors.

Latest reports on wild flowers, blooming orchards, and road conditions always will be available at any of the offices of the Automobile Club of Southern California for visiting motorists unfamiliar with locations.

DEATH VALLEY OPENING REVEALS NEW SCENIC WONDERS.

With the improvment of roads and the recent establishment of hotels in Death Valley, a marvelous new region of scenic desert and mountain area has been added to the range of motor touring in California. Modern improvements have removed many of the hazards which previously were present in an automobile trip to this region and many motorists have made the Death Valley tour during the winter season.

showing mileage, stopping places and points of interest in the famous southwest desert region and these will be available at the touring bureau offices. Various itineraries through Death Valley will be mapped.

Outlining a round trip tour through Death Valley, the association's touring bureau points out that the trip is not recommended for the summer months, but that tours to the region should be arranged for the period between November 1 and April 15. After April 15, the association warns, it is not wise nor safe to attempt to drive in Death Valley.

WHY NOT PROVIDE THE BEST LUBRICANT PROTECTION?

The motor of an automobile depends entirely upon the motor oil put into the crank-case for the lubrication of all its moving parts. This motor oil is a cold lubricant. It is excellent for all bearings, cams and gears in the motor.

Motor oil and gasoline are both distilled and refined from crude mineral oil and will reunite whenever they can. You drain, or should drain, this motor oil from the crank-case about every thousand miles. Why? Because its lubricating qualities have been damaged or ruined by gasoline dilution.

The only motor oil that can reach the upper cylinder walls is a thin film dragged up by the piston rings on the previous up-stroke of the piston. Here this thin film of motor oil encounters pernicious gasoline dilution that ruins its lubricating qualities and searing heat that burns any motor oil to hard carbon and blue smoke.

Fulol differs from other lubricants. It gets castor oil into the cylinders of the motor and there the heat of combustion releases the castor. Castor oil is the best hot lubricant known, because of its high viscosity, heat resistance and insolubility in gasoline. It provides a non-carbon forming castor oil protective film on the cylinder walls, piston sides and around the piston rings that is not effected by gasoline.

NATION-WIDE INFORMATIVE NOTES CONCERNING THE AUTO.

Forty-four states of the union now have in force a gasoline tax.

During 1926, 3,500,000 persons were employed in the motor-vehicle industry and allied lines.

Gasoline consumption by motor vehicles during 1926 totaled 8,650,000,000 gallons.

Motor-vehicle taxes in the United States in 1926 totaled $735,226,000.

Freight carloads of automotive goods during 1926 totaled 3,160,000.

It is estimated that the 1927 automobile production in the United States will be 5,000,000 cars.

The 1927 touring season promises to be the greatest in the nation's motoring history.

During 1926, 22,342,457 motor vehicles were registered in the United States—sufficient to give the country's entire population a ride, with an average of five persons to a car.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN WHEN CROSSING THE STREETS.

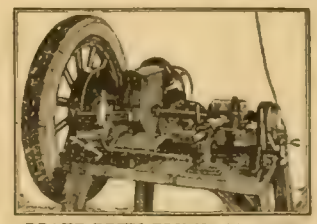
Pedestrians made up 73 percent of the persons killed in automobile accidents throughout the country since January last, according to the Automobile Club of Southern California. Twenty-three percent of the victims were under 15 years of age, 34 percent were 55 and over, and 43 percent were of ages ranging from 15 to 54.

People are always running a chance of getting hit when they cross streets, and everyone who takes this chance should keep eyes open and be on the alert, points out the motoring organization. Pedestrians do not wear blinders, and motorists generally feel that the pedestrian will watch out for himself. The figures indicate that such is an erroneous notion.

Heavy Storm Damage—Damage to California highways during the February storms is estimated at $500,000. Repair work by the State Highway Commission is well under way.

Brake Adjustment—Proper brake adjustment is one of the most important safety precautions to be taken by the motorist.

Victory Travel—Tourist travel over the Victory Highway during the 1927 season, it is predicted by the California State Automobile Association, will increase 50 percent over last year.



Good Work—At a cost of more than $3,000,000, eighteen crossings of railroads and highways at grade were eliminated in California during 1926.

HALL OF FAME SUGGESTIONS MEET OPPOSITION

SAN FRANCISCO—THE BOARD OF Grand Officers met March 5. In addition to Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, who presided, the following were in attendance: Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Frank I. Gonzalez, John T. Newell, Alfred H. McKnew, John T. Skelton, Emmet Seawell, Seth Millington.

The Grand Secretary was directed to write the chairman of the committee on governmental efficiency of the State Senate that the board favors bills 439, 440 and 441, embodying a state parks program.

A report on the benefits resolution, referred to the board by the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor, was ordered printed in the advance reports of the San Pedro Grand Parlor.

Judge John F. Davis, Past Grand President, appeared before the board and urged opposition to bills and resolutions before the State Legislature naming Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo and John Charles Fremont as the outstanding Californians whose statues should adorn the National Hall of Fame at Washington, D. C. After discussion, the following resolution was adopted, and the Grand Secretary was ordered to transmit copies to various individuals:

"Whereas, The California State Legislature has before it at the present time, Senate Concurrent Resolutions No. 17 and 18, and Senate Bill No. 652, which designate the names of certain deceased persons whose statues shall be placed in national statuary hall at Washington, D. C., and provide funds for such statues; and whereas, there are, in our judgment, others whose names are not mentioned who have given greater service and accomplished more good for California; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Board of Grand Officers in regular meeting assembled do oppose said Concurrent Resolutions No. 17 and 18 and Senate Bill No. 652, and respectfully request the members of the State Legislature to vote against them; be it further resolved, that the Grand Secretary be directed to send certified copies of these resolutions, under the seal of the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W., to the members of the State Legislature, the State Board of Control, and His Excellency, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California." Grand Secretary Regan complied with the board's orders March 12.

The loan of $1,000 made June 5, 1926, to the California State Historical Association was ordered stricken from the Grand Parlor's books as a loan and charged, as an expense, against the grand director's fund. The board will meet again April 2.

Following the action of the Board of Grand Officers relative to the selection of representative Californians for the National Hall of Fame, Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis and Grand Secretary John T. Regan, representing the Order of Native Sons, met with Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, representing the Order of Native Daughters, and Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, representing several women's clubs, both of whom are sponsoring the objected to concurrent resolutions and bill before the State Legislature.

After discussing the merits of many historically distinguished Californians, it was agreed to substitute the names of Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King—the second choice of the women's clubs, but the first of the Native Sons,—for those of Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, John Charles Fremont and Luther Burbank, originally proposed.

Miss Stoermer and Mrs. Forbes said they would take the matter up with their clubs, to see if the names agreed on are satisfactory. If they are, and the measures before the Legislature are amended to provide for placing statues of Serra and King in the niches provided for California in the National Hall of Fame, the Order of Native Sons will urge their passage. If the substituted names are not agreeable to the women's clubs, the Order of Native Sons will use every effort to have the pending measures defeated.—Editor.

Achievement Committee.

Santa Barbara—George A. Black, the president of Santa Barbara No. 116, plans to make 1927 a memorable year in the Parlor's history. He has asked the members to co-operate, with that end in view, to the fullness of their ability; primarily by attending meetings. He wants to awaken interest in community affairs, which will prove mutually advantageous. He has created a committee, known as the "achievement committee," with a new personnel each month, "whose duty it shall be to develop methods by which the membership of No. 116 may be increased." "Let's make Santa Barbara a worth-while Parlor," he urges, "first in accomplishments, second in numerical strength."

Three candidates were initiated by Santa Barbara March 2, the ritual being exemplified by the officers of Los Angeles No. 45, who were accompanied by Grand Trustee John T. Newell and the orchestra of Vaquero No. 262 (Los Angeles). There was a big attendance, and while the night was a stormy one enthusiasm was not dampened. The Parlor's good of the order committee, headed by James Gutierrez, provided an old-time repast and there was a program of music and speaking. Enthusiast Speaks.

San Rafael Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson visited Mount Tamalpais No. 64 March 14 and delivered a most interesting address on the work of the homeless children committee. He is very enthusiastic about this phase of the Order's activities and has given years of service to the cause.

The Parlor accepted an invitation to the forty-second institution anniversary of Santa Rosa No. 28 March 19. A class initiation was the main feature of the occasion.

Napa County Landmark May 8 Mecca.

Saint Helena—The annual costume dance for the benefit of the homeless children, given by Saint Helena No. 53 and La Junta No. 203 N.D.G.W., drew a big crowd to Native Sons' Pavilion February 26. Many attractive prizes, donated by local merchants, were awarded. Excellent music was provided and at midnight the Native Daughters served supper.

The committee of Napa County Native Sons, Felix W. Salmina chairman, having in charge the restoration and care of the historic Bale mill, plan a picnic May 8 at the landmark. At that time members of Saint Helena No. 53, Napa No. 62 and Calistoga No. 86 will put in the day cleaning the grounds, building a semi-circular highway so that motorists may drive into the grounds and around the mill—and constructing an old-fashioned rail fence. Committees have been named to have the necessary materials on hand.

Will Be in Raisin Day Parade.

Selma—Selma No. 107's benefit dance for the homeless children was well attended. L. J. Price delivered an address, telling of the home-finding work. Harry Staley, T. H. Thompson and Claude Grimes made up the arrangements committee.

Selma, along with other San Joaquin Valley Parlors, will be represented in the raisin day parade at Fresno City, April 30.

Barbecue Planned.

Colusa—Colusa No. 69 is planning a barbecue and class initiation for the latter part of April. All neighboring Parlors will be asked to participate.

Losers Pay.

Eureka—There was a big gathering here February 28 of members of Humboldt No. 14, Arcata No. 20 and Ferndale No. 93. The Arcata and Ferndale boys provided a chicken feast, the penalty for losing to the Humboldters in the recent whist tournament.

Officers of No. 14 were installed by D.D.G.P. Joseph J. Bognuda, Fay Horning becoming president. Following the ceremonies a program of musical and dancing numbers, along with addresses, was presented.

Membership Discussed.

Merced—Yosemite No. 24 received a visit from Deputy Grand President Sidney B. Wirkowski, who is engaged in field work for the Order in the San Joaquin Valley. He was accompanied from Fresno, where he has been getting good results, by President F. M. Lane, Secretary W. C. Guard and a big delegation of Fresno No. 25 members. Many suggestions for

Native Daughters of the Golden West

GETTING READY FOR GRAND PARLOR

THE FORTY-FIRST GRAND PARLOR of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West will be in session at Modesto, Stanislaus County, the week of June 20. Grand President Pearl Lamb will preside. Morada No. 199 (Modesto) has charge of the arrangements for the gathering and will provide an attractive entertainment program and also see that the delegates are satisfactorily housed.

In the way of entertainment, Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton of Stockton, in a letter dated March 2 has suggested as a feature a day's trip through Tuolumne County, rich in historic places. Incidentally, she made mention that two Past Grand Presidents—Mrs. B. W. Conrad and Dr. Victory A. Derrick—were born in the county, at, respectively, Springfield and Columbia, and that her mother, Lily Carney, is a native of Springfield.

Florence Giovanetti is chairman of the general committee of Morada arranging for the Grand Parlor. Chairmen of sub-committees include: Anna Sargent, finance; Nellie Dunlap, registration; Pauline Handley, publicity; Isabelle Heinman, reception; Katherine Gomez, entertainment; Katherine Gray, excursion; Mae Giovanetti, dance; Frances Bell, refreshments.

Rumors are afloat as to candidates for the several Grand Parlor offices, but The Grizzly Bear has so far been able to locate but one, Florence Danforth-Boyle (Gold of Ophir No. 190) of Oroville, who will be a candidate for Grand Vice-president. It is very likely, however, that every office, with the exception of the Grand Presidency, will be contested for. Unless the prevailing custom is reversed, Grand Vice-president Mae Himes-Noonan (Portola No. 172) of San Francisco will be selected for Grand President without opposition.—C.M.H.

Working for State's and Order's Interests.

Mariposa—Mariposa, rich in historic memories, landmarks and relics and famed for its Yosemite Valley, is the home of a Parlor, Mariposa No. 63, whose members proudly represent the Order in every community enterprise.

The membership is composed of pioneer mothers, county officers, journalists, teachers, students, and others connected with the educational, civic and club interests of the county. These, with the five charter members serving as valued mentors, form a most interesting and efficient personnel.

The numerous committees are working earnestly for the best interests of the state and the great projects of the Order. In conjunction with the local chamber of commerce, this Parlor is assisting in several important civic endeavors. Its participation in the opening and dedication of the all-year Yosemite highway resulted in worthwhile publicity for the Order.

Joint Meeting for Grand President.

Marysville—Grand President Pearl Lamb officially visited Marysville No. 162, Colus No. 194 (Colusa) and South Butte No. 226 (Sutter) in joint session here March 9. She was accompanied by Past Grand President Ema Gett and Mrs. Ludwig. Following dinner they were escorted to the meeting place by D.D.G.P. Esther R. Sullivan, Presidents Ola Gansby and Jeanette Boyer. Large delegations were present from Oroville, Chico, Wheatland, Colusa and Sutter. The ritual was exemplified by officers of Marysville and South Butte Parlors.

Grand President Lamb gave a very interesting address and impressed her hearers with her appeal for co-operation and unity. Past Grand President Gett, who organized the Parlors of this district, delivered her usual message of good-cheer.

Over two hundred, including many Native Sons, were seated at the banquet tables, which were decorated with eschscholtzias and lighted yellow tapers. D.D.G.P. Sullivan was the toastmistress, and D.D.G.P. Florence Boyle and Fred H. Greeley, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., responded to toasts. Presentations were made to Mrs. Lamb by President Ola Gansby of No. 226 for Marysville and South Butte Parlors, and by President Staple for Colus Parlor. Mrs. Gett was the recipient of a remembrance from Marysville and South Butte Parlors at the hands of President Jeanette Boyer of No. 162.

MODESTO GRAND PARLOR
(Gold of Ophir No. 190, Oroville)

Easter Greetings.

"Tracy, California,
"March 20, 1927.

"To Officers and Members, Subordinate Parlors, Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: The glad Tidings of Easter will soon ring out. Rejoice and be glad for Christ has arisen. How inspiring to contemplate that Christ arose on Easter Day to bring joy and peace to mankind!

"May the message of the Risen Lord bring happiness to each and every member of our beloved Order. We were in His mind and heart. He, the faithful friend, never spared himself. His Love is an eternal Love.

"So let us pray on Easter morn that He might fix deep in our hearts sentiments of Faith, Hope and Charity. As He was the perfect model for our conduct in life, He taught us the great lessons: how to be patient, kind, humble, courteous, unselfish, sincere—the very essence of pure and Holy Love.

"God has put in our power the happiness of those about us and that is largely to be secured by our being kind to one another. It is to be wondered why we are not all kinder. How much the world needs it. How easily it is done. How it pays itself back. How much we owe our Redeemer, who through His great Love gave us so much.

"The most obvious lesson in Christ's teaching is that there is no happiness in having and getting anything, but only in giving, and half the world is on the wrong scent in pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting, and in being served by others, when it consists in giving and in serving others.

" 'He that would be great among you,' said Christ, 'let him serve.' So, let us remember, dear Sisters, to be happy, there is but one way: it is more blessed, it is more happy to give than to receive. May the music of Christ's joy, the fragrance of Christ's peace, the sunlight of Christ's love be thine today and always.

"Flee, ye clouds of doubt and mourning, Christ shall be our light; with His helmet of Salvation, who shall fear the fight? We cannot doubt our Captain; 'neath His banner, 'Love,' courage comes, and strength to wrestle if we look above; and at last the conflict over, vanquished Death and Sin—at Heaven's gate our Saviour standeth. He will let us in. And the sweetness of His presence, that shall give us rest, sanctified to dwell forever in the City of the Blest.

"Sincerely and Fraternally in P.D.F.A.,
"PEARL LAMB,
"Grand President N.D.G.W."

Bird Seeders to Warble.

San Jose—Listen in, Native Daughters! Vendome No. 100's glee club—Bird Seed Warblers—will be heard over K.Q.W. April 5 at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Clara Gairaud will be the director and Miss Tillie Brohaska the pianist. Patriotic, popular and musical comedy gems will be broadcast and Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael will be heard in a message of greeting. Send in word—phone, wire or letter—if you like the program.

Vendome has joined with other San Jose organizations in regard to the cemetery plot of disabled war veterans. The goal sought is $3,000. A large spring initiation is being planned and it will be the motif for a gala affair with a record attendance.

Favors and decorations at the March meeting of Vendome's past presidents' club were reminders of Saint Patrick's Day. Past Grand President Carmichael and Mrs. Gairaud were the hostesses and Mrs. Mabel Sontheimer presided at the meeting. "Santa Clara Mission" was the evening's subject. April 28 a card party for the mission's benefit will be given by the Parlor; bridge in the afternoon, whist in the evening. In observance of Arbor Day, Vendome planted a sempervirens sequoia in City Hall Park March 7. Mrs. Emma Nelson was the speaker. In honor of those who died in the conflict, the tree was named "World War Departed."

Vendome personals—Mrs. Fred Withycombe was a Los Angeles visitor last month. Mrs. Karl Marten and daughter, Emmy Lou, have returned from a delightful motor trip through the southern part of the state. Mrs. John Corotto was hostess for the March sewing club session, and Mmes. Julia Waddington and Alice Roll were the hostess chairmen for the afternoon whist parties.

More Delegates Wanted.

Santa Ana—That it may be represented by four delegates at the Modesto Grand Parlor in June, Santa Ana No. 235 has under way a drive for members. Despite the inclement weather, the recent fair netted $22. It is to be repeated in the near future.

Mrs. Olive Seba entertained the Parlor's thimble club at her home March 9. A Saint Patrick's note was introduced at the Parlor's March 15 meeting. Mrs. Stella Stippler headed the program committee.

"No Tree Like Our Pine Tree."

Grass Valley—Arbor Day was fittingly observed by exercises at Memorial Park in charge of Manzanita No. 29, which planted a tulip tree in a conspicuous spot. An excellent program included, among other things, the following lines, entitled "No Tree Like Our Pine Tree," composed and read by D.D.G.P. Ella S. Ridge:

"There is no tree like our pine tree,
Standing erect in a dress of green.
Busy the whole year through,
Covering the earth with a carpet of brown,
Filling the air with balm for me and for you.
Busy the whole year through,
Dropping its cones, one by one,
There is no tree like our pine tree.
A shelter in sunshine and rainy weather;
A gift from God to man."

Realizes Grizzly's Value.

"Editor Grizzly Bear: The only way I know what is going on is through The Grizzly and I surely do enjoy it. Never realized its value until I became a non-resident of California.

"MRS. EDYTHE BEACH,
"Joaquin No. 5 N.D.G.W.
"Seattle, Washington, March 16, 1927."

District Deputy Hostess.

Sacramento—D.D.G.P. Maude A. Fassett of Coloma No. 212 was hostess at a dinner and theater party March 10, the guests including those associated with her in her work. The table was centered with spring blossoms surrounded by green candles, and here and there were emblems of Saint Patrick's Day. Dresden dolls dressed to accord with the color scheme were at the places, and upon each chair was a dainty silk boudoir pillow wrapped in gold paper and tied with an immense green ribbon bow.

Past Grand Greeted.

Sutter Creek—Amapola No. 80 and Amador No. 17 N.S.G.W. had a joint meeting, March 4, which was opened with the singing of "I Love You, California." The Parlor then greeted Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis, who spoke on California's early immigrant trails, and his remarks were greatly enjoyed. Lewis Santifo rendered a vocal solo.

Following the singing of "America" all retired to the banquet hall, where "eats" were in waiting. Here D. V. Ramazzotti told of the raising of the north span of the Carquinez bridge at Vallejo March 3.

Saint Patrick's Party.

Hollister—In accordance with their annual custom of long standing, Copa de Oro No. 105 and Fremont No. 44 N.S.G.W., sponsored a dance and card party in honor of Saint Patrick. The affair proved to be the most successful, socially and financially, of the entire season.

At bridge, the highest scores were attained by Mrs. Wright Lynn and George T. Wright, while Miss Mary Hudner and Charles Lehmann carried off the honors at five hundred. Appropriate rewards were presented to these winners. Mrs. May Elliot carried home a handsome embroidered luncheon set as the holder of the lucky draw number. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

History Appreciated.

Oroville—Gold of Ophir No. 190 initiated three candidates March 2 and an additional three the 16th. At the close of the latter meeting refreshments were served in honor of the initiates. Bernice Renfrow, chairman of the March 2 card party, reported a return of $41. March 9 twenty-seven members were guests of Marysville No. 162 and report the occasion, the official visit of Grand President Pearl Lamb, an inspiration.

Florence Boyle gave an instructive talk on early Butte County history at the Biggs Women's Club March 9. Many members of neighboring clubs were present and all expressed a desire to become better acquainted with the county's early history. February 24 Mrs. Boyle addressed a group of high-school students on the same subject and was enthusiastically received. She has been asked to give a series of talks to the students.

The fire bugle which belonged to the Oroville hook and ladder company in the early '60s has been added to Gold of Ophir's interesting early-day relics cabinet, Fire Chief Harry Sadowski making the donation.

Tree of Happiness Planted.

Quincy—Arbor Day was fittingly observed in Plumas Pioneer No. 219 March 7, when Minnie Johnson, Kathryn Prow and Josephine Braden were responsible for a tree of happiness being planted in the heart of D.D.G.P. Verbenia Hall, presenting her with a beautifully decorated birthday cake. In a gracious way the recipient responded to the remembrance. The cake, served with hot chocolate, was enjoyed by the twenty-five members in attendance.

Lincoln's and Washington's Birthdays were jointly observed by the Parlor with several songs and readings.

Grand President's Official Itinerary.

Tracy—Grand President Pearl Lamb will, during April, officially visit the following Subordinate Parlors on the dates noted:

The club meets every Thursday at noon, and all members of the Order, irrespective of Parlor, are invited. There are no dues. From time to time attractive programs will be presented.

Card Party.

Sacramento—La Bandera No. 110 gave a largely attended card party March 12, bridge and whist being played. Yellow and white were employed in the decorative scheme. The general committee in charge was composed as follows: Mms. NOTABLES IN THE PASADENA WINTER COLONY

Harry L. Roberts
(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT,
PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

PICKING OUT THE NOTABLES IN THE Pasadena winter colony is something of a task. Not because it is difficult to find the notables; that is easy. The difficulty is in knowing when to stop finding them. If we were to include all the millionaires, all the presidents of banks and captains of industry, all the men who are known as leaders in their respective lines of endeavor, the list probably would string out to so great a length that the editor of The Grizzly Bear would throw up his hands in despair.

Nevertheless, there are certain names that could not possibly be left off such a list. For instance, the name of Ignace Paderewski, celebrated as a pianist and hardly less celebrated as a Polish patriot, who deserted his ranch near Paso Robles to spend a considerable share of the winter at the Maryland in Pasadena.

Another name that would have to go on the list is that of Colonel Frank White, treasurer of the United States and a former governor of North Dakota, who came out from Washington with Mrs. White to enjoy the Pasadena brand of winter sunshine and golf. Incidentally, Colonel White comes by his title honestly. He served as a major in the Spanish-American war, and although sixty years of age when America entered the World war, passed the physical examinations, received a colonel's commission and served overseas for two years.

There are many other men who are now in Pasadena, or have been there for considerable periods this winter, and who unquestionably would have to be included in any list of notables. Dr. Max Mason, president of the University of Chicago and one of the world's foremost scientists, is one of them. Dr. Mason was at the Huntington during most of February and March.

Another winter guest at the Huntington was Samuel Harden Church, president of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, which organization supervises and controls investments and endowments left by Mr. Carnegie and valued in excess of $50,000,000.

Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the "Saturday Evening Post," "Ladies' Home Journal," "Country Gentleman," "Philadelphia Public Ledger" and "New York Evening Post," has been at the Huntington again this winter. He and Mrs. Curtis arrived early in January and departed in March for a cruise on their yacht, the "Lyndonia," across the Gulf of Mexico to Florida, thence to Cuba and up the Atlantic coast to the Potomac. During his stay, the famous publisher made several talks in Southern California, relating how he bought the "Saturday Evening Post" in 1897 for $1,000 and hired George Horace Lorimer to edit it at a salary of $1,000 a year. The "Post" now has a circulation of about 3,000,000 copies weekly.

The winter colony in Pasadena has included two of the nation's best-known financiers, George M. Reynolds, chairman of the Continental and Commercial banks of Chicago, one of the largest banking houses in the world, and Paul M. Warburg, New York, chairman of the International Acceptance Bank, director of several railroads and president of the advisory council of the Federal Reserve Board. The former has been at the Huntington and the latter at the Vista del Arroyo most of the winter.

HOTEL HUNTINGTON, PASADENA.

John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, having succeeded Woodrow Wilson in 1912, was at the Huntington with Mrs. Hibben for some time in January and February.

William Allen White, Kansas sage, editor and lecturer, was another national figure who spent considerable time in Pasadena during the winter. Walter A. Strong, publisher of the "Chicago Daily News" and a director in half a dozen corporations, including the Associated Press, arrived in March, with Mrs. Strong and three of their five children, for an indefinite stay.

Several other publishers with national reputations also heard the siren call of Pasadena this year. One of them was Edward Douglas Stair, publisher of the "Detroit Free Press," principal stockholder of the Paige Automobile Company, owner of a string of hotels and a chain of theatres and a director in about fifty other corporations. Another was J. B. Lippincott, president of the Lippincott Publishing Company, Philadelphia, one of the oldest book publishing companies in the business, and still another was G. H. Mifflin, of Houghton-Mifflin Company, book publishers. Joseph Medill Patterson, publisher of the "Chicago Tribune," the "New York Daily News" and "Liberty Magazine," also was in Pasadena for a while in February.

Richard H. Aiston, Chicago, president of the American Railway Association, chairman of the American Association of Railway Executives, regional director of western railroads during the war and formerly president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, has been at the Maryland with Mrs. Aiston all winter. Judge Robert Lovett, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific, has been at his Pasadena home this winter, as usual.

Among the distinguished winter guests have been two former government officials, Edward N. Hurley of Chicago, wartime chairman of the United States Shipping Board, and Byron R. Newton, former assistant secretary of the treasury and a former collector of customs for the port of New York.

Jacob Wasserman, most famous of modern German novelists, registered at the Huntington in March for a stay of a couple of weeks.

Among the heads of large corporations who have been wintering in Pasadena are Darwin P. Kingsley of New York, president of the New York Life Insurance Company; Cyrus H. and Harold F. McCormick, heads of the International Harvester Company; George M. Verity, president of the American Rolling Mill Company; Edward Foster, president of the American Sugar Refining Company; L. B. Kuppenheimer, clothing manufacturer; H. H. Fish, president of the Western Newspaper Union; K. L. McLeod of Toronto, general manager of the Standard Bank of Canada, which has 230 branch banks; N. J. Harvey of Chicago, head of the Illinois Electric Company; Henry May of Buffalo, head of the Pierce-Arrow Company; George M. Holley of Detroit, manufacturer of automobile parts; D. M. Clemson of Pittsburgh, executive of the United States Steel Corporation; George Plimpton of New York, manufacturer of text books and president of the board of trustees of Amherst College; George E. Marcy of Chicago, head of the Armour Grain Company; C. W. Warner, maker of speedometers and other automobile accessories; E. A. Cudahy, Chicago packer; C. D. Stimson, Seattle shipbuilder; S. C. Munoz, president of the Tidewater Oil Company; Jackson W. Johnson, president of the International Shoe Company, largest makers of shoes in the world; Edward M. Skinner, general manager of Wilson Brothers, makers of men's wear; Alfred Pillsbury, Minneapolis miller; Edward F. Swift, Chicago packer; Henry A. Blair, head of the Chicago street railway lines; August A. Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch Company; Harry J. Powers, dean of Chicago theatre owners; Arthur M. von Schlegel, head of the Hupmobile company, and many others. William Wrigley Jr., gum manufacturer, baseball magnate and owner of Catalina Island, has been at his Pasadena home a part of the winter.

Nobility has been represented in Pasadena this winter, too. Baron and Baroness Von Gontard have been guests of the baron's grandmother, Mrs. Adolphus Busch, owner of Busch Gardens. Prince and Princess Orsini of Rome were here for some time. Lady Beaverbrook, wife of the publisher of the "London Standard," "London Express" and other periodicals, has been at the Huntington with her daughter, the Hon. Janet

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

FARMERS MUST SOLVE THEIR OWN PROBLEMS

CONGRESS DECIDED TO ENDEAVOR to legislate profits to the farmer who, while willing to receive them, has not been able to make them materialize through his own efforts. The McNary-Haugen bill was passed by both houses, under pressure of the Middle West and the South, but President Coolidge vetoed it, wisely most California farmers believe. Whether the action was well taken or not, it was taken, and the agricultural industry of the nation now must look to itself to solve its own problems. California farmers long ago realized this must be done. They organized by commodities in marketing associations and turned losses into profits.

It has long been my opinion that the solution of the agricultural problem lies within agriculture. Until farmers realize this and develop leaders in the Middle West as we have done here in this state, the depression will continue until economic forces working independently right things despite the producers. Such a relief would be but temporary, however; the solution of the problem lies in getting down to the fundamentals. The president declared the McNary-Haugen bill unconstitutional; only those who would have been very directly benefited would have called it other than unwise.

RECORD YIELD SEEMS ASSURED.

Plenty of moisture in the soil this year! The growing season opens with the soil in every part of the state saturated, the rivers running full, reservoirs at capacity and a splendid pack of snow in the mountains to furnish irrigation supplies during the long summer. A year of unprecedented yield seems assured. However, there may be developments that will tend to offset the benefits.

A season without red spider will be a relief; but the long-continued wet weather may mean mildew aplenty for grapes. Grain planted in the fall is in fine shape, but there are thousands of acres where the planting of spring grain was badly delayed by the rains. There is small room for pessimism, however, though a note of warning to be on the lookout for results of the heavy precipitation may not be amiss.

STANDARD FOR SPRAYING.

Spraying for the peach-twig borer always has been done with lime-sulphur; and the codling moth has been controlled by the use of arsenate of lead. But the recommendations as to the strength of the materials, time of applying, etc., have been more or less at variance. This year the College of Agriculture of the University of California, and the State Department of Agriculture, got their entomologists together and a standard set of recommendations was turned out. These have been broadcast to the farmers, and a result should be better control of both pests.

FEMALE ASPARAGUS A DRONE.

Asparagus, a crop that has paid well in California, can be made to pay much more. The means lies in the planting of male plants only. Select from the nursery rows only those plants that do not blossom and produce seed, and the yield in the fields will be increased by from 25 to 50 percent. Tests made in the asparagus-growing districts have shown that the male plants yield upwards of 50 percent more than the females. A reversal of form over bees, to be sure, but the female asparagus plant is the drone.

BEES HELP POLLINATION.

A swarm of bees in the orchard at blossoming time will more than pay for the expense and trouble of getting it there. Pollination is aided by insects, and none is more active than the bee, or more helpful. This has been shown definitely by tests, and any farmer will recall that in a wet, rainy blossoming season when the bees could not work the set was light. Bees can be rented, or owned. If the orchardist does not care to own bees, he can hire them for the season; if he wants to take on a profitable side line, he can buy his bees.

In trees that do not show a readiness to set fruit, tin can pollination may help. Cut blossoms from some other tree of the same kind, but of a different variety, and put them in a bottle or tin can filled with water and tied to a limb. The College of Agriculture can supply information as to the best varieties to use in cross pollination.

INARCHING TREES BENEFICIAL.

Inarching is a practice that has saved many a girdled or otherwise damaged tree. Now it is being used to prevent black end rot of pears, prevalent in nearly every pear-growing district of the state. It has been found that pears on Japanese roots are far more susceptible to black end than if on French root. The remedy is to plant three or four small French seedlings and graft them into the trunk of the tree. In a few years a new root system is formed, and the old trunk can be girdled and the old roots killed. The tree is then on the French roots, and the black end rot is out of business.

Trees of any kind on root stocks that are not resistant to disease that attacks them, may be worked over in this manner, and they will put on roots that will make worthless orchards profit bearers.

VENTILATE THE POULTRY HOUSE.

The poultry house must be well ventilated. That does not mean there should be a complicated and expensive system of introducing fresh air. The result may be obtained merely by opening one side of the house, preferably the south. This gives plenty of air space, and there is no draft. Care should be taken, however, to see that there are no openings on the opposite sides, or drafts will be present and ills of poultry will appear.

Ventilation means fresh air, and that, in turn, means there will be a low moisture content of the air in the house. The opening of the south side of the house admits sunshine, too, with its attendant benefits.

ROUT THE ROACHES.

Roaches, once established, are hard to eradicate. Prevention and cleanliness are far cheaper, but once the insects appear, the conditions must be met, and it will take persistent efforts to meet them. Sweetened flour, with about 2 percent phosphorous, spread upon bread, will go far toward wiping the roaches out, if placed where they can get it easily. Sodium fluoride or sulphur, dusted on shelves and other places where the insects abound, will have a tendency to keep them down. Persistence and cleanliness will be found necessary if they are to be exterminated.

FIELD OF GREAT PROMISE.

The summer session in subtropical fruits will be given again this year at the Riverside Citrus Experiment Station, it is announced at the U versity of California. This year the dates June 25 to August 6. Not only is this sum school attracting Californians interested in rus and other subtropical fruits, but numb of interested agriculturists from the South states and from Central and South America inquiring as to the work.

With the future development of horticult almost sure to center in the tropics and s tropics in the next two decades, there is a f of great promise for agriculturists, prop trained, in leading this movement. No ot state or country has the facilities for giving instruction, and California is looked to for supply of men who can properly direct the m ment.

GIVE OLD PASTURES A CHANCE.

There is plenty of feed for stock of all ki this year; pastures have not been better i decade. Even grazing lands that have b thought worthless are showing up green and furnishing grass for the first time in many s sons. And this is just the year to give the gr a chance. Give the old pastures a chance to seed and they will more than repay the cost hiring other feed. Cattle should be taken fr the fields right now, and kept off until the gr has matured and the seed shattered onto the s This is not an expensive or wasteful pract but has been proved in many parts of the st to be an economic necessity if livestock are be continued on the land.

WALNUT BLIGHT.

There is not much known, as yet, regardin cure for walnut blight. Thinning out of the t has given relief in some instances, together w good, careful practices in the care of the tr Walnut aphis undoubtedly has a lot to do w the spreading of the disease from twig to tw and if spraying is done at the proper time it w aid materially. In the meantime, at the beh of the growers of the state, the College of Ag culture has assigned B. A. Rudolph to the st of the disease, and another season may find sc recommendations for control that will be m definite.

MILK FLAVORS PROBLEM.

Milk flavors have been found more or les stubborn problem. Not only turnips and high flavored weeds, but even alfalfa, have m milk unpalatable. It may be found, howev that if alfalfa or other feeds that produce flav are not fed within the period of five hours bef milking, there will be no flavor. The cow m chew her cud at some time, and this per should be utilized. Three hours, in the case seasoned alfalfa hay, probably is all that is n essary, but in the case of alfalfa pasture freshly-cut alfalfa five hours will be safer. M ing other feeds with those that produce flav will not lessen the difficulty.

weakened by an accident, serious trouble follows. A bath in sheep dip properly mixed with water, is a good preventative. A good diet in which meat is plentiful also will help by keeping the dog in condition. If the case becomes pronounced, clean up the dog and his bed at once and take the animal to the veterinary. Delay will not only cause suffering but will lessen materially the dog's chances for recovery.

CHECK PEAR BLIGHT.

There is no way to forecast the run of blight in the pear orchards of the state this year. With the certainty, however, that it will appear, orchardists should be ready to meet it and keep it in check. There is no specific yet found that will check the disease. Cutting and disinfecting both cut and tools after every operation, is the surest method known. Cut back far enough to be sure of getting all the infected limb. The best disinfectant is a solution made up of one ounce each mercuric chloride and mercuric cyanide and four gallons of water. Be sure to disinfect liberally and thoroughly.

MISTAKEN BELIEF.

The old belief that pumpkins and watermelons planted closely together would become mixed in quality has no foundation in fact. Plant them as closely together as you wish, there will be no taste of pumpkin in the watermelon. In fact, cross pollination of melons of the same species, such as cantaloupes and casabas, will not affect the quality of either variety. The seeds, if planted, will produce hybrids of unknown quality; but if fresh seed is secured for planting, no damage will be done. Pumpkins and watermelons cannot cross, so no harm is done there, even to the seeds.

HOG CHOLERA CURE.

There is but one cure for hog cholera, and that is by prevention through immunization with anti-hog cholera serum. This should be done while the hogs are young, and by some one who knows what he is doing. There may be no danger in some districts, but the old adage of an ounce of prevention and a pound of cure applies most aptly to hog cholera. It is not an easy task to immunize a large herd of hogs, but with the price of hogs definitely on the upward trend, it is insurance not to be overlooked. And if the hogs are taken when they weigh around thirty-five or forty pounds, the job is not so difficult.

CITRUS WHITE FLY.

The war on the citrus white fly at Sacramento, Marysville and Yuba City has been completed for the year. Infested areas were sprayed, and many trees were destroyed by owners who did not care to be bothered. With a light summer oil, about 98 percent efficiency of control was secured, which gives rise to the hope that the pest can be held in check and confined to the three areas where it is known to exist.

Not a dangerous pest in California North, the white fly has been a serious menace to Florida citriculture and the fear is felt that if it should get south of the Tehachapi it might do heavy damage. Consequently the growers of California South were willing to match the $40,000 appropriated by the state for the eradication of the menace.

EVOLUTION OF FARM HOME.

Farming no longer is a haphazard undertaking. The farmer must be a scientist to produce his crops and a business expert to conduct his affairs and market his produce. With this development has come an evolution of the farm home that makes it comparable to that of the city dweller. Being a businessman these days, in laying out the farmstead, the farmer should see to it that his buildings are located near

STOCKTON---
A CONVENTION CITY

A. M. Robertson

(MANAGER OF PUBLICITY, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

STOCKTON, WITH HER NEW $600,000 Municipal Auditorium, adequate up-to-date hotels, recreational attractions and beautiful stores, 208 active manufacturing plants, diversified agricultural attractions and a program of building a deep-water harbor, as the principal attractions, is fast becoming a convention city. Only just recently has Stockton undertaken any active program for the securing of conventions, and already this effort has secured for this city seventeen conventions which will bring 10,370 visitors during the year 1927.

Stockton is justly proud of the reputation which she is building as the convention city of Interior California. Convention facilities, strategic location, character of hotel accommodations and recreational opportunities are boasted in part by nearly all California cities; but the appealing factor and the element that makes possible the most successful convention is the spirit of the people who reside in the host city.

There is a tradition in Stockton which has had much to do with giving the city its character and moulding its development, and that tradition is hospitality. This spirit permeates the city's social and business life; and the thousands of convention delegates who annually attend sessions in this city feel the spirit and give expression to the fact that Stockton opens her heart to the visitor as wide as she opens her gates.

Until a few months ago Stockton was unprepared to adequately handle large numbers of people satisfactorily and conveniently, but within the past few months a new Municipal Auditorium has been completed, seating five thousand people in the main auditorium. Convention facilities are also found in this building and the arrangement of the building lends itself to providing large assembly halls and innumerable committee rooms for the convenience of delegates. This auditorium is located convenient to all hotels and has been declared to be one of the very finest similar buildings in the West.

Stockton's modern hotels will conveniently and satisfactorily accommodate 2,200 delegates without disturbing or inconveniencing the regular quota of transient guests. However, with additional facilities at the command of the Convention Department of the Stockton Chamber of Commerce, as many as 7,500 delegates can be conveniently and satisfactorily cared for. During a recent convention 7,200 delegates were easily taken care of through the wonderful hospitality of the citizens of this city. Homes were thrown open, and with the additional facilities of apartment houses and rooming houses, it was a comparatively easy matter to house this large number of guests.

Stockton's strategic location in the center of California is served by three transcontinental railroads, two electric lines, passenger boat lines connecting with the bay cities, and over twenty automobile stages arriving and departing each day, which, with their connections, serve the entire state. The two electric lines not only serve the entire City of Stockton with excellent service, but also the surrounding territory, which makes it convenient for delegates who desire to make trips to nearby cities to do so conveniently and at their pleasure.

One of the most unique trips is the night boat trip, from Stockton to San Francisco, leaving Stockton at six o'clock in the evening and arriving in San Francisco at six in the morning, although passengers are not required to leave the boat until eight o'clock if they so desire. This trip is down the Stockton Channel to the San Joaquin River, to Suisun, San Pablo and San Francisco Bays. This is a most desirable trip and accommodations are afforded, for one person or parties at very reasonable rates, and also accommodations for automobiles.

Stockton's 208 manufacturing plants afford an interesting sightseeing trip for those who are interested in manufacturing and industry. These plants include the manufacturing of combined harvesters, boats of all descriptions from small special boats to river and ocean-going vessels, leather and leather goods, farm implements, dredging machines, etc., representing an entire monetary output of thirty-two millions of dollars.

A sightseeing trip throughout the surrounding rural district will give some idea of the fifty-two millions of dollars of agricultural production produced in and about Stockton each year, consisting of a wide variety of deciduous fruits, field crops—including a vast acreage of Irish potatoes for which San Joaquin County is famous—grape growing, walnuts, almonds, poultry raising and dairying. During the spring the countryside is resplendant with beautiful blossoms from the cherry, almond and peach orchards and affords a very interesting and unusual sight.

Perhaps the most interesting of all, is Stockton's wonderful location and close proximity to the land of recreation which includes such world-famed places as Lake Tahoe, Calaveras Big Trees, Yosemite National Park, the famous Bret Harte and Mark Twain country. Nine hundred miles of fresh water streams, which are navigable and afford excellent bass fishing, in addition to the trout fishing afforded in the mountain streams during season, and the close proximity to the Pacific Ocean, with its attendant recreational opportunities, give this section a wide variety of pleasurable pursuits.

The history of Stockton dates back to the earliest days of California and especially the days of 1849, when gold was discovered in the Mother Lode country near this city. It is but a couple of hours' ride to this part of California, made famous by the early Pioneers and such men as Mark Twain and Bret Harte. Phantomlike cities still stand as mute evidence of the prosperity and activity that once prevailed in these old mining camps. Cities of the early days, comprising many thousands of inhabitants, now stand deserted except for a few old-timers who still cling to the hope and belief that some day a new "strike" will be made which will bring back again the prosperity that once existed. There is something alluring and fascinating about this section of California which is so easy of access from Stockton, that is dear to the hearts of Californians and is known by practically every citizen of America who has at some time read the daring tales and stories of those early pioneer days by Mark Twain and Bret Harte.

For the golfist, who cares not for the other recreations afforded, there is given an opportunity to enjoy this sport in the fullest measure. The San Joaquin County Golf and Country Club links, on the banks of the San Joaquin River, afford all the pleasure and enjoyment to those who enjoy this popular sport and amusement.

Stockton's water front is interesting and unique and is at present the setting for one of the greatest pieces of development ever to be undertaken in any California city, that of building a deep-water harbor which will permit ninety percent of the ocean-going vessels to dock at Port Stockton. Within a very short time Stockton will be California's inland harbor. All appropriations for finances to see this project completely finished have been made, amounting to approximately seven millions of dollars. The preliminary engineering work on the building of this harbor is to be undertaken immediately, and by the end of 1927 the actual work of dredging will have commenced.

The Chinatown section of Stockton affords a certain amount of lure and attraction, because of the quaint shops and stores and the fascination for these interesting people.

The Stockton stores are as fine as can be found in any similar sized city and afford the latest of everything at prices a little below the average Western city. One of the greatest material manifestations of Stockton's famous spirit of hospitality is the fact that its stores, hotels, restaurants and other institutions which naturally make a charge, do not increase their prices in order to "hold up" the tourist or convention guest within the city. The citizens of Stockton appreciate more, perhaps, than any other city in the West, the value of good-will and that the visitor within our gates should be made happy and satisfied, and that spirit prevails to the fullest degree in this, the "Hospitable City."

As a convention city, Stockton offers all of the advantages that any other city can offer, with none of the disadvantages, and above all a spirit of warm fellowship and hospitality that can be found no place else in the West. The real spirit of California, as brought down from the days of '49, still prevails in its fullest measure and is one of the outstanding things which appeal to the visitor to Stockton, and which is bringing to this city its wonderful growth, development and prosperity.

NATIVE SONS OBSERVE FORTY-FOURTH INSTITUTION ANNIVERSARY.

One hundred and seventy-five members of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. were in attendance at the old-timers' banquet and entertainment given March 14 in observance of the Parlor's forty-fourth institution anniversary. Grand President Hilliard E. Welch was the guest of honor.

Law T. Freitas was the toastmaster and George F. McNoble, the Parlor's historian, delivered the principal address. Among the other speakers were Past Presidents John R. Williams, George M. Steele, Ray Dorcey, Frank R. Rose, Harry Dunlap, Ed Parker and Norman Stockwell. The Parlor gave a whist party March 23 for the benefit of the homeless children.

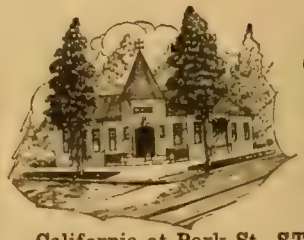
enough the highway so as not to be isolated, yet far enough away to be accessible to fields and pastures.

Drainage is of prime importance; the size of the farm and its possible development must be considered. Arrangement of the buildings for convenience and for sanitation must be taken into consideration; and its view must be given thought. If a farmstead engineer is not employed, the farmer should go carefully into details in laying out his plans for building.

TO ERADICATE SPARROWS.



Birds are sometimes a nuisance, less often a menace; but in the case of English sparrows the end of being rid of them justifies the means. Poison is the best method, always remembering that it is a violation of the law to spread poison promiscuously so that game birds or song birds are killed. To get the sparrows, however, try this: mix one-eighth ounce of powdered alkaloidal strychnine with the same quantity of sugar and baking soda dry, and stir into two tablespoonfuls of heavy corn syrup. Dissolve a tablespoonful of laundry starch in cold water and add to a quarter of a pint of hot water and add the syrup with the other ingredients. Pour this over two quarts of cracked grain and place it where the sparrows feed or roost. Be sure it is off the ground where domestic fowls and animals cannot get it, and that it is out of the reach of children.

KEEP BOOKS.

Keep records of your farming business. No merchant, businessman or manufacturer would think of trying to get along without books; no more should the farmer. If costs and expenditures are not carefully noted, allowances made for depreciation and labor, and the accounts well handled, no farmer can tell whether he is makng money or not. Nor, more important, can he ell what parts of his farm pay and what do not. Farming is a business and should be run as such f it cannot justify itself in figures, better aban- lon it.

GOOD WHITEWASH.

A good whitewash for trees, particularly young trees or those that have been heavily pruned, is made up of quicklime thirty pounds, allow four pounds, salt five pounds, with water enough to make the mixture flow freely. It is not at all inadvisable to use whitewash on trees before the hot summer weather; but it is more important to bear in mind the fact that the trees need it more just before the clear, cold weather of winter.

STEP IN RIGHT DIRECTION.

Indications point to the passage by this Legislature of a commission merchant bill. The measure is not in the form that was desired; technicalities and unconstitutionalities forbade that. But it is a bill that will accomplish a lot of good, that is a long step taken in the right direction. The loopholes can be filled in later, if the need appears. But right now the most apparent fact about the measure is that it will do a vast amount of good in putting the state's greatest business on a sound basis.

JUNE DROP PREVALENT.

June drop is an ill of the orchard that seems prevalent in most parts of the state. Apparently it is caused by a lack of moisture in the soil and air. Overhead irrigation has cured the trouble in some places, but it is not always feasible. The next best step to take is to get a good summer cover crop, if the moisture is available; and this year it should be, if ever it is going to be.

HUMUS VALUABLE.

Humus is just about the most valuable thing the garden soil needs. Work in the lawn clippings, manure, weeds and anything in the way of vegetation that will decay and add to the humus in the soil. Spade under the winter's growth of grass and weeds in the spring. Plenty of humus holds the moisture, makes the soil work more easily, provides life for the soil bacteria and adds generally to the tilth.

BERMUDA GRASS A PEST.

Watch the pests, not only insects, but the others, as well, that grow in the soil. There is Bermuda grass, for instance, a robber of soil and a thief of profits. In some places it has run out the crops growing on the land and has caused abandonment of the tract. Once started, it is a difficult pest to eliminate, but it can be done.

In small patches it is possible to "shade it out" by covering with weed trash, etc., during the summer months. It spreads through deep-growing roots and it is hard to stop by digging or plowing, although if the roots are turned up the fall and grain is planted it may be "shaded out" in that manner. Bermuda grass must have sunshine, and depriving it of the sun is the quickest means of getting rid of it.

"MASTER FARMERS."

In the Middle West they are designating "master farmers." Agricultural publications are taking the lead in this movement, and farmers are graded on the basis of 1,000 points, as follows: organization and operation of farm, 260; business methods and ability, 200; general farm appearance and upkeep, 90; home life, 300; citizenship, 150. Gold medals are awarded those men who earn the title of "master farmer," and it is becoming a much-coveted honor. There are plenty of farmers in California who could qualify in such a competition and there are plenty more who could not.

LONG BEACH HARBOR, DEEPEST ON COAST, EXPANDS RAPIDLY

Gene Plumb

(PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

LONG BEACH HAS THE DEEPEST HARbor on the Pacific Coast. Its tonnage, which amounted to 1,072,907 in 1926 and was valued at nearly $11,000,000, was triple that of the preceding year. The value and amount of tonnage handled passing through the harbor are significant, inasmuch as the port has been opened to deep-draft ships only since April 1926.

Long Beach voted a bond issue of $5,000,000 to be expended in the development of the city's harbor. During the last year, in April 1926, sufficient work had been accomplished to place the harbor in the class with other harbors of the coast. With its forty-foot entrance channel, turning basin and inside channels it can hold its own with old established ports.

300 PERCENT TONNAGE INCREASE.

The annual report reveals the fact that commerce in 1926 showed a total of 1,072,907 tons coming into and going out of this harbor. Valuation of this tonnage was set at $10,980,903. This is an increase approximately of 300 percent of the tonnage and value, for during the preceding year a total of 358,899 tons, valued at $2,952,612, passed through this port.

The biggest single item in the report is shown to have been domestic outgoing tonnage, amounting to 526,078. This was valued at $6,784,015. It was composed largely of oil shipments. Next on the list was lumber, which shows a tonnage of 53,498, and was valued at $1,906,963. Of this amount, domestic inbound cargoes of 38,665 tons were valued at $977,189. Imported lumber, represented by a tonnage of 14,833 valued at $929,774, was also brought here. During the year 41,765 tons of gypsum rock arrived from San Marcus island. This was valued at $1 a ton, or $41,765.

DEEP-DRAFT SHIPS USE HARBOR.

According to the harbor annual report the Long Beach port, which has been prepared for big ocean-going vessels, is being put to use by deep-draft ships.

A total of 827 ships, including steamers, sailing vessels, motor and unrigged, and representing a net registered tonnage of 856,429, entered the Long Beach Harbor during 1926. Fourteen of this number were foreign vessels. One hundred and eighteen passengers arrived or left from the local port on motor vessel during the year, the report shows. Of the total of 827 ships entering and leaving the harbor, 216 were steamers, both American and foreign; 19 were American sailing vessels; 168 were motor ships, including one foreign ship; and 424 were unrigged vessels, 6 of this number being foreign ships.

Usual limits of draft of loaded vessels engaged in foreign or inter-ocean traffic is twenty-six feet, the report shows. The biggest vessels entering the harbor are usually oil tankers, and the usual limits of draft of loaded vessels engaged in oil traffic, according to the report, has been thirty-two feet. Coastwise traffic boats, when loaded, are usually not more than twenty-two feet in draft, and lumber carriers do not go over twenty-four feet.

HARBOR IS BUSY DISTRICT.

There is, in the Long Beach inner harbor, a busy traffic which would not be dreamed of from the center of town or from the city's beach. Long Beach is doubly blessed, for her harbor, lying off to one side of the city's business section, can be developed and can continue to operate on an increasing scale without the city's beauty and its recreational facilities paying the penalty. The city will have a harbor, but it will not be necessary to sacrifice its advantages as a place of residence, of rest and of recreation for it to acquire a world port. There is the beach stretching eastward from the flood-control channel as enjoyable as it was five years ago. The amusement zone has not been affected by the industrial and shipping district. The city's residential area can extend eastward along the ocean front with as fine a view and as fine a playground on the beach at its front door as ever.

There is no web of masts and rigging and funnels and no maze of ships and wharves and warehouses to superimpose themselves upon the city's finest natural advantage—the ocean.

NUMEROUS HARBOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

Some of the accomplishments of the harbor district during the last two years have been the completion of its marine terminal by the Richfield Oil Company, the construction of a $12,500 navy landing station to accommodate the men and officers of the Pacific fleet, the location of a lumber company, a creosoting plant and an automobile assembling and manufacturing plant.

An outstanding feature of the year was the announcement by the Southern California Edison Company of its program for building an additional unit here every two years until the plant will be developing 1,000,000 horsepower. When this program is complete, the Edison company's Long Beach plant will be the largest steam power plant in the world. During the next two years its present investment of $30,000,000 will be doubled and the annual payroll for Long Beach will be about $2,500,000 for its 1,500 employees.

AUTO PLANT GREAT STRIDE.

The greatest achievement of the year has been the location of an auto plant in Long Beach. Laying of foundations for the immense plant will start this month, it is believed. Preparations for the foundations are now being made and a dredge is busily at work pumping material onto the site of the building.

When this plant is in operation there will be 1,500 persons employed at the outset. The plant will cover at least 350,000 square feet of ground, since that is the minimum defined in the contracts between the company, the Union Pacific Railroad and the City of Long Beach. The payroll will approximate $250,000 a month. The plant has been designed to turn out 500 cars daily, or 700 cars a day in case of emergency.

In addition to assembling automobiles for shipment to the Orient and Australia, a certain amount of manufacturing will be carried on at the Long Beach plant. Parts made here will be shipped abroad for assembling. Cloth for upholstering to be used at all Pacific Coast assembling plants, batteries for coast assembling plants, and wire wheels for the other Western plants are to be made here. A glass factory may also be established in connection with the local industry.

Although but twelve acres of the forty-acre tract acquired by the company for its plant lie within the Long Beach City boundaries, it is upon these twelve acres that about two thirds of the structure will be erected. Also, the Long Beach area fronts on Cerritos Channel and the harbor frontage and privileges are bound to become the nuclei of the plant's shipping activities.

OIL LOADING DOCK IMPORTANT.

An industry of importance which has been established in the harbor district during the past two years is the Richfield Oil Company's terminal. The company prepared its own waterway, dredging back sixty-five feet from the channel. It built wharves along the waterfront and erected a pumping plant and several large storage tanks. It has facilities for handling half a million barrels of oil or gasoline a month. Tankers call at the loading dock and in a few hours take on large cargoes of oil or gasoline, which are pumped directly into their tanks. During the year 1926 the two largest oil tankers in the world called at the Richfield dock here and took on immense quantities of oil.

Another plant is that of a gypsum company, which annually imports large quantities of crude gypsum rock. The company owns San Marcus Island, off the west coast of Mexico, and its steamers and barges bring the rock to the Long Beach plant, where it is manufactured into plaster and other gypsum products. The island has a supply of gypsum amounting to 100 million tons. The Long Beach plant employs twenty-five persons and has a payroll of $50,000 a year. It handles about 60,000 tons of gypsum annually.

LUMBER COMPANIES ACTIVE.

Three lumber companies have located in the harbor district, and one of them has placed a creosoting plant here during the last year, making an investment of $60,000 a year. It handles large amounts of poles, piling and railroad ties. Most of the lumber received here undergoes treatment in the creosoting tanks. Hardwoods from the Philippine Islands are imported by another company and are discharged at the municipal dock. Large concessions are held by this company on the Island of Luzon, in the Philippine group, and from these forests choice Philippine mahogany and other hardwoods for cabinet work, veneering and flooring are brought here. The construction of warfage and of a mill for handling the rough lumber is to be effected on this company's harbor property before the end of this year.

Similar plans have been made by still another company, which is occupying leased land near the municipal wharf. It owns thirty-nine acres of land, and plans to build wharves and a planing mill there during the coming year. At the present time it is employing forty men and is bringing in about 40,000,000 board-feet annually.

Except for the company which has its own wharves, all the lumber received in Long Beach during the past year was discharged at the municipal wharf. Need of additional wharfage and transit sheds was demonstrated by the crowded condition of the dock during the year.

DREDGING COMPLETED LAST JULY.

Probably all of the development which occurred during the past year is the direct result of the completion of the inner harbor and entrance channels. A two-year dredging program was completed July 31, 1926, after a total of 9,000,000 cubic yards of material had been removed at a cost of one and one-half million dollars.

As a result of the dredging, Long Beach now has a harbor which is the deepest on the Pacific Coast. Its maximum depth at low tide is forty feet, and its minimum depth at low tide is thirty-two feet. A total of 1,710,750 cubic yards was removed during 1926.

Since about 1919, the Long Beach Harbor had been blocked at its entrance channel. A sand bar which formed there had to be cut through, and today it is forty feet deep. The same depth obtains in the turning basin and in a large part of channels two and three. The forty-foot depth extends back 2,500 feet of the 3,800 foot length of channel two and back 1,200 feet of channel three, which is 4,000 feet long.

the purpose of perpetuating the memory of those early Pioneers who faced suffering, privation and death in laying the foundations for the great Commonwealth of California—at Houghton Park March 19. Particularly honored were the late Congressman and Mrs. S. O. Houghton, the latter a member of the Donner Party, whose son, Stanley Houghton, and daughter, Miss Eliza P. Houghton, gave a portion of the park to Long Beach. E. C. Crowell was general chairman of the day and Dr. S. T. Luce the master of ceremonies.

Three trees were planted by the Native Sons, dedicated to Friendship, Loyalty and Charity, the foundation stones of the Order, the ceremonies being conducted by the following: Herman C. Lichtenberger, Past Grand President; Charles A. Thompson, Grand First Vice-president; James A. Wilson, Grand Second Vice-president; Charles L. Dodge, Grand Third Vice-president. Among the many other Native Sons in attendance were Past Grand President William I. Traeger and Grand Trustee John T. Newell.

The day's festivities, which included other tree plantings, sports and a basket lunch, were under the auspices of the North Central Development Association of Northern Long Beach, which hopes to make of Houghton Park a beautiful recreational center. The welcome address was delivered by Mayor Fillmore Condit, and among the speakers were Clarence Wilson, Superintendent of Parks Frank Downs, Superintendent of Recreation Squire DuRee.

THE FARMER'S PRAYER FOR RAIN WAS ANSWERED.

About twenty-five or thirty years ago, says the "Lake County Bee," the farmers of the Sacramento Valley met in February and prayed for rain. In a few days the rain came and the country was flooded. Then the farmers met again and prayed for the rain to stop. A Sacramento newspaper published about that time the following poem written by Lillian Ferguson, and it is being republished by request:

I've come, Lord, to apologize
Upon my bended knees,
And humbly ask thet you'll shut off
Them heavenly faucets—please!
I know it's what we prayed for, but
We didn't calkilate
Thet you was goin' to send it down
So hard and fast and straight.

You see, it looked as if a drought
Had really come to stay.
It scared us so, from north to south,
We jest flopped down to pray.
We knew thet you was workin', Lord,
For all thet you was worth,
And feared thet mebbe you'd forgot
Our portion o' the earth.

So when I begged for rain, dear Lord,
I didn't mean no harm;
I never thought, to punish me,
Thet you would flood the farm.
The levee's nigh to bustin' now;
There'll be no sign o' crop;
I'll never raise the mortgage, Lord,
If this here rain don't stop.

The pasture's under water, Lord,
The stock is swimmin' 'round,
And not an acre on the ranch
Can show a patch o' ground.
The county road has all caved in,
The creek's too high to ford—
We'll roost in tree-tops if you don't Shut off them faucets, Lord!

We oughtn't to have interfered;
We needed this rebuff;
But don't you think by this time, Lord,
Thet we have had enough?
Oh, chase them clouds from out the sky!
Let loose the sun, and then
Jest run this earth to suit yourself
Forevermore. Amen!

SAN DIEGO'S HISTORICAL PRE-EMINENCE

(FROM SMYTHE'S COPYRIGHTED "HISTORY OF SAN DIEGO.")

BETWEEN 1836 AND 1840 NEARLY ALL the ranchos in the country were plundered, at one time or another, and agriculture fell to a very low ebb. In the spring of 1836 there were loud complaints and the soldiers could furnish no protection, being without arms and ammunition. Juan Maria Marron was attacked in January, on the Cueros de Venado rancho, but the hostiles were driven off with the help of friendly Indians, and several of them killed. The savages became so bold that they even made raids into the town. An unsuccessful effort was made to have a garrison established at Santa Ysabel. In March, Don Sylvestre Portilla proposed to conquer the Indians at his own expense, on condition that he be allowed to keep those made prisoner for servants.

The year 1837 was one of great anxiety for the San Diego people—a year of blood and terror. One of the best accounts of some of these disturbances is that in Davis' book, his wife having resided here as a girl at the time of their occurrence. It gives a vivid picture of the life of the times.

The people of San Diego lived through an anxious and exciting experience during the war with Mexico. As the only important port in Southern California the town was of obvious strategic importance and both sides tried to hold it as a base of operations. The most conspicuous Americans identified with the war in the West, Stockton, Fremont and Kearny, participated in movements in this neighborhood, and the hardest battle which marked the progress of the struggle in California was fought at San Pasqual. The town itself was taken, lost, and taken again by the American forces before the new flag went up to stay. In the midst of it all the stream of social gaiety flowed on with only slight interruptions and the joy of it was actually increased, at times, by the presence of gallant soldiers from abroad.

The war ended, so far as California was concerned, with the battle of San Gabriel, near Los Angeles, January 9, 1847, and the treaty signed four days later by John C. Fremont for the United States and Andres Pico for Mexico. From that day henceforth San Diego was undisputed American soil.

Soon after the formal ending of the war in California the famous Mormon Battalion reached San Diego by way of Warner's. They camped for a few days at the old mission and the journal of their colonel supplies the following description of the historic spot as it appeared January 29, 1847:

"The building being dilapidated, and in use by some dirty Indians, I camped the battalion on the flat below. There are around us extensive gardens and vineyards, wells and cisterns, more or less fallen into decay and disorder; but also olive and picturesque date trees, flourishing and ornamental. There is no fuel for miles around, and the dependence for water is some rather distant pools in the sandy San Diego, which runs (sometimes) down to the ocean."

The Mormons remained but a short time at first, but were reorganized at Los Angeles and a company of seventy-eight returned to Fort Stockton, where it served as a garrison for a period of six months. They were under the command of Captain Jesse D. Hunter, whose wife presented him with a son having the distinction of being the first child, whose parents were both Americans, to be born in Old San Diego.

The constitutional convention met at Monterey in September 1849, Miguel de Pedrorena and Henry Hill representing San Diego. The Legislature met the following winter and launched the great American State of California. San Diego was the first county created under the act of February 2, 1850, and San Diego and Los Angeles made up the first judicial district. The first Legislature also provided for a custom house at San Diego. Two voting precincts were established under a law providing for the first elections in the new state, one at Old Town, the other at La Playa.

Following is a list of the first county officials elected: district attorney, Wm. C. Ferrell; county judge, John Hays; county clerk, Richard Rust; county attorney, Thos. W. Sutherland; county surveyor, Henry Clayton; sheriff, Agostin Haraszthy; recorder, Henry C. Matsell; assessor, Jose Antonio Estudillo; coroner, John Brown; treasurer, Juan Bandini. The first district judge was Oliver S. Witherby, who was appointed by the Legislature and not voted for at the election. For some reason Bandini refused to qualify as treasurer, and Philip Crosthwaite was appointed in his place.

San Diego was incorporated as a city by the Legislature of 1850 and the first election under the charter took place June 16 of that year. Joshua H. Bean was chosen the first mayor.

In 1851 a strong agitation began in favor of dividing the state and organizing Southern California as a separate territory. Public sentiment in San Diego supported the movement, and a committee was appointed to co-operate with Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Monterey in bringing it to fruition. In 1859 the Legislature submitted the question to a referendum vote in the six southern counties. It was carried by a two-thirds majority, but the legality of the vote was questioned, much opposition arose and the effort was abandoned.

The Panama Steamship Line was established in 1849 and San Diego became a port of call. By 1850 it had nearly 500 population, with as many more at La Playa and with a new settlement sprouting on the site of the present city. It was a period of fluctuating hopes and fortunes, but without important achievement. In the two decades which separated the war with Mexico from the beginning of the great Horton enterprise, the steamers brought many visitors as well as settlers who became citizens of note. Several of these men and women left interesting accounts which furnish a clear idea of the appearance of town and country and of the features of local life.

In 1850 the first steamship line between San Francisco and San Diego was established, touching at San Pedro, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and Monterey. The first line was owned by a San Franciscan named Wright. In 1856 he transferred it to the California Steam Naviga-[illegible] Company and it soon sold to the Pacific [illegible] Company. The first steamers [illegible] "Golden" and "Fremont," while [illegible] "Sonora" and "Uncle [illegible] Time. In later years the "Active" and "Orizaba" were [illegible] These were all [illegible] of small tonnage. As they approached the wharf at San Diego it was the custom to fire a cannon shot from the deck to give notice of their arrival.

The first [illegible] American built vessel used on San Diego [illegible] is believed to have been the one brought [illegible] in 1850 by Lieutenant Cave J. Couts.

August 13, 1851, [illegible] one of these historically important "firsts." The schooner "Loma," the first vessel ever built upon San Diego Bay, was launched. It was built at the shipyard of Captain James Keating and was christened, as the "Herald" informs us, "in due and ancient form."

The first wreck at San Diego was that of the pilot boat "Fanny," the night of December 24, 1851. It had been out cruising for the "Northerner," was anchored just outside Ballast Point and, a gale rising, was driven ashore and lost. The only other wreck during this period of which there is any record was that of the "Golden Gate," Captain Isham, in January 1854.

Picnic Date—Plans for the annual spring picnic at the University Farm, Davis, Yolo County, April 23, are already under way.

Educators To Meet—The California High-school Principals' Association will meet in convention at Sacramento City, April 11 to 15.

FIFTIETH N. S. GRAND PARLOR DRAWS NEAR

SUBORDINATE PARLORS OF THE GOLDEN West will this month (April) elect their delegates to the Fiftieth Grand Parlor, which will be in session at San Pedro, Los Angeles County, the week of May 9. When delegates are elected, there are likely to appear a flock of candidates for Grand Parlor offices, particularly the seven Grand Trusteeships.

The fact that four of the present members of the Board of Grand Trustees will be candidates for higher office at the San Pedro session, and that Grand Trustee Isadore H. Reuter (Yosemite No. 24) of Merced City will, so he informs The Grizzly Bear, not be a candidate for any office, assures an excellent opportunity for those who are seeking Grand Parlor office honors to gratify their desires. The writer would like to see the mining and northern counties' Parlors take advantage of this situation. They have always been, and still are, the backbone of the Order, have excellent material and should have their rightful place in the Grand Parlor "sun."

Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 is diligently at work with its plans for the housing and entertainment of the Grand Parlor attendants. The bigger the crowd, the better pleased will be the San Pedro boys. There are endless accommodations, and the entertainment features that are being arranged will fully satisfy the most exacting and critical. So, plan to be in San Pedro, either as a member of or a visitor to the Fiftieth Grand Parlor, the week of May 9.

Look in the San Pedro news section of this issue of The Grizzly Bear and you will find additional Grand Parlor news of interest. Also the names of Sepulveda Parlor's members making up the various committees. If you desire any particular information and want a prompt reply, communicate with Secretary James V. Carroll, 101 West Seventh street, San Pedro—not Los Angeles, as the Federal Postoffice Department is repeatedly calling attention to the fact that San Pedro is a separate and distinct postoffice.

GRAND PARLOR OFFICES.

There is nothing "in the air" to indicate other than that, at the San Pedro Grand Parlor, Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson (Santa Clara No. 100) of Santa Clara City will be elected Grand President; Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson (Rincon No. 72) of San Francisco, Grand First Vice-president; Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge (Carquinez No. 205) of Martinez, Grand Second Vice-president. Grand Secretary John T. Regan (South San Francisco No. 157) of San Francisco is not likely to be opposed for re-election. By virtue of retiring as Grand President at the close of the Fiftieth Grand Parlor, Hilliard E. Welch (Lodi No. 18) of Lodi will automatically become the Junior Past Grand President.

Four candidates have their hats in the Grand Third Vice-presidency ring, and there will be no additional candidate for that office unless an unsuspected "dark hat" should appear to make the contest more interesting. The four announced candidates are: Grand Trustee John T. Newell (Los Angeles No. 45) of Los Angeles City; Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew (San Francisco No. 49) of San Francisco; Grand Trustee John T. Skelton (Sunset No. 26) of Sacramento City; Grand Trustee Seth Millington (Colusa No. 69) of Gridley, Butte county.

Another candidate for Grand Trustee has come to light, President Frand Lane of Fresno No. 25. That makes, to date, four seekers for the seven places on the board, as follows: Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific No. 10) of San Francisco, incumbent; Frank M. Lane (Fresno No. 25) of Fresno City; Grand Marshal J. Hartley Russell (Stanford No. 76) of San Francisco; Richard M. Hamb (Piedmont No. 120) of Oakland.

For Grand Inside Sentinel, Grand Outside Sentinel A. W. Garcelon (Arcata No. 20) of Arcata is a candidate.

The Grizzly Bear has communicated with other "rumored" candidates for the several elective offices, but has received responses only from those here referred to.—C.M.H.

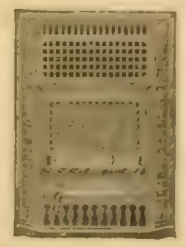
SITE OF FIRST AMERICAN FLAG RAISING IN CALIFORNIA VISITED.

Hollister—The annual pilgrimage to Fremont Peak was made March 7, about 150 making the ascent. The Boy Scouts hiked to the top from San Juan, several parties made the trip on horseback, while motorists found the road in good condition despite recent rains.

At one o'clock, Old Glory was hoisted to the top of the seventy-five foot pole during the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the assemblage. Brief talks were made by George H. Moore, president Fremont Memorial Association; Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs of Copa de Oro Parlor, N.D.G.W.; Past Grand President Thomas Flint of Fremont Parlor, N.S.G.W., and Professor Goodwin, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., of Mills College, who is gathering data to correct the story of the great pathfinder's exploit now being recorded in official state history.

As the atmosphere was unusually clear on the Hollister side, the view of the San Juan Valley was magnificent. Many compliments were extended to the San Benito County Parlors of Native Daughters and Native Sons for the splendid appearance of the bronze tablet installed two years ago in honor of the first raising of the American Flag upon California soil.

REDWOOD CARAVAN FROM NORTH TO INVADE SOUTH.



During April, a caravan of automobiles from the "Redwood Empire" will wend its way southward to Los Angeles and San Diego via the coast route, returning via the valley route, according to plans of the Redwood Empire Association.

The caravan will move on a definite pre-arranged schedule, like a train, and be in charge of a grand marshal, with banners, etc. The members will, among themselves, work up a series of vaudeville skits and various novelty acts, in addition to the speakers, to entertain those along the routes of travel. The trekkers will carry their own orchestra and other equipment. They will even publish their own morning newspaper, "The Morning Caravansary," enroute.

Municipal Bonds—Long Beach, Los Angeles County, has voted $2,378,000 bonds for water department improvements and $1,250,000 bonds for municipal gas extensions.

Orange County's Big Year—1926 was the greatest agricultural year in the history of Orange County, farmers receiving $29,968,060.02 for their products.

Park Bonds—Wilmington, Los Angeles County, has voted $278,000 bonds to acquire the old Banning homestead for a public park.

In Memoriam

LOUIS JACOB HARRIS.

Louis Jacob Harris, member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 Native Sons of the Golden West, passed on to the Grand Parlor on High January 31, 1927. He was born October 31, 1874, at Taylorsville, Plumas County, son of Michael and Cecilia Harris, Pioneers of California. When five years old his parents went to Monterey, California, to live and he attended the public schools at Monterey. Up to his twentieth year he worked for his father in a mercantile business. He leaves a brother, Jack Harris of Wilmington, California, a member of Monterey Parlor No. 75 N.S.G.W.

Twenty-seven years have passed since Brother Harris arrived in San Pedro. He was for a long time engaged in various port projects and as a deep-sea diver, and about seventeen years ago established the first automobile agency at that port. Louis J. Harris had acquired the Spanish language and spoke it fluently, and it was natural that the old Spanish people both in Monterey and San Pedro loved him. He was possessed of a strong religious disposition and was always loyal to his faith, and never evaded a duty, whether public or private.

His surviving relatives, friends and acquaintances will indeed miss his strong personality and his genial manner. We, his brothers in the great fraternity of the Native Sons of the Golden West, extend to his bereaved and surviving family and friends our deepest sympathy.

HENRY CHARLES STUBBE.

Henry Charles Stubbe, member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 Native Sons of the Golden West, passed on to the Grand Parlor on High February 17, 1927. He was born June 25, 1864, at Chili Gulch, near Carson Hill, Calaveras County. Mrs. Margaret Jost, his pioneer mother, settled at Warner Ranch, Morongo Valley, San Diego County, about 1873.

Brother Stubbe grew up and worked on Arizona ranches at Banning and San Bernardino, and in 1902 settled in Los Angeles. He associated himself with the Union Ice Company and worked twelve years or more for that concern. He leaves behind him his beloved wife, Mrs. Anna Stubbe, who is a niece of Pioneer Andrew Smith of Burbank—whose original farmhouse and windmill still stand at the foothills of Burbank—his son Henry C. Stubbe Jr. of Ramona Parlor, and two daughters. He was one of the few to whom it has been given to witness the growth and development of Southern California, especially Hollywood, from a small country place to its metropolitan size. It was a source of pride to him, as well as to many of us, and he frequently addressed his friends in regard to the tremendous growth of Los Angeles County.

His surviving relatives, friends and acquaintances will indeed miss his strong personality, his genial manner and kindliness of soul. We, his brothers in the great fraternity of the Native Sons of the Golden West, extend to his bereaved and surviving family and friends our deepest sympathy.

HISTORIC DEADMAN'S ISLAND TO DISAPPEAR

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

HISTORIC DEADMAN'S ISLAND, RUGged landmark at the entrance of the harbor at San Pedro, is soon to be moved away. Within a few weeks the United States Board of Army Engineers will call for bids from dredging companies for its removal. The island must give way to a plan for widening the port channel and at the same time furnish material for a new sixty-two acre tract of filled land in the Los Angeles outer harbor district.

By widening the channel at this entrance point, the last narrow place in the fairway will be removed, giving a uniform width to the passage of 1,000 feet from the outer harbor to the turning basin in the Wilmington district. On the reclaimed land the Federal Government will erect a quarantine station, public health service hospital and probably a new immigration station.

The entire cost of moving the island, building new rock retaining walls and changing beacon lights will be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000. Funds have been allotted for the work from the national rivers and harbors appropriations of the Federal Congress. Two million feet of earth will be moved under the contract to be let by the board of army engineers.

Deadman's Island is variously mentioned in California history as the burial place of unknown seamen, of an early-day Indian chief, and of the dead of the battle of Dominguez, an important engagement in the transition of California from Mexican rule to that of the United States. Richard Henry Dana, in his "Two Years Before the Mast," described the little promontory in connection with the unceremonious burial of an unfortunate seaman.

TWO BIG EVENTS ON NATIVE SONS' CALENDAR—APRIL 6 AND 10.

The $50 gold slug, symbol of the highly inflated but picturesque finances of California in the days of '49, has been adopted as the pendant of the 1927 Grand Parlor badge for delegates. By its adoption, Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. wins the $300 donation promised by Past Grand President William I. Traeger. The Los Angeles County sheriff was the speaker and honored guest of the Parlor the evening of March 10. His words were delivered with the same vigor as displayed when he plunged for touchdowns as the fullback of the Stanford University football squad, more than a score of years ago.

More events have been scheduled for the early part of April in Sepulveda Parlor's final drive for funds to stage the Grand Parlor session of the Native Sons of the Golden West in San Pedro in May.

April 6 a boxing show will be conducted at the Wilmington Bowl.

April 10 has been set as the date for another barbecue at White Point, in Sepulveda Park. At this event the program will be in charge of J. J. Kaveney, heading the Wilmington members of the Parlor. J. B. Alvardo and a staff of ten barbecue chefs have been named to broil the meat and mix the chili.

Both of these events should be liberally patronized by California South Native Sons, for the revenue derived from them will aid Sepulveda in providing entertainment for the Grand Parlor.

Under the leadership of James W. Mee, general convention chairman, and William F. Durr, president of Sepulveda Parlor, all details for the Grand Parlor session in San Pedro, May 9 to 14, have been worked out. William Wrigley's steamer "Avalon" has been chartered for the Santa Catalina Island trip, May 10, while the grand ball, housing, entertainment, barbecue, decoration, badge and other committees are working hard also.

These are the clues which Fleming Stone was given to work with. Amateur detectives, here is your chance! Can you solve a mystery which even Fleming Stone, great detective though he be, failed to deduce?

"SPANISH ALTA CALIFORNIA."

By Alberta Johnston Denis; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $3.50.

This is a history of "Alta," or higher, Spanish California, the real California of today, beginning with its discovery, in 1542 by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, down to the year 1822, when Alta California ceased to exist as a dependency of Spain. Spanish exploration, conquest and rule are the leading themes of the history.

The story of the dauntless courage and the brave endurance of not only the Spanish leader and mission father, but the common soldier as well, is the predominating note. Cultured caballeros, court gallants, gentle patient padres and rough and ready soldiers bore starvation, pestilence and endless hardships all for the glory of Spain and the christianizing of the Indians.

Excerpts from the ancient diaries of Cabrillo, Father Junipero Serra, Vizcaino, who discovered and named the islands of Catalina and San Clemente, and many others give the book a vivid graphicness. The story of California is a romantic one, fraught with heroism.

"Spanish Alta California" is doubly valuable as a source for research work and as a complete and thorough exposition of Spanish dominion, with its consequent influence upon California history and traditions.

"COMRADE JILL."

By Herbert Adams, J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Michael Chard after an absence of two years, finds the London of 1931 a [illegible] city divided against itself. The Labor Party scheme for complete control by a general strike, while Parliament stands deserted, to maintain governmental authority. A reluctant revival, which enthralls [illegible], contributes to the general restlessness and excitement.

Three men stand out from the [illegible] as symbolical of the contending forces—David Durrant, labor leader, Lord Eaglebridge, [illegible] and head of a syndicate of newspapers, and Julian Grimthorpe, evangelist. Durrant, Grimthorpe and Michael love Jill, Lord Eaglebridge's only daughter.

Event follows event until a crisis in affairs causes the bubble to burst. Jill Eaglebridge's disappearance stirs all London. It is feared that she has been kidnaped by members of the Labor Party, as a direct means of revenge upon Lord Eaglebridge. Jill, in the meantime, is held prisoner in an insane asylum by a fanatical doctor. The three lovers, Julian, David and Michael, join in the search for the missing girl. One of them finds her, and wins her love.

"Comrade Jill" is a story which speculates lightly in the possibilities of 1931, but invests heavily in the safe, age-old appeal of the love theme.

In Memoriam

MARTHA E. RUSSELL.

Whereas Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to summon to the Heavenly Parlor on High our beloved sister, Martha E. Russell, and whereas, Chabolla Parlor No. 171 Native Daughters of the Golden West, lost a worthy member, so be it

Resolved, That we at this time convey to the family of our sister these words of sympathy and condolence that will brighten their path and leave with them the loving thought that their loved one carries with her the love, respect and admiration of those with whom she was so closely associated, and it is with this thought and purpose that we recall the many bright and happy moments of friendly handclasp and the happiness given our sister by her association with us as a Native Daughter, let us thank our Heavenly Father for that thought and be it further resolved, that the charter of Chabolla Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the "Galt Herald" and The Grizzly Bear, and that a copy be spread in full upon the minutes of this Parlor.

Once again our ranks are broken by the hand no power

Galt, January 26, 1927

The Angel of Death has entered the [illegible] Carmelo Parlor and taken from the [illegible] dearly beloved sister and charter member Matilda Haubrich

Whereas, In the death of this [illegible] husband has lost a devoted companion, the [illegible] son a good mother, and El Carmelo Parlor a valued [illegible] who was ever a true and loyal Native Daughter of the Golden West, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in reverent resignation to the will of the Almighty Father we mourn what seems to be the untimely death of our beloved sister and extend to her deepest sympathy to the bereaved husband and her loved ones, and be it further resolved, that [illegible] spread in full upon the minutes [illegible] be sent to the family of the deceased and one to the Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication and that the charter of our Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days.

Sincerely and fraternally yours in P D E A,

MARY A. MANUEL.

Whereas, In view of the loss we have sustained by the decease of our friend and sister, Mary A. Manuel, and of the still greater loss sustained by those who were nearer and dearer to her, by the loss we are impressed with the lesson of the uncertainty of human life

No one hears the doors open,
So gentle is the call;
Like falling leaves from roses,
One by one our loved ones fall."

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of our departed sister to say that, regretting her removal from our midst, we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and esteem, and our Order has lost a loyal Native Daughter of the Golden West, therefore, be it resolved, that the charter of our Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, that a copy be pasted in the records of Ruby Parlor No. 46 N D G W, and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. EDNA SARE.

To the Officers and Members of Dardanelle Parlor No. 66 N D G W—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Edna Sare, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, It has pleased God, in His divine wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved sister Edna Sare, and whereas, in the death of Sister Sare Dardanelle Parlor has lost one of its honored members and her family a devoted wife and mother, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father we do sincerely mourn the loss of Sister Sare, we tenderly condole with the bereaved family in this hour of affliction and commend them for consolation to Him who doeth all things well and be it further resolved, that the charter of this Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Parlor, that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased sister and a copy to The Grizzly Bear Magazine.

MARY ANN GIBSON.

We the committee appointed by Eltapome Parlor No. 55 N D G W, respectfully submit the following resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister, Mary Ann Gibson

"We cannot say, and we will not say
That she is dead, she is just away
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand.
She has wandered into an unknown land."

Whereas, Our sister has been called to her Heavenly Home and our Parlor has lost one of its most faithful members, be it

Resolved, That her family have our heartfelt sympathy and the hope that they may find consolation, each in the sisters, in the memories of her good deeds, her loving kindness and charity to all, may the memory of [illegible] presence linger with us all and be a help and [illegible] therefore be it further resolved, that our [illegible] Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of [illegible] and that these resolutions be spread upon the [illegible] that a copy be sent to the bereaved husband and [illegible] to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication

BIG N.S. CLASS INITIATION.

Everything is ready for the big class initiation, in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, sponsored by all the Native Son Parlors of San Francisco. One hundred and eighty applications had been filed March 19, and it is predicted the class will number 300. The ceremonies will be held at Native Sons' Building, April 2.

The race for supplying the largest number of candidates is at this writing between Twin Peaks No. 214, South San Francisco No. 157, Castro No. 232, Stanford No. 76 and California No. 1, they having, respectively, 30, 22, 17, 12 and 10 candidates in waiting. To stimulate interest five prizes are offered: to the Parlor producing the most candidates, and to the Parlor in each of four classes, segregated as to membership, having the most initiates. No Parlor will be awarded more than one prize.

Following competitive tests two teams have been selected to exemplify the ritual on this occasion. The second team was provided for, in case any one of the first team is unable to attend. The teams are composed of the following:

First—Eugene O Donnell (Dolores No. 208), junior past president; Daniel Nilan (South San Francisco No. 157), president; Harmon D. Skillin (Castro No. 232), first vice-president; Harry A. Sanford (Precita No. 187), second vice-president; Val. Clement (Dolores No. 208), third vice-president; Jack Reid (South San Francisco No. 157, marshal; Theodore Portello (South San Francisco No. 157), inside sentinel.

Second—August Camoriani (San Francisco No. 49), junior past president; Arthur Seyden (Golden Gate No. 29), president; R. DeMartini (San Francisco No. 49), first vice-president; Fred Squires Jr. (South San Francisco No. 157), second vice-president; Harry Maisey (South San Francisco No. 157), third vice-president; D. F. Roche (Precita No. 187), marshal; J. Faseno (San Francisco No. 49), inside sentinel.

PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN GRIZZLY BEAR.

"Editor Grizzly Bear—In a recent issue of The Grizzly Bear Magazine, Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W. advertised for sale the drums formerly used by its drum corps, now disbanded. Several offers for the drums were received by readers of your valuable magazine, and I am pleased to say that they were sold to Santa Rosa Parlor No. 28.

"I take this opportunity to recommend The Grizzly Bear Magazine to all who may desire to use its advertising columns. With best wishes for the continued success of the magazine, ANNIVERSARY DINNER.

March 12, forty years ago, was the exact date of the institution of Alta Parlor No. 3 N.D.G.W. A banquet to honor the occasion was attended by about sixty, nineteen of them charter members.

President Anna Thuesen was the toastmistress and Elizabeth Douglas the chairman of the arrangements committee. After dinner speeches, music, dancing and an entertainment made the evening pass all too rapidly.

AN OUTSTANDING EVENT.

Grand President Pearl Lamb officially visited Buena Vista Parlor No. 68 N.D.G.W. March 17, and the occasion will be long remembered. Accompanying her were: Past Grand Presidents Genevieve Baker and Mary Bell, Grand Vice-president Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand Inside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson, Grand Organist Lillian B. Troy, Grand Trustees Sallie R. Thaler, Mae E. Edwards and Anna Thuesen, District Deputies Agnes Curry, Isabelle Nielson, Agnes Troy, Marguerite Kaufman, Myrtle Ross, Marguerite Sullivan, Dolly Bradley and Elizabeth Muller. The hall was impressively decorated in green for the occasion and the subdued lights added to the solemnity of the work.

Four candidates were initiated, the officers of the Parlor being highly congratulated for their splendid entrance march and ritual rendition. Grand President Lamb made an inspiring address on co-operation and service, and each of the visiting grand officers followed with brief remarks. Mrs. Lamb was the recipient of beautiful gifts, and D.D.G.P. Curry was also remembered. Refreshments were served to about 175 visitors by a committee of the Parlor headed by Mrs. Mary L. Growney.

Buena Vista is proud to number among its members two Past Grand Presidents. Miss Amanda Buhman is the president and Mrs. Jennie Greene the secretary, the latter having held that important office since the institution of No. 68.

ANNIVERSARY COMMEMORATED.

Keith Parlor No. 137 N.D.G.W. commemorated its twenty-fourth institution anniversary with a dinner-dance March 17. The table decorations and place favors were suggestive of Saint Patrick's Day. More than seventy-five members and their friends were in attendance. The Misses Gladys Cruise and Gertrude La Fortune were in charge of the affair.

TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W. will celebrate its fortieth institution anniversary with a dinner-dance April 30. Elaborate arrangements are being made to make the event the finest ever given by the Parlor.

Bay City was instituted April 13, 1887, by Dr. Charles W. Decker, then Grand President, and he attends every festive occasion of the Parlor. Living charter members who have signified their intention of attending the anniversary dinner-dance include: A. D. Abrams, Phillip I. Figel, Morris Garren, N. L. Houser, Sam Hyman, Henry J. Harris, Emanuel Levy, George H. Myers, H. L. Polack, Benjamin Frankenberg.

President Elmer E. Robinson has appointed the following committee to look after the arrangements: Isadore Lindeman (chairman), Eugene W. Levy (vice-chairman), Max Edward Licht (secretary-treasurer), Samuel Stern (chairman entertainment), Dr. P. H. Luttrell (chairman reception), Maurice Borden, John P. Lynch, Harry L. Gunzburger, Sam H. Levy, Thomas R. Hamilton, J. A. Ephraim (executive committee).

BLOSSOM TIME SEASON CALLS.

The lure of blossom-time and wild-flower season is calling motorists to the open road these days, as California valleys and hillsides don springtime's beautiful colors. The annual migration of California motorists to the blossom-laden orchards and flower-filled fields has become a fixed seasonal event on the state's touring calendar. So many inquiries have been received at the touring bureau offices of the California State Automobile Association as to where the best displays of blossoms or wild flowers may be found that the association has compiled the following report:

Santa Clara Valley: Prune tree blossoms are out and the valley is taking on its famous spring coloring.

Santa Cruz and vicinity: Poppies found along the coast road and numerous varieties of other wild flowers further back in the hills.

San Rafael district: Great variety of wild flowers on the road between Alto and San Clemente. These include mission bells, wild pansies, baby-blue-eyes, buttercups, indian paint brush, wild iris, poppies, johnny-jump-ups and quantities of fern.

"IRISH TURKEY" ATTRACTS.

South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. had its annual Saint Patrick's Day celebration March 16, and a splendid banquet and entertainment were enjoyed by the two hundred members and many visitors who were present. "Irish turkey," corned beef and cabbage, appropriate to the occasion, was the chief dish upon the menu card.

Grand Secretary John T. Regan was the toastmaster, and among the speakers were Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Trustee Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald, Grand Marshal J. Hartley Russell, D.D.G.P. Harmon D. Skillin. All delivered stirring addresses.

The entertainment features were furnished by members of South San Francisco's famous minstrel troupe—George Nilan, Lloyd Minehan, Bert Cuevas, Ted Andrus, Lloyd Dornell, Ed Keating, Carl Prignitz and Jack Ryan—assisted by C. Lunney of Castro Parlor No. 232.

AERONAUTICAL CONFERENCE.

A statewide aeronautical conference will be held in San Francisco May 6, 7 and 8, simultaneously with the opening of the local municipal airport, according to R. E. Fisher, chairman of the aeronautical committee of the California Development Association.

The aeronautical conference will constitute a complete review of the commercial aviation situation in the State of California and will carry an educational note to the businessmen relative to the dependability and safety of airplanes for use in commercial and passenger transport.

The program further includes an aviation show which will be given at the new municipal field, if the plans for the opening are completed at that date. Every type of plane now being manufactured in the United States, including the seaplane, the landplane and the amphibian, will be shown.

GRIZZLY BEAR CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

In Memoriam

MARGARET KANE.

To the Officers and Members of Mission Parlor No. 227 N.D.G.W. Dear Sisters: The angel of death has removed from our midst one of our charter members, Sister Margaret Kane. We tenderly sympathize with her dear relatives in this, their hour of bereavement. The following resolutions were made and adopted.

Whereas, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to summon to the great Grand Parlor on High our dearly beloved sister, Margaret Kane; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in heartfelt sympathy with her bereaved relatives, we can only offer our poor condolence and pray that the remembrance of our Father's glorious promise of life eternal will assuage their grief and bring them to a full realization of a joyful reunion with their loved ones in the great hereafter, where sorrows cease and peace and happiness remain; be it further resolved, that the charter of our Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved after the crime. Great excitement prevailed and when, a few days later, Jose Chamalis and Franco Arata were arrested in Watsonville, partly confessed their guilt and were brought to Santa Cruz, a vigilante committee was quickly organized, took the two prisoners from the custody of the sheriff and hung them from the San Lorenzo River bridge. Chamalis was hung within a few yards of where he was born; while but 21 years old, he had served a state prison term. In their confessions the men said they killed De Forrest to get money to go to a circus; they secured $8 from his pockets.

April 26 Police Officer C. J. Coots, in San Francisco, was taking an obstreperous prisoner named Wilson to jail by holding him with a grip on the coat collar. A pal of Wilson's slipped up behind and, placing a revolver at the back of the officer's neck, sent a bullet into his brain, killing him instantly.

April 6 James McGough, a passenger on the steamboat "Julia" from Sacramento to San Francisco, was intoxicated. He had a six-shooter which he displayed frequently and a fellow-passenger advised him to remove the cartridges before reaching the city or he would be arrested for carrying a weapon. He undertook to do so, but fired one of them. The bullet struck a German passenger reading nearby and killed him.

The Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, boot and shoe factory was burned April 25, causing a $30,000 loss.

Egbert & Co.'s flour mill at Tulare City burned the night of April 25, with a $50,000 loss.

A fire in San Jose, Santa Clara County, burned part of a business block April 9, causing $30,000 loss.

"THE FATHER OF CHICO" WINS NATIVE DAUGHTER PRIZE.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell Parlor No. 168 N.D.G.W., under the able leadership of President Myrtle Bernardo, has been initiating classes of candidates every meeting night. The officers made their first appearance in their new white dresses February 24, when Grand President Pearl Lamb paid her official visit. February 17 the members of the Parlor provided and served refreshments to Chico Parlor No. 21 N.S.G.W. at its class initiation.

Miss Alice Cummings of the Chico high-school won the $5 prize offered by No. 168 for the best essay on the founding of the city. It is entitled "The Father of Chico" and deals with the life of General Bidwell, California Pioneer. Death has again visited the Parlor and taken Edith Bissett. Although a member less than a year she was beloved by all. A husband and two small sons mourn her passing.

IMPORTANT MAMMAL DISCOVERY MADE IN KERN COUNTY.

Although most animal remains dug up from the famous asphalt beds at Rancho La Brea near Los Angeles and at McKittrick, Kern County, are corroborative in their evidence concerning life as it existed in California and Western America a million or more years ago, proof has been uncovered that the ancient traps did not originate at exactly the same time.

A bulletin has been issued by the University of California Press over the names of Chester Stock and E. L. Furlong of the university's department of paleontology giving a description of a sheep-like animal which is one of the two species which have been found at McKittrick but never at Los Angeles.

The authors say: "Although the record of mammalian life at Rancho La Brea is practically complete, it is noteworthy that no traces of the [illegible] have been found. With the continuation of excavations in the asphalt deposit of McKittrick, Kern County, the discovery of one of these ruminants by Charles H. Sternberg adds a new and important [illegible] to the list of mammals recorded from that horizon."

Animals similar to the latest find, of the Preptoceras Eucrotaphus group, have been found previously in caves of California North, but never before in the asphalt beds where so many animals were sucked to their death in ages gone by, and their bones preserved for science to study.

The sheep-like animal is the second example of unexpected discoveries in the McKittrick bed. Some time ago the remains of a llama, different from anything found at Rancho La Brea, but similar to others found in Pleistocene period deposits elsewhere, was uncovered.

promises something extraordinarily good in the way of entertainment—a five-dollar show for $1.50, the admission fee. It will be held in the auditorium of Patriotic Hall, the seating capacity of which is but 750. So, better get your seats, if you don't want to miss this event. The womenfolks are especially invited. Refreshments will follow the show, and everybody will receive a present. Ralph is staging some splendid monthly birthday parties—the best programs presented in Ramona for a long time—but he says the April 29 one will eclipse all past efforts and will prove to the doubters that "it can be done."

Interest in athletics is at a high pitch in Ramona. First Vice-president Carl Mueller is in charge, and is organizing several teams.

EVERYBODY WAS HAPPY.

There was a big crowd at the March 16 dance of Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. and everybody was happy, particularly during the "lemon" dance. Saint Patrick's favors were distributed and refreshments were served.

April 20 the Parlor will give another dance. If you want to make a small investment of seventy-five cents for a big evening of pleasure, be on hand. April 13 Glendale will have initiation, several candidates being in waiting.

"WILD NELL" APPEARS.

The March 9 card party of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., in charge of the Misses Holy and Ruiz, was a great success. The dance of March 23, directed by Isabella Scheck, was well attended and greatly enjoyed. March 16 two candidates were initiated, following which the Star Film Company released its initial production. As the announcer, Kathryn Ronan, read, the play proceeded, with music by Juanita Lopez. "Wild Nell, the Pet of the Plains," was the title of the spectacular melodrama and the costuming was truly in keeping with the wild West. The show was greatly appreciated and No. 124's members are anxious to have the company appear again. President Calisto DeSoto and Mary McAnany represented the Parlor at the March 11 meeting of the Interparlor Committee.

Los Angeles' homeless children's sewing circle, under the chairmanship of Gertrude Allen, made a fine report March 16 and brought forth forty finished garments for Secretary Annie L. Adair of the homeless children's committee to take to the Allen Junior Home, where babies relinquished to the committee are kept until placed in homes for adoption. A rising vote of thanks, accompanied by applause, was given Chairman Allen for the work accomplished.

Los Angeles will have its regular monthly card party April 13, with Amelia McGinnis in charge. April 26 the Parlor's twenty-sixth birthday party will be featured; Kathryn Ronan, Jennie Raymond and Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas compose the committee in charge. The regular monthly dance of April 27, in charge of Daisy Voigt and Pauline Hibbert, will be a sport affair. The Parlor is planning for its annual bazar in May. Grace Haven is the chairman, and the following will have charge of booths: Calisto and Theresa DeSoto, country store; Clara Bird, bakery; Mary McAnany, punch; Jennie Raymond, fish pond.

presenting this to the State Legislature. Miss Stoermer, who is also chairman of the history and landmarks division of the Federation, Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman and Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes were instrumental in having Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 17 and Senate Bill No. 652 introduced at this session of the Legislature, naming Cabrillo and Fremont as California's representatives in Statuary Hall, Washington, D. C.

"There is another bill pending in the Legislature suggesting the name of Luther Burbank and when the matter came up for discussion, many other notable names were mentioned, such as Sutter, Stockton, Marshall, Mrs. Stanford and Mrs. Hearst. These measures were referred to the finance committee of the Senate, which was unable to agree with the suggestions submitted. As much discussion had been raised by the Board of Grand Officers of the Native Sons of the Golden West, a conference was arranged for. After much intensive thought and discussion, it was the concensus of opinion of the members of the Native Sons, members of the Senate committee, the state chairman and the former district chairman that the names of Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King be substituted. Inasmuch as the N.D.G.W. Grand Parlor had endorsed Serra and King for the Hall of Fame at the University of New York, we assumed there would be no objection to these men being placed in Statuary Hall. Therefore, in lieu of the names which had been suggested by us, we deemed it advisable to eliminate Fremont and Cabrillo and recommend that the names of Serra and King be substituted.

"We earnestly ask the Subordinate Parlors to contact their local friends and representatives of both of the houses of the Legislature, assuring them of our interest in these measures. By united effort we shall be successful in getting this matter over.

A VOICE FROM THE LONG AGO

OLLOWING IS AN EXACT COPY OF A letter written from Sutter Fort—now in the center of the corporate limits of Sacramento City, Capital of California.—April 8, 1849, by Pioneer Charles W. Cook to his brother, John Cook, at Nancket, Massachusetts. The well-preserved original was loaned The Grizzly Bear by Mrs. Anna ook-Willey, a daughter of the writer residing Alameda City.

Charles W. Cook came to California in 1849 the second trip of the "Oregon." In 1851 he turned East and brought his family to the and of Gold. For years he engaged in the nking business in San Francisco, under the m name of Palmer, Cook & Co., and there he ed in 1892:

"Sutter Fort, April 8, 1849.

"Dear Brother: We arrived here at the Emrkadero or landing at half past four yesterday d shall start for the mill, which is 48 miles om here, and from there we shall go to the ddle Fork, which is about 12 miles farther er the mountains. The best diggings have en found at this fork. By all we can learn the erage digging of each man for the season is ty dollars per day. We have seen gold until I n almost sick. Everybody that has been in the untry two months is rich, and transportation so enormously high that everything is dear to that have just arrived. We walked on to the rt, which is two miles from where we enmped last night, and as we had business at e ferry, two or three miles farther, we took tea the hotel and paid one dollar and fifty cents r each for one tea.

"I will give you some of the California prices the latter part of the sheet. Everything is enty enough but the freight puts the cost We got brought up here for 25 dollars ch and 5 dollars per hundred for our freight d baggage, and our captain made a $1,000 ear on his trip with what he carries down. He s got a little vessel of 15 tons burthen which bought the 22 of February for $5,000, two ousand of which he paid down, and has made ur trips and cleared his little vessel and has t nearly one thousand dollars clear. You n buy any articles here to take to the mines tick, as money is so plenty they think a man n't be dishonest. They likewise leave everyng outside their houses and tents without inking of watching them.

"After getting our tea at the Fort we called er to see a Mr. Baily to buy some horses. He es over on the American Fork, about three lles across the prairie from the Fort. We und him in his tent on the bank of the river ith his three boys. He is a noble fellow from ississippi; has been a Methodist minister. He ld me he came over the mountains last summer ith his three boys. They are 12—14—16 years d. Went into the mines destitute of everything d went to work. They threw their heaps toether for three months and the average was ty dollars per day. He then came down here ith their capital and bought teams, paying 300 llars per yoke for oxen and $1,000 for his cart d started teaming. Finding that there was a od deal of traveling over the American he ought an old scow, stretched a rope across the ream and started a ferry boat, and he told me at he tended his boat alone yesterday and his ceipts were $250. He takes our baggage up to e mill for us for 20 dollars per hundred. He as five teams and they will take 2,500 lbs. each a load. He can always have a freight load of mber at the same rates. He told me that he id his teamster, a young man of nineteen years d, seven hundred and fifty dollars per month d found, or $9,000 per year. What do you ink of that? He likewise pays the board of o of his hired men at the Fort, six dollars per y for each, or 42 dollars per week.

"I am afraid you will not believe these stories. I hardly would have done so myself. It makes me vexed to think how we have drudged away at Nantucket for the last year, while boys out here have in the same time, say 12 months, cleared their $12,000 a piece, with nothing but their sheath knives and tin pan. I wish you were here. You have no need to mine it, money is as common as dirt. While we were eating our supper one fellow got up from the table and pulled out his bag of dust and the landlord took out his scales, and they weighed out for his board at 15 dollars per oz. down weight, the same as we would weigh shot at home.

"Labor is 16 dollars per day up here, and the storekeepers are as independent as you please. They have no settled price for anything, each one asking what he pleases for his articles, and all have plenty of customers. No one thinks of asking a price, but we Yankees just over.

"It will cost us but little short of $2,000 from Francisco to the mines and it may cost more. We bought a whale boat coming up the river of some Oregon chap for 300 dollars, thinking at the time that we should mine on the Yuba River, and we find we can't get it up to the Middle Fork. We shall sell it here for six or seven hundred dollars. Have been offered six for it.

"We shall buy 2 or 3 horses to pack our stuff, or plunder as it is called here, over the mountain from the mill. Shall have to pay for a horse that could be bought one year ago for 25 dollars now $200 or $300 and cheap at that. Indeed, you come to look it over everything is cheap here. Mr. Baily told me last night that he found he had no meat in his house. He sent one of the boys out to the Fort for a ham. Well, he paid just an ounce for it and it made them just 3 meals.

"I have had the curiostity to enquire the price of some articles as we came up the line and will give you the price at San Francisco and here: Coffee, at San Francisco 8c to 16c, Fort 16c to 33c; tea, at San Francisco 60c to $1.50; Fort $1 to $1.50; sugar, at San Francisco 14c to 25c, Fort 20c to 38c; flour, at San Francisco $14, Fort, $30; water pails (wood), at San Francisco $1.50, Fort $5; tin pails (small), at San Francisco 50c, Fort $1.25; rice, at San Francisco 8c to 12c, Fort 15c to 25c; pork, at San Francisco $35, Fort $60; $60; beef, at San Francisco $15, Fort $25.

"And as you go up farther the price increas according to the freight. We shall make arrang ments with Mr. Baily to buy our plunder that may want here and when his team comes out the mill to send it out to us and we shall sett with him. Pistols are selling at large prices. man that came up with us was showing a pa of pistols to the captain of our launch and I offered him 50 dollars for them. They were cheap pistol, cost in N. Y. $5.50 pr.

"John, you may rely upon all I have writt you as I have taken particular pains to get co rect information. The country is magnificen The Sacramento is the most beautiful that I ev saw, country well wooded with oak mostly ar sycamore. Some of the borough oak opening the river are splendid. I hope the boys, Jo George and Ira will all come out here. I a satisfied that this is the place for making mon at whatever business you can turn your han Everyone that came out with us on the 'Orego were sadly disappointed at San Francisco. Th expected to see a larger place. And those th have goods coming out found the town of S Francisco flooded with the same articles th they have coming round. I wish we had o stock of thick goods here now as I could s them at 500 percent profit. The nights are ve cold and the days are warm and a person wan flannel on the year round on them. Will clothing enough in three months here to supp all the miners for the next five years.

"Lumber sells the best of anything. At S Francisco it sells for six and seven hundred d lars per thousand and here at ten hundred p thousand. Revolvers are worth from 50 dolla to 200, just as you meet the boys. Tell Cha lotte that I have written my 8th letter to her the 'California' and I shall have to wait unt I get to the mines before I write to her. Y will please show her this. Love to all.

Sitka for Saint Petersburg, to report to the em peror and to obtain imperial approval of his i tention to wed Senorita Concepcion Arguell He was seized with a violent fever and, havi been deserted at Sitka by Dr. Langsdorff, b personal physician who accompanied him Nueva California, fell from his horse in the Eas ern Siberian wastes and died at Krasnoyar March 1, 1807. DIAN RELICS TREASURE TROVE UNCOVERED IN IMPERIAL VALLEY.

A new treasure trove of Indian relics has been covered in a series of caves in Imperial Valley, st of Brawley and ten to twelve miles north of e Superstition Mountains, according to Proor Hiram W. Edwards of the physics departnt of the University of California at Los Anles.

Exploration of the caves disclosed a large mber of beautiful jars and household utensils, signed by Indians perhaps a thousand or more ars ago. The jars are of exceptional beauty, cording to Professor Edwards, and form the st interesting collection of objects found in e caves. They stand from a foot and a half two feet in height and are covered with geoetric patterns, in which the triangle predomites.

The caves all give evidence of having been e occupied by Indians, and all show that they re above the water level when the ocean wed on the Imperial Valley floor. A human otprint, made many centuries ago and disctly impressed in what has now become rock, o was found in one of the caves.

WATER SUPPLY CONTROLS MANUFACTURING

EVERY MANUFACTURING ESTABLISHment requires a water supply, but the needs as to quantity and quality vary greatly, according to a report of the Geological Survey, Federal Department of the Interior. Practically all of the early industrial activity in this country was in places where the natural waters are soft and clear.

Manufacturing has followed the spread of population to the West, but not uniformly, for some industries have grown up around centers far from the coast, while others have expanded where they were originally established. The latter class, it is stated, contains most of those which require soft water. The process for softening water by exchange silicates, introduced comparatively recently, it is pointed out in the report, now makes it possible to locate such plants at places where they could not be operated successfully if they were to depend on the available water supply either in its natural state or after softening by the older methods.

Water supply must, of course, always be considered in locating any plant, and in some industries, like the manufacture of paper or textiles, it is likely to be the most important consideration. A factory for the manufacture of clothing or of cigars may require little more water than that used for the individual needs of the workers and for cleaning workrooms; but a textile mill in which dyeing is done may use several million gallons of water each day.

The requirements as to quality of water also vary widely. Water used for cooling at steel plants or in some types of condensers at a power plant may be of almost any quality if it is not acid; but feed water for steam boilers should be either moderately free from suspended and dissolved mineral matter or easily made so. A paper mill that makes brown wrapping paper can use water of much poorer quality than is needed for a mill that makes fine white paper; but a plant that makes chemicals or drug products is forced to use distilled water almost exclusively in its manufacturing processes.

Again, in certain activities the sanitary character of the water is the controlling factor. Thus the preparation of food products, represented by the industries of slaughtering and meat packing, canning and preserving, and the making of bread and other bakery products, must be carried on where the raw materials can be obtained most easily, where the products can most quickly reach the consumer, or where the combined transportation is a minimum; but here the sanitary character of the water used is of the greatest importance, and its chemical constituents may be a secondary consideration.

In this report of the Geological Survey, "Relation between Quality of Water and Industrial Development in the United States," the development of the industrial activity in the country is well shown in connection with maps and diagrams that indicate the quality of water in different regions.

ANCIENT PINE CONE IS FOUND BY MINING PROSPECTOR.

A pine cone that might have dropped from the tree on which it grew two million years or more ago, while the progenitors of man were still trying the difficult feat of walking erect on their hind feet, has just been received by the University of California at Berkeley's department of paleontology in a state of perfect preservation.

The cone is from the pinus attenuata tree, a species still in existence, and was found by a prospector, L. G. Beloud, of the town of You Bet, buried beneath a lava flow which is itself probably two million years old. The find was made in the vicinity of You Bet, above Auburn, Placer County, in the Grass Valley, Nevada County, region.

COMMITTEE TO STUDY STATE'S GRADE CROSSING PROBLEM.

Plans for a state-wide investigation of the grade crossing problem through a committee of nine to be named by Governor C. C. Young have been formulated in Sacramento as a substitute for the proposed "stop-look-listen" state legislation which would put the burden of the grade crossing situation on the motorist.

The committee is to consist of representatives of each of the following: The State Senate, the State Assembly, the State Railroad Commission, the State Highway Commission, the County Supervisors' Association, the California State Automobile Association, the Automobile Club of Southern California, the railroad companies and the train service brotherhoods. The committee is to report findings and recommendations to the governor and the Legislature not later than December 1, 1928.

WOULD CLOSE GAP.

Definite steps toward settlement of the controversy over the gap in the Lincoln Highway between Ely, Nevada State, and Salt Lake City, Utah State, were taken at a conference held in Reno under the auspices of the California State Automobile Association.

C. C. Cottrell, manager of the association's highways bureau, who presided at the conference, announces that he has named a committee of fifteen from Utah, Nevada and California to investigate the possibility of closing the gap and report on a plan within six months.

LESSONS OF THE PAST MUST BE APPLIED TO PROBLEMS OF THE FUTURE

Hilliard E. Welch
(GRAND PRESIDENT OF THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST.)

SIX YEARS AGO THE MEMBERS OF THE Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, in convention assembled at Stockton, San Joaquin County, conferred upon the writer an honor which has since afforded him the opportunity visit, to study, to know California. To visit e scenes of the activities of Padre, of Pathder, of Prospector, of Pioneer, to study the oblems presented by the almost limitless acities in which the state's citizens are enged; to know their trials and difficulties, eir hopes and ambitions, their fears and dispointments

To the Padres—those men the cloth—are we inbted for the real foundaon of our state's history. uring that period of time hen our forefathers along e Atlantic seaboard were ruggling to first achieve d finally preserve freedom r these United States from reign domination, these own-clad friars succeeded establishing a line of misons from the Bay of San ego to the Harbor of San an Francisco. These missions ere situated about a day's ave apart and a great ghway—El Camino Real connected one with the her

The missions and the othbuildings necessary to use those who made up ch of these communities ere, as a rule, erected upon eminence overlooking a rtile valley. An adobe wall rrounded the buildings as protection against attack. ch mission community as a complete unit of civzation within itself. Every ecaution had been taken insure permanence. The ople with whom the pads came in contact were ught useful occupations of e farm and the factory; ey were educated in the ts of civilization; they ere converted to lives as emplified by that of The rist.

There was no Lexington, Valley Forge, no Monouth. No display of military force accompanied the dre, his armor consisted an untiring zeal, an unlfish devotion, an unerng judgment, an unfaltering trust. Much of the physil evidence of the labor and crifices of the padres has sappeared; it has gone the exorable way of all things mporal. The moral and e spiritual evidence will dure until the end of time.

To the Pathfinders—those men in every civiliion who have ventured far beyond the outirts of human civilization—are we indebted the markings of the trails and the roads ross the mountains and the deserts that enled those who followed after them to finally ach their destinations. Substantial recogniin has been given to the labor and the sacrie of these men by the erection of monuments d the placing of markers and tablets, but this a portion of our work that should have more our attention and should receive increased ancial support, as the varied elements of nare, exemplified in the recurring changing of sons, will soon obliterate all evidences of eir efforts.

Upon the shelves of the libraries of the tue, alongside of the stirring tales of the exits of Boone, Marquette, Lewis and Clark, l be found the stories of the pathfinders of West—Jedediah Strong Smith, Kit Carson, n C. Fremont and scores of others who did their bit to lead the way for the civilization that was to come.

And the Pioneers came! Their flocks and herds roamed over the hills and valleys of the great inland basin of this state. Villages flourished, schools and churches were erected, the hum of primitive industry was heard over the land. These people and the descendants of those who had come with the padres appropriated a great portion of the arable lands south of the San Francisco Bay region. The Valleys of Napa and Sonoma on the one hand and of the Sacramento on the other were the recognized northern boundary. Those settlers who had accompanied Vallejo and Sutter formed a bulwark which protected the civilization to the southward from the encroachments of the warlike Indian tribes on the north.

With this protection, that civilization enjoyed a period of idealistic existence. Day came forth with the sweet songs of wild bird life, with the bleating of sheep in the wide meadows, the lowing of cattle upon the broad hillsides; the sun crossed its zenith while man and bird and beast slumbered in some appropriate shady nook; sunset and eventide ushered in the hum of the guitar, and the voice of the senorita rang forth in happiness and contentment; night closed in and the lone wolf upon a rocky crag howled as he mourned the [illegible] General J. [illegible] called to the [illegible] of life. [illegible] sought the [illegible] he planted and [illegible] of a [illegible] sawmill at Coloma, El D[illegible] January 1848, James W. [illegible] gold.

Then came the Prospector—the gold seeker, or, as he is best known and remembered, the Forty-niner. From every port [illegible] for California. From every outpost along the Missouri and the Mississippi River [illegible] vans started westward across [illegible] unknown mountain and desert. Hidden reefs and storms at sea enabled the old ocean to take its toll of human life and treasure; the bones of man and of beast whitened in the sands of the gray desert; in ravine and canyon, upon hillside and mountain top, many who were unable to stand the hardships found their final resting places.

The spirit which animated them to attempt it, and the hardships of the journey which ensued, appeal to the imagination, and no people will ever hold a more tender place in the memory of man than those adventurous men and women who heard the call of the West and responded by leaving homes and friends to become a part of this wonderful new civilization. For the most part, they did not intend to remain here permanently, but expected to return to their Eastern homes as soon as they had accumulated a competency. For that reason, placer and hydraulic mining consumed their attention. Cities and villages sprang up over night, to be as quickly deserted when the pay streak had been worked out.

There is an old axiom to the effect that permanence comes only with constructive effort. The placer miner constructed nothing except the temporary shack necessary to shield him from the inclemencies of the weather. He took away the riches from the earth and deposited nothing in compensation therefor. The ruins of deserted villages amid the foothills of the Sierras are mute evidences of that epoch in our civilization. Within a few years the piles of granite boulders and the exposed plains and ravines of bedrock will be the lone monuments to mark the scenes of the labors of the placer and the hydraulic miners and, plainer than words, will tell the story of that hectic experience. Immense fortunes were taken out of the ground in many of these places but, better still, out of the varied experiences, trials, difficulties and disappointments were moulded exalted characters who guided the destinies of this commonwealth.

No one desires to take from those hardy men of old any glory or credit, and the most fatal mistake a people can make is to forget the men of the past who have accomplished great things. It is not, however, sufficient to dream and live in the past, we must apply the lessons of the past to the problems of the [illegible]. If we expect the boys and the girls of [illegible] to become the great men and women of tomorrow, we must so teach them the stories [illegible] of those who accomplished great things in days gone by that they themselves will grasp the inspiration and aspire to the accomplishment, by themselves, of those things which will, in turn, cause them to be remembered and revered. The history of every nation is written in the biographies of its great men!

Then came the Pioneer in Thought—that type of men who foresaw that the ultimate destiny of California rested in the development of its deep mineral resources, its many phases of agriculture and horticulture and viticulture, its vast expanses of timber, its enormous potential possibilities for irrigation and electric power, its peculiar adaptability to stock-raising, and the eventual gathering together of its people in great centers of population where they, in turn, would have to solve the varied problems of commerce and of trade. They laid the foundation upon which has been built the California that we enjoy today. It is true that the golden stream poured into their laps by the too-often improvident placer miners along the foothills made their work possible, but nevertheless they are entitled to full credit, because they were endowed with the vision to realize and the determination to carry out such gigantic undertakings.

The four major problems confronting California today may be classed as follows: Sanitation, transportation, irrigation and reclamation. Sanitation is, of course, the most vital of all, for it is only by proper sanitary measures that life itself can be insured. So broad has been the scope, so intense the study, that many of the plans and ideas in vogue here have been adopted and utilized in other lands, and our many systems of preventive measures have redounded to the great credit of those earnest men and women who have devoted their time and ability to the development of the original plans.

Transportation is the common great handicap. Situated, as we are, so far from the great centers of population, confronted on the one hand by the long haul by water and on the other by the necessity of crossing the mountains, the deserts and the broad expanse of plains of the great Middle West, the expense in either instance is a very heavy toll against production. One-third of the gross receipts received from agricultural products is about the amount of the toll levied to carry our products to the consuming market. Only by the exercise of every human ingenuity have we been able to overcome this great handicap.

The semi-arid plains are fast yielding themselves to giant irrigation systems, and the consequent tremendous increase in per-acre production is helping to overcome the natural disadvantages of distance. The mountain ranges are dotted with great reservoirs which conserve the flood waters, giant power plants convert the latent power into electric current to serve the purposes of farm, factory and home, and the water is turned back into its natural channels to be utilized again in the processes of irrigation.

The lowlands are being conquered by reclamation, and many thousands of acres formerly utilized for pasturage but a few months in each year have been converted into such intensive cultivation that this delta region today rivals that of Holland or the Nile. A great deal has been said concerning the cost of these undertakings, but it is extremely difficult to figure accurately the ultimate worth of this property, which has been converted from a trackless waste into productivity which will continue as long as may be necessary.

An excellent opportunity has been afforded to study the problems of various portions of the state. They are all local, but at the same time all are statewide. It has been interesting to listen to the recital of problems apparently peculiar to a particular locality, and then check the number of communities in other portions of the state whose citizenry are struggling with similar handicaps and difficulties. The lumber industry on the north coast is confronted with problems akin to those of that industry on the south coast and in the Sierras. The troubles of the cattle-raisers of Modoc and Siskiyou and Mendocino are shared by those of Monterey and Madera and Imperial. The orange-grower of Los Angeles can sympathize with his neighbor in Butte; the vineyardist of Fresno with his neighbor of Napa and Sonoma; the walnut-grower of Ventura with his neighbor of San Joaquin; the almond-grower of San Luis Obispo with his neighbor of Glenn; the wool-grower of Kern and Kings with his neighbor in Tehama and Lassen.

This experience cannot come to a normal individual without implanting within him a broader conception of the possibilities of the state as a whole and, at the same time, bringing home to him the knowledge that the welfare of each community is indissolubly linked with that of the entire commonwealth. It will enable him to be of greater usefulness and to perform better service. Life's problems are not solved by all at the same time nor in the same manner. Life is a school and, as in a school, each must solve its problems for himself. Life is most successful to him who learns best how to be of service, and then renders that service.

Padre, Pathfinder, Prospector, Pioneer! The passing years have blended them into a cosmopolitan people in whose blood mingles the strains of their varied elements of religious and political belief—a people who are symbolic of the stoicism of the padre and the puritan, coupled with the romanticism of the bohemian and the cavalier; a people inured to all of the hardships of building a new civilization, subjected to all of the trials and disappointments and failures in their efforts to conquer nature's forces, overwhelmed at times by fire and earthquake and flood, and yet capable of enjoying life's pleasures of every kind and description with all of the zest of eternal youth.

Padre, Pathfinder, Prospector, Pioneer! To each of them—to all of them—is due an equal portion of reverence and respect for the part they played in this wonderful drama. They have bequeathed to us the heritage that enables us to recognize that out of differences of opinion devolves a better citizenship. A strong minority influence is good for any people. The many activities in life concerning which we differ honestly have the inevitable result of making us more tolerant of the opinions of others and result in a better balanced form of government.

If we can follow the precepts of the founders who, regardless of religious and political differences, worked side by side to promote the common weal; if we can keep out of our lives those things which prompt us to seize immediate selfish benefit without due regard of the ultimate general welfare; if we can school ourselves to see the entire picture to the exclusion of that particular portion of the film that comes within the range of our vision, we can, we must, we will succeed in our endeavor to teach this story to the youth of our state.

Padre, Pathfinder, Prospector, Pioneer! Gone, but not forgotten. May we have the strength, the energy, the ability, the willingness to carry on.

"Let all the ends thou aimst at be Thy country's, thy God's, and truth's.
Be noble and the nobleness that Lies in other men, sleeping but Never dead, will rise in majesty
To meet thine own."

"No other of our internal problems is of greater moment than the rehabilitation of our forests, now so hopefully begun but needing the strong support of our collective will and intelligence."—President Calvin Coolidge.

WHEN SAN PEDRO WAS YOUNG

Mary Eva Thacker, M. A.
(INSTRUCTOR IN HISTORY, BELMONT HIGH SCHOOL, LOS ANGELES.)

IN THE YEAR 1542, JUST SEVENTY-EIGHT years before the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth rock, a valiant Spanish navigator sailed into an unknown harbor on the Pacific coast of North America. Because of the clouds of curling smoke which overhung the hills, he gave the place the name of "Bahia de los Humos" (the Bay of Smokes). The Indians who inhabited the region in great numbers gazed for the first time upon Caucasian faces, and it was perhaps to entice these God-like beings with their bird-winged conveyance shoreward that they set fire to the dried grass upon the plains above the beach. The courageous seaman was none other than Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, the discoverer of California; the harbor was the bay later to become the busy port for the City of Los Angeles. The historical beginnings of San Pedro are thus the beginnings of California itself, nearly four centuries ago.

Cabrillo, after remaining a few days, continued northward on his voyage of exploration and discovery, sent out, as he was, as envoy of the conquistador, Cortez, to seek the fabled "Straits of Anian," a short water route to India through the American continents. Cabrillo died on this expedition, and it is not known whether the sailors stopped at the Bay of Smokes on their return.

Though known to the world at this early date, the harbor was left untouched for some sixty years. When next the Bay of Smokes welcomed the White man, the guest was the explorer, Sebastian Viscaino. The king of Spain, Philip III, issued a mandate that the entire coast of California be carefully searched for harbors suitable as way stations where the galleons, engaged in the fast increasing Philippine trade, might put in for wood, water and repairs, after their long voyage across the Pacific. For more than a third of a century after Cabrillo's voyage, the scheme of exploring the California coast had been agitated by the officials of New Spain, as the Spanish possessions in America were called. To perform this work, Viscaino was selected; and accordingly, he left the western coast of Mexico in 1602 to make a thorough examination of the coast from Cape San Lucas to Cape Mendocino.

He stopped at Catalina, as did Cabrillo, and in his diary he states that he left Catalina and drew near to the mainland, landing on November 29, 1602, at a point where there was a village of Indians. Here he remained two days exploring the country about, no doubt climbing to the crest of the sightly Palos Verdes Hills, rising more than a thousand feet above the surrounding plains, where a marvelous view of the country inland can be obtained. Viscaino, thinking the day of his landing was sacred to Saint Andrew, renamed the bay "Ensenada de San Andrew" (Port of Saint Andrew); and the maps so recorded it until the cosmographer, Cabrera Bueno, compiling a chart of the California coast from the reckonings of Viscaino, unraveled a tangle in the saints' names. November 29, in the Catholic calendar, is sacred to Saint Peter, the bishop of Alexandria, rather than to Saint Andrew. So the name again was changed; and to this day, this seaport is known as San Pedro, and renowned throughout the world as the port of the great City of Los Angeles.

The departure of Viscaino left San Pedro to remain in the silence of its own solitude for one hundred and sixty-seven years. The next ship whose keel cut the waters of San Pedro Bay was the galleon "San Carlos," bearing supplies for the founding of San Diego. Missing that harbor in the fog and drifting along the California coast, its captain cast anchor in Cabrillo's "Bay of Smokes," April 27, 1769.

Because the fear of losing California had become strong, the Spanish monarch finally decided to make settlements upon the land. The Spanish historian, Venegas, records the following urge to the Spanish government, sent by the governor of New Spain, as the Spanish possessions in America were then called: "The American coasts in the South Seas . . . are unsafe whilst California remains in the hands of savages and under no subjection to the Spanish crown. . . . The mean canoes of the Californians are not indeed to be dreaded, but California has several times been a shelter for privateers and pirates who from thence scoured all the seas, and, taking a great many ships, disturbed the whole commerce of the Pacific and filled the remote provinces with alarms."

Who knows but that San Pedro, in these romantic days, may have sheltered these bold buccaneers who sailed the "Spanish Main" and combed the far seas in search of treasure? The historian continues: "California, by its situation, has been and still is of the highest importance for the preservation and advancement of the Christian religion and the augmentation of the Spanish sovereignty in America."

So, arrangements were finally made to settle the province. The settlers were "to spread the Catholic religion among a numerous heathen people submerged in the obscure darkness of paganism, thereby to extend the dominions of the King, our lord, and to protect the peninsula of California from the ambitious designs of foreign nations," so the mandate read.

Though the stay of the "San Carlos" was short, for she was soon on her way to find the lost port of San Diego, there was thus given to San Pedro the distinction of sheltering, within its harbor, not only the discoverer of California, but also the first group of settlers.

Although no settlement was made by the Spanish at the harbor, a new era was opened for San Pedro with the founding of the missions. This was the nearest port to the rich Missions of San Gabriel and San Fernando and for the Pueblo of Los Angeles, the largest community in the province. In San Pedro Bay the annual Spanish galleon, bearing supplies from Mexico anchored. Here, too, stopped an occasional venturesome foreign sea captain to barter his wares with the mission fathers and wealthy ranchers living often a hundred leagues inland.

EARLIEST DESCRIPTIONS.

Notwithstanding the fact that the trade that grew up at San Pedro was the most lucrative of any port in the province, practically no facilities for handling the trade, except of the crudest sort, were constructed before the era when California became a state of the American Union in 1850. Several of the early navigators who stopped at the port in early times have left most interesting records of their impressions of the harbor, found in their diaries or published narratives recounting their experiences.

As far as can be learned, the first description was left by the British captain, George Vancouver, in his "Voyage to the North Pacific Ocean and Around the Wordl." Since the days of Francis Drake, the British had their eyes on the west coast of North America, and by command of his majesty, King George III, Vancouver was sent out to examine and chart the coast. In 1793 he anchored in San Pedro Bay. It was he who christened the bold bluff, Point Fermin, in recognition of the generous hospitality accorded him by the Franciscan friar, Fermin Lasuen.

The best description of San Pedro, during its primitive days, was written by the French captain, A. Duhaut-Cilly, commander of a world trading expedition, sent out in 1827 by the well-known firm of Lafayette & Company. Translating from his "Voyages Atour du Monde," one learns of a little hunting expedition on shore, which Duhaut-Cilly tells in a most charming way:

"We had gone a certain distance when it appeared that we were to have a lively contest with the heath. We found ourselves in a thick vegetation of mustard which extended way above our heads. We, however, wished to advance to reach the eminence beyond us. We soon began to repent; for we were almost lost in this veritable forest of mustard. At every step we heard the crackling of the dry sticks of last year's fallen growth, in which were hidden rattle snakes which crawl about in great numbers. . . . We went forward with precaution and silence. The noise we made in crushing the old plants so entangled beneath our feet, in our imagination, we thought was that which we feared."

"At the summit of the hills" (the Palos Verdes), he says, they "looked out upon a vast horizon that seemed to extend to the sunrise." Upon their return to the beach it was necessary to retrace their steps through the trail they had blazed in climbing the hill. They had not gone far when, as he says, "We thought at that instant about the danger of treading on reptiles and involuntary chills agitated us."

He also tells of the ingenious expedient in use by the traders (there being no vestige of life at the landing) of announcing their arrival to the miles inland. They waited for the nightfall, that the sound might carry the more easily, and then fired a volley from the ship's cannon. The people, with their ears to the ground in sleep, the more readily felt the reverberation of the percussion. Duhaut, after the custom, awaited the dusk, when the formidable "eight-pounder," carried by his ship, burst forth in thundering boom, echoing and re-echoing over the silent hills, until, as he says, it almost seemed as if the echo were actually the roar of an answering cannon at the pueblo. The next morning, in response, there came riding over the hill men with horses to convey him to Los Angeles.

Duhaut-Cilly continues in his charming way to describe his journey hither. He passed through two high walls of mustard, crowding in on both sides of the trail, but now, "raised to the elevation of horseback," he was enabled just to see above it. Tru'y, these were the trees of mustard where "the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof." There were no fences, and cattle by the thousand roamed at will over the plains. He says: "We were obliged to seek a passage through a multitude of animals. Often, however, the hostile dispositions of the bulls advised us of the prudence of describing around them a circle of reasonable size."

The most widely known description is that of Richard Henry Dana, who stopped at San Pedro many times during the years 1832 and 1833. Dana, while an undergraduate of Harvard College, undertook a voyage to California as a common sailor, hoping by an entire change of life and long absence from books to cure an affection of the eyes. He shipped from Boston on the brig "Pilgrim," which was bound for the California coast to exchange, for hides and tallow, such articles as tea, coffee, hardware and jewelry. There was no wharf at San Pedro in those days, and the boat had to anchor about three miles from shore, as Dana says, so if a "southeaster," the storm so feared by the sailors, should arise, they might readily slip anchor and make out to the open sea. It was thus necessary to transport the cargoes back and forth from the shore in the ship's tenders. He has left us a graphic description of the harbor in that early day in his sea-classic, "Two Years Before the Mast." His account reads:

"Leaving Santa Barbara, we coasted along down, the country appearing level or moderately even, and, for the most part, sandy and treeless; until doubling a high sandy point, we let go our anchor at a distance of three or three and a half miles from shore. . . . The land was of clayey consistency, and, as far as the eye could reach, entirely bare of trees and even shrubs; and there was no sign of a town—not even a house to be seen. . . . As soon as everything was snug on board, the boat was lowered, and we pulled ashore. . . . As we drew in, we found the tide low, and the rocks and stones covered with kelp and seaweed, lying bare for the distance of nearly an eighth of a mile. Picking our way barefooted over these, we came to what is called the landing place, at high water mark. The soil was as it appeared at first, loose and clayey, and except the stalks of the mustard plant, there was no vegetation.

"Just in front of the landing, and immediately over it, was a small hill, which, from its being not more than thirty or forty feet high, we had not perceived from our anchorage. . . . Going up this hill, we saw just behind it a small low building with one room, containing a fire-place, cooking apparatus, etc., and the rest of it unfinished, and used as a place to store goods. This, they told us, was built by some traders in the Pueblo, (a town about thirty miles in the interior, to which this was the port,) and used by them as a store house, and also as a lodging place when they came down to trade with the vessels.

"The nearest house was a rancho, or cattle farm, about three miles off. . . . I also learned, to my surprise, that the desolate looking place we were in was the best place on the whole coast for hides. It was the only port for a distance of eighty miles, and about thirty miles in the interior was a fine plane country filled with herds of cattle, in the center of which was the Pueblo de Los Angeles, the largest town in California, and several of the wealthiest missions, to all of which San Pedro was the seaport.

"The next day we pulled the agent ashore, and he went up to visit the Pueblo and the neighboring missions, and in a few days, as the result of our labors, large ox carts, and droves of mules, loaded with hides, were seen coming over the flat country."

Another very readable account is that of a young American, Charles Nordhoff, who, thrilled with tales of adventure, ran away from home at the tender age of thirteen and boarded a brig bound for California. In the year 1843 he stopped at San Pedro. There follows a partial narration of a description found in his "Nine Years a Sailor," first published in 1857:

"The town, which by an effort of the imagination was generally supposed to be located at San Pedro, I found to consist of one hide-house and a man to take care of it. The most interesting spot in the entire neighborhood, to me was the island fronting the harbor, to seaward. This was the abode of numberless sea-fowl which had their nests thickly studding the ground and which sometimes when suddenly disturbed rose up in vast crowds almost hiding the light of the sun, and filling the air with discordant cries.

"A boat's crew of us paid a visit to the island where we found the entire shore covered with nests. Nearly all contained eggs or young birds and so thickly were they clustered together that one could hardly walk without treading upon them. The birds were quite tame and sat still upon their nests or screamed discordantly above our heads, while we walked through their settlement. We procured a quantity of eggs, taking, of course, only the freshest looking. The eggs were quite palatable—but almost everything was considered palatable in California in those days. The birds, mostly sea-gulls, have a strong fishy taste (probably arising from their living constantly on fish) which makes them suitable for only strong stomachs."

SAN PEDRO TRADE UNDER SPANISH RULE

Due to the narrow policy of Spain which limited the commerce of its California colonies, San Pedro was retarded in its development. Trade was restricted to two ships each year which came from Mexico with supplies for the two missions San Gabriel and San Fernando, and also for the Pueblo of Los Angeles, twenty-five miles away. The supplies were landed at San Pedro, and carried on the wooden-wheeled carretas (carts) across the plains to their destination.

Spain issued an edict that no foreign vessel could enter a Spanish possession or land without carrying a special permit. Forfeiture of property and death were the penalties for disobedience. It is not an easy matter, however, to enforce arbitrary restrictions against commerce for men will trade under the most adverse circumstances. Spain was a long way off and smuggling was a venial sin, so a contraband trade grew up on the California coast and San Pedro had its share in it.

Fast sailing vessels were fitted out in Boston for illicit trade on the Pacific Coast. Watching their opportunity, these vessels slipped into San Pedro, where there was a rapid exchange of Yankee notions for sea-otter skins, the most valued peltry of California, and the vessels were out to sea before the revenue officers could intercept them. If successful in escaping capture the profits of a smuggling voyage were enormous. The smuggler had no protection from the law—he was an outlaw. The vessels came armed and when speed and strategem failed they fought their way to escape.

Under Mexican rule California fared better since some of the burdensome restrictions were removed, but tariffs were still high and smuggling continued. Trade was carried on in obscure points out of the reach of guns or of the coast guards. Sometimes the trade laws were evaded by leaving goods at Catalina while the vessel sailed to Monterey, the only legal port of entry for many a year. Paying the tariff on the least valuable part of the cargo, they then returned with the remainder of the goods to San Pedro, bearing a certificate showing their dues paid. The people, and the padres too, did not consider it a heinous sin to escape duties on the necessities that they could not produce and of which they stood in urgent need.

SENORA RUDECINDA F. S. DE DODSON'S PRICELESS HEIRLOOMS OF THE COLORFUL PAST

SENORA RUDECINDA F. S. DE DODSON, honorary chairman of hostesses for Sepulveda Parlor No. 263, Native Sons of the Golden West, and hostess chairman of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230, Native Daughters of the Golden West, will receive the visiting ladies to the Fiftieth Native Sons' Grand Parlor meeting at San Pedro in headquarters established by the committee which she heads, and which committee is composed of Margaret Savage-Dever, Anna Olsen-Spickler, Florence Dodson-Schoneman and Mildred Obarr-Walizer.

Senora de Dodson is pictured here wearing the costume for which she was awarded the two first prizes at the Diamond Jubilee celebration in San Francisco in 1925, for the oldest and most beautiful clothes worn at the opening ball in connection therewith.

They are heirlooms of the Dolores Sepulveda family, of which she is the youngest granddaughter. Upon their original holdings, Rancho de Los Palos Verdes, Senora de Dodson still resides.

The State Chairman of the History and Landmarks Committee of the Grand Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West, Florence Dodson-Schoneman, is Senora de Dodson's daughter. Mrs. Schoneman is planning to be hostess to the visiting ladies on Wednesday, May eleventh, by conducting them upon a historical tour from San Pedro Harbor to the mission town of San Gabriel, where they will lunch under the "Old Grape Vine" and attend the beautiful new playhouse.

The touring party will leave Rudecinda Parlor's headquarters at nine o'clock in the morning and proceed over the Palos Verdes Hills to the Palos Verdes Estates, Redondo Beach, Hermosa Beach, El Segundo, Del Rey, Venice, Ocean Park, Santa Monica, Soldiers' Home, Beverly Hills and Hollywood, with a stop at Campo de Cahuenga, near Universal City.

Thence the party will continue through the San Fernando Valley towns to San Fernando Mission and Memory Garden at San Fernando and on to San Gabriel, through Glendale and Pasadena. The return to San Pedro will be made by way of Long Beach. This tour will afford the visitors an opportunity to view many of the scenic spots and historic places of Los Angeles County.

Senora de Dodson is a charter member of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230, and the San Pedro branch of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West was named in her honor.

SENOR RAMON D. SEPULVEDA HONORED BY SAN PEDRO NATIVE SONS

SENOR RAMON D. SEPULVEDA IS THE son of Diego and Maria Elisalde Sepulveda, one of the old land holders of Los Angeles County and the original owner of the great Palos Verdes Rancho, extending long the seacoast from San Pedro to Redondo each and back into the foothills for miles. Like is father, he was born on the Rancho Palos erdes.

His schooling began in the rancho school-ouse, where a South American professor pre-ded, and was completed at Saint Vincent's Col-ge, in Los Angeles City. At a very early age, enor Sepulveda married Caroline Oden, and had family of nine children, eight of whom are liv-g. The recent passing of Senora Sepulveda as a great shock to him, and a great loss to an Pedro, where the family has resided for er forty years.

Senor Sepulveda, for a half-century, has been ne of the most prominent and enterprising citi-zens of San Pedro. He established the first water works, constructed the Sepulveda Build-ing, was one of the organizers of the First Na-tional Bank, was county superintendent of roads, and served several terms on the San Pedro City Board of Trustees.

Naturally, since he still is the largest individ-ual owner of the original vast Palo Verdes es-tates, his main interest is in real estate. He has placed on the market the Carolina Tract, the Grand View Tract, and the beautiful new Sepul-veda Tract, just opened to the public.

Senor Sepulveda's main "hobby" and chief de-light is his beautiful horse, pictured here, which he rides over his vast acreage each morning. His dress is that of the Mexican gentleman, used in California after 1822.

When Sepulveda Parlor No. 263, the San Pe-dro branch of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, was in process of formation, no one took a greater interest than Senor Ramon Sepulveda. The institution ceremonies were held at h[illegible] park at White Point, and he was made the [illegible] senor past president of the Parlor. [illegible] honor of his [illegible] the host-Parlor to the [illegible] of the Grand Parlor was named [illegible].

Even the most [illegible] to California South is bound to become [illegible] Sepulveda. If possessed of [illegible], his fancy must turn to the past, and [illegible] before his mind of the period when Los Angeles County was divided into a few great ranches, the proprietors of which were magnificently hospitable, and much like the Old World patriarchs —at the head of armies of servants, whose duties included the care of vast flocks and herds. There must recur to his mind, also, many of the stories he has heard of the days of long ago — those days which supplied California with a romance peculiarly its own; those days which are an important link in the history-chain of California, the Golden.

OTTER HUNTING.

Upon passing the great government breakwater, today, and steaming up to one of the many busy wharves teeming with commercial activity, it is difficult to picture the drowsy little harbor of one hundred years ago as the habitat of some of the most lustrous sea-otter of the whole California coast, or the haven of whales to such great numbers that, as Dana said in 1833, the sailors ceased to take any notice of them, so common a sight were they.

The early Californians, themselves, seldom engaged in the hunting of the beautiful sea-otter. As a matter of fact, no inhabitant of Spanish California was permitted to own ships. Such was the control over its colonies, exerted by the rigid authorities in Spain. No ban existed which could so effectively control the indomitable Yankee, to whom trade was an instinct. Early in the nineteenth century American vessels began to appear in the California ports under pretext of needing supplies; their real object, however, being the skins of the greatly-prized sea-otter, for which they had goods to give in exchange. So highly valued were the manufactured products that it was easy to make an advantageous trade. One shrewd navigator received $8,000 in furs in return for a rusty iron chisel. Though the price fluctuated, the average price of the sea-otter skins was $40 in cash.

Expressly was it forbidden by the Spanish government for ships of any nation, under pain of confiscation, to catch these animals within thirty leagues of the California coast. To gain their desired ends, it was necessary to resort to deception or to openly violate the regulations. Wily as the Yankees were, not always were they successful in escape. Dr. George Heinrich von Langsdorff who, during his Pacific voyage in 1812, visited California, states that an American ship, having been detected in the act of poaching, was stopped and carried into San Diego.

The proximity of San Pedro to the largest town in the province as well as to the rich missions and, too, the absence of any Spanish fort and Spanish guns, made San Pedro an expedient place to stop for "supplies." Many an otter ship dropped anchor in the Bay of San Pedro. The affair of the "Ilmen" is one of the interesting episodes that occurred in these eventful days. The "Ilmen" was an American vessel, purchased by Alexander Baranoff, governor of the Russian interests on the Pacific. In the year 1813, with a party of Aleutian hunters, natives of the northern islands, the "Ilmen," still flying the American Flag and captained by an American master, cruised southward along the California coast. Besides the leader of the Aleuts, one Boris Tarakanoff, there shipped John Elliott de Castro, as supercargo, in charge of a consignment of the customary goods for traffic.

Made reckless by successful trade, the captain let fall unheeded the repeated warnings to quit the coast. One day in September he anchored at San Pedro, having on board over four hundred skins, $10,000 in money and a large quantity of goods. Scarcely had the poaching operations gotten well under way when the deputy of Governor Sola arrived to arrest the malcreants. Caught red-handed as they were, no excuse was accepted; and Tarakanoff, with his band of Aleuts, was summarily carried off beyond the hills and thrown into jail at Los Angeles, some of the hunters being wounded in the skirmish.

Flimsy and transparent were the excuses offered by the interlopers. They were "driven in by stress of weather," or had "lost their way." When cross examined, they became suddenly ignorant of every language but the simplest Russian. Tarakanoff, when captured, had some silk goods in his hunting boat, which he had the impudence to declare were intended for his own use. On being asked if he had not been warned to quit the coast, he could not understand the question and took refuge in silence. The wily American captain, however, eluded the net set for him and, heading seaward, sailed away to the Sandwich Islands, where King Tamaahmaah gave him a generous welcome. Some months later, Elliott, the supercargo, boarded a Russian boat that stopped for supplies and sailed, likewise, for the Sandwich Islands, where he became physician and a sort of secretary of state for his barbaric majesty, King Tamaahmaah.

The Yankee traders who were successful in avoiding the Spanish authorities reaped immense profits. Articles often sold at an advance of 300 percent on Boston prices; most of the ships that came hailed from Boston. This circumstance was largely occasioned by the heavy duties imposed upon them. The vessels usually left Boston with their cargo of miscellaneous articles, costing a few thousand dollars. Afterwarily bartering their wares along the coast for skins and hides, the traders continued the journey across the broad Pacific, where the cargo was again exchanged, this time for teas, spices, silks and sundry luxuries of the Orient. When the vessels finally returned to their starting point, and the goods were ultimately disposed of, the profits netted on the original investment often figured as high as 20 percent. In this way, many a New England fortune was made.

TRADING UNDER MEXICAN REGIME.

After 1822, when the Mexican government more liberal than the Spanish had been, partially lifted from foreign trade the burdensome restrictions imposed, trade began to seek the port of San Pedro in some considerable amount. The anchorage at this time was a place close under the bluff at the northwest point of the bay. First came the hide droghers, with their department-store cargoes brought from Boston all the way around the Horn. Their cargo of imported goods and manufactured products was most welcome to the Californians, especially to the missions, since they were thus enabled to dispose of their chief products, hides and tallow. Tens of thousands of cattle roamed throughout the mission valleys and the ranchos near. The hides and tallow of these cattle formed the staple export of all Southern California—"California bank notes," the sailors called them.

The Boston traders generally kept two vessels upon the coast at one time. After collecting hides in company for twelve months or more one of them returned home, leaving the other working along the coast until relieved by a fresh ship. In this way the work of collecting was kept constantly moving. The return cargo comprised from 20,000 to 40,000 hides.

The collection of hides was no easy task. The supercargo, or ship's agent, went from mission to mission, traversing the country on the old mission highway, El Camino Real, bargaining for the results of the weekly "matanzas" (slaughters), after which the sun-cured hides would be brought, at the appointed time, to a place near the landing out of the reach of the fluctuating tides, and piled there awaiting ship

CALIFORNIA'S gift of birthright to her Native Sons and Daughters comes to us as a priceless heritage from forebears whose devotion to the ideal of peace and happiness, secured by justice and equal opportunity, has laid enduringly the foundations of an enlightened commonwealth the spirit of which is the hope of mankind everywhere.

It is in grateful acknowledgment of what California means to me, that I extend this hearty greeting to the Native Sons of California gathered in Convention at San Pedro.

ment. Great piles of skins were accumulated on the lofty Point Fermin until the process of loading began.

Richard Henry Dana tells of being delegated to build himself a rude shelter of cow-hides and to spend several days and nights alone, as watchman, to protect the precious stores from hungry coyotes and the depradations of pilfering Indians. It so happened that just at the time the despotic captain was in an unusually irate mood, so the lonely vigil was welcomed as an agreeable change. After several solitary nights spent listening to the uncanny howls of the prowling coyotes, with intermittent slumbers, gloomily awakened by weird noises from the hills, which he learned later were owls hooting to one another across the distance, young Dana returned to shipboard without regret.

There was no wharf at San Pedro in those days and the ships' tenders were anchored beyond the breaking surf. The work of loading the hides was thus an arduous task. The sailors were required to transport the hides from the land to the crafts lying beyond the breakers. On a windy day, when the sea was rough, the angry breakers surged like gigantic walls above the sailors' heads. The men soon adopted the scheme of carrying their burdens upon their heads to keep the skins dry. To protect their heads, the expedient of wearing Scotch bonnets was resorted to; but no ingenious remedy could be found to save their shoe leather from the constant wetting in salt water, which soon proved ruinous. Going barefooted seemed to be the only feasible plan. Altogether, the loading was a wet and disagreeable occupation. To shorten the distance and so lighten their burdens, the sailors conceived the idea of standing on Point Fermin and, with a whirling motion, much as that used by the boys with their slings, they pitched or tossed the hides far out upon the beach. In time, the young student took his place among the veteran seamen and became an expert in "tossing" a hide.

Merchants trusted the rancheros largely for the goods sold them, and the indebtedness was later canceled when the hides and tallow were prepared. As the slaughtering was in most cases a semi-annual or annual event, the rancheros were in debt most of the time. One writer has suggested the possibility that the slang expression, "I'll take it out of your hide," may have arisen from this one-time California custom.

Barren of improvements though the region was, the trade that went on at that time was enormous. In 1834 the shipments averaged 100,000 hides and 25,000 quintals (200 pounds) of tallow. In 1840 the value of the exports exceeded those of any other port on the Pacific Coast, not even excepting that of San Francisco.

Alfred Robinson, who spent several years in California after 1829, describes the arrival of such a ship at San Pedro. He tells that when there was known that a merchant vessel was in port, from all the surrounding country came the creaking "carretas," heavy, solid-wheeled carts made all of wood, piled high with hides or leather, skins or tallow, or occasional bundles of wool, accompanied by gaily-dressed "rancheros, gentes de razon," upon their splendid horses, or by brown-robed padres upon humble mules, and lastly the Indians. All were soon busily employed in the delivery of their produce.

FATE OF THE "DANUBE."

A gala occasion was that while the ship was tarrying in the harbor. "Upon the bluffs groups of individuals were seated, horsemen were racing over the plains in every direction, some passing through the surf bearing hides on their heads, while others landed from small boats por tions of the ship's cargo." It was a merry sight and merry was the music of their voices, ming ling with the sound of the waves, as long as th ship lay at anchor. Great was the excitemen when were opened the commodities received i exchange. There were ribbons and laces, knives dress goods, silks, satins, home furnishings, an many modern farm implements which were reve lations indeed. "There was something for every one, old and young, including the humble In dians, each of whom was sure to receive som present in honor of the occasion, and who too a great interest in the cargo. Thus passed th day, some departing, some arriving; till lon after sunset the long white road leading to th pueblo appeared a living panorama."

Though today one of the safest harbors on th continent of North America—as a result of th government breakwater, which affords adequat protection from the much dreaded "southeast er,"—yesterday, as it were, San Pedro was precarious anchorage during the winter season when the prevalent winds shifted toward th south. Seasoned mariners learned how to be i readiness for a sudden move to the open sea a well as when to avoid the port altogether. Oc casionally a novice appeared, and was sure t suffer dire consequences. The sad fate of th brig "Danube," which sailed into the roadstea at San Pedro one December day in 1830, is painful demonstration of the fury of this south east wind.

One Christmas Eve, thinking all was well o shipboard, the captain left his ship lying at an chor while he spent the holiday at Pueblo Lo Angeles, twenty-five miles away. With littl warning, a fierce southerly gale began to blow The "Danube," dragging anchor, was drive ashore, a total wreck. The crew and officers twenty-eight in number, were all saved, but th boat was broken beyond recovery. When th news of the disaster reached the pueblo, a cav alcade of horsemen came to the assistance o the unhappy mariners. It was possible to sa vage some of the provisions only, the brig itse being left to the mercy of the waves. For man a day the mutilated ship furnished timbers an equipment for various craft constructed in th Bay of San Pedro. J. J. Warner states that th "Danube" was the first and only boat sent ou by New York merchants prior to the year 184

As to the fate of the sailors, the hospitabl Californians endeavored to conduct them to Lo Angeles by the usual means of motivation in th Mexican province, namely, upon horseback. Bu the men of the luckless brig proved no exceptio to the notorious incapacity of the sailor to mar age a horse. The diabolical nature of the hal tamed mustangs who reared into the air, throw ing their riders unceremoniously to the ground was not encouraging to the amateurs. Convince of the futility of that means of conveyance, th kindly Californians, themselves the best riders i the world, procured a number of lumbering ox carts and, loading the helpless sailors into them finally reached Los Angeles. The hospitality o the residents of the isolated pueblo knew n bounds—for hospitality is inherent in the Span ish blood. The unfortunate seamen were fete with roast beef and wine and, in fact, every del cacy the little town afforded. For the time being at least, there was obliterated from their mind their ill-starred luck.

guello was the Mexican governor of California and to him was addressed, by two young adventurers, a request for permission to erect a rough shack near the beach to serve as a depository for produce while awaiting the desultory arrival of infrequent trading ships. Governor Arguello answered the request by issuing the following edict:

"To the Constitutional Alcalde of the Pueblo de Senora de Los Angeles: I have granted on this day a memorial presented to me by the Senores Don Luis Macalla and Don Guillermo Hartnell, permitting them to erect a house at the building. Arguello. Monterey, May 21, 1823." the Port of San Pedro, for which reason let no one oppose them in any way in the erection of

The little shack, 100 feet by 50 feet, afterwards known as the "hide house," was summarily erected and became a factor in the lucrative hide business until the year 1829, when it was turned over to Padre Jose Sanchez, the farfamed friar at Mission San Gabriel. After the disbanding of the missions, the franchise was again transferred, this time to Don Abel Stearns, an American, whose commercial activities and high character elevated him to a position of high respect and esteem among the citizens of early California. The enterprising Don Abel soon erected an addition to the existing building and made sundry repairs. No reference to any other structure at the harbor, until the appearance of A. W. Timms in 1852, is mentioned by early visitors at San Pedro.

By the year 1842 San Pedro had made s strides in the way of settlement. Duflot de Mo ras, attache to the French legation in Mexic sent by his government to make a scientific e ploration of the California ports and harbo visited San Pedro between the years 1840 a 1842. In his report to the French governme at Paris he stated: "One can see near the b some houses, formerly serving as warehouses f hides and other merchandise that have been se out to the surrounding missions."

A short distance north and east of Point Fe min was for many years a debarkation poi known as Sepulveda Landing, a name deriv from the owners of the 30,000-acre Rancho P los Verdes, upon a portion of which San Ped has grown up. This name was later supersede by the title Timm's Point, a name which clur to the little promontory for many years. Her in 1852, came A. W. Timms and built himself dwelling upon the tide lands from the wreck the brig "Mary Jane." The craft had been blow ashore in a southeast gale, stern first. Wit stones, she was moored on the beach as s floated in. Most of the hulk was high and dr except for the spring tides. With a transfer timbers from the prow to the grounded ster the "Mary Jane" made an odd, but very con fortable, home. Timms engaged in fishing an later combined with the Sepulvedas in the "r ceiving" and "forwarding" business and in th operation of the warehouse at the landing.

Don Abel was quick to see the necessity of improved means of transportation between the port and Pueblo Los Angeles. He succeeded in obtaining donations of produce, money and labor from interested parties, and the first highway improvements from Los Angeles to the ocean were made. Among the subscribers were the following names of note: Don Abel Stearns; Don Juan Sepulveda, part owner of Rancho Palos Verdes, across which the road was laid out; Don Thomas Yorba of Rancho Santiago; Don T. Temple, Don Juan Bandini and Avila Sanchez, all respected and prosperous citizens of the region. Another interesting subscriber was the master of the trading-ship "California."

After the disbandment of the missions by the Mexican government in the early '30s, the commerce of the harbor suffered somewhat of a setback, for it was the thrifty friars who were the heaviest purchasers of the traders' wares. Padre Jose Sanchez of Mission San Gabriel is said to have purchased, at one time, the whole of one ship's cargo.

TRANSPORTATION FROM PORT TO PUEBLO

The old "carreta," the primitive conveyanc of early California, merits description. Th wheels, the most striking part of this singula vehicle, were often cut from the end of a syca more log a little over two feet in diameter, wit a hole bored through. The axle, usually, was piece of wood eight inches square, with a tongu fastened to it long enough to be used with yoke of oxen. The ends of the axle were roughl rounded, leaving something of a shoulder. Th wheels were retained in place by a big lynch-pin Upon the axle and tongue was placed a strong frame of square-hewed timbers, answering fo bed pieces. A yoke was fastened to the horns o the oxen by strong, narrow strips of rawhide and the tongue was fastened to the yoke in th same way. The driver of this unique vehicl was usually an Indian; for in the early days th Indians did most of the manual labor. By th side or in front of the oxen, he plodded along the dusty road, armed with a long-pointed cud- gel, of which he made spasmodic use, to urge along the slow-moving beasts. The wheels of the cart gave agonizing shrieks, as they revolved, announcing the carreta's arrival long before it came into view.

There was no stage line for the conveyance of passengers or mails from San Pedro to Los Angeles, prior to the year 1852. Previous to that time a "caballada" (band of horses) were kept in pasture at the landing. When a vessel was sighted in the offing, the mustangs were rounded up, saddled and bridled, ready for the convenience of passengers to the city. As the steeds were often only half-broken bronchos, and the passengers mostly newcomers from the "States" and unused to the tricks of the bucking mustangs, the trip too often ended in the passengers arriving at the pueblo on foot.

For several years the passenger fare between the pueblo and the port was $10, while freight was $50 per ton. Now it can be carried across the continent for that. Soon, however, after the American regime in California began and American customs supplanted those of Mexico, several stage companies set up in business. The rivalry between the competing lines was bitter, indeed. Each tried to outdo the other in rates, routes and running-time. The $10 fare was brought down to $7.50, then to $5, and finally to 50 cents. The neck-and-neck races between the rival lines were occasions for much comment and furnished opportunity for extravagant betting.

The stages were of the old army ambulance type, carrying nine passengers inside and from two to five, beside the driver, outside. To this lumbering vehicle were harnessed as vicious looking herds of broncho mules as the country produced, which required the services of a half-dozen Indians and Mexican "vaqueros" (cowboys) before they were effectively subdued and hitched to the conveyances. Now and then, for diversion, when the driver cracked the inevitable whip for the start, it would occur to the capricious "leaders" to stand erect in their harness, either on fore or hind feet; whereupon the operation of reducing the rearing steeds to an effective state of tranquility must be undertaken again.

The drivers of these old-time stages were in a class by themselves. Each and every one prided himself on being an expert in his profession—lord in his way, captain of his craft, the dismay of timid passengers. Soon all was ready, and off they went, amidst shouts and cracking of whips, the stages careening and rocking, on the verge of toppling over at the slightest rut in the road. Bancroft says: "He who travels by stage, must resign his liberty and place his destiny, for the time being, in the hands of the august commander." In seasons when the roads were good, the trip of twenty-seven miles could be made in a couple of hours. The fastest time on record was one hour and eighteen minutes for the entire distance, including three changes of horses.

When General W. S. Hancock, assigned to duty in California,—Hancock later distinguished himself in the Civil War, at the Battle of Gettysburg,—disembarked at San Pedro, he took one of these stages to his post in Los Angeles. Mrs. Hancock, in her "Reminiscences," gives a thrilling account of the trip, in the year 1858: "The Concord coach was made ready for the wild ride . . . behind six untamed California ponies, two of which had never before been in harness." Mrs. Hancock protested against riding behind such a lawless team, but General Banning—his stage line was the best known of all the Los Angeles-San Pedro lines—assured her that there was no alternative but remaining on the beach alone all night. From the start, with lash applied, the horses were on the run, General Banning assuring her that there was no danger under his skillful handling, and safe delivery at the Bella Union, the Los Angeles hotel, was faithfully performed.

Freight never reached Los Angeles from San Pedro by any such rapid transit until the completion of the primitive railroad, in 1869. For several decades previous to that, the eighteen- and twenty-mule teams, with their cumbersome loads and their several drivers, were no uncommon sight along the sandy road between the city and its seaport.

HARBOR DEVELOPMENT.

Aside from the exacting restrictions placed on California commerce by the governments of Spain and Mexico, the outstanding obstacle to the growth of the seaport of San Pedro was the fact that, in the early days, it never was a legal port of entry. All vessels had first to put in at Monterey, the capital of the territory of California. It was not until the dues were paid and certificate obtained from the customs office there, that ships were entitled to enter any other California port. After the termination of the Mexican War, in 1848, and American occupation was asserted in the province, San Pedro was made a legal port of entry. Don David Alexander was appointed first customs officer under American rule.

As trade increased, an occasional shack sprang up to care for the industry. In 1858, Phineas Banning completed the first wharf of any consequence ever erected in the place. The "Los Angeles Star" for April 24, 1858, contained the following interesting item: "Phineas Banning has nearly completed a wharf 200 feet in length. Schooners will now be able to discharge passengers without the use of lighters."

The little harbor still suffered the serious disability of its exposure to the treacherous "southeaster," the woe of many a hapless vessel shipwrecked upon the shore. To meet the situation shipping gradually shifted toward what is now the City of Wilmington, and today designated as the "Inner Harbor." By act of Congress, in 1874, the name of the port was actually changed to Wilmington. All this interfered seriously with the prosperity of San Pedro; hence it continued to remain barren of improvement. The establishment of the government lighthouse on Point Fermin, in 1875, revived the interest in the "Outer Harbor," as San Pedro is sometimes called. The commerce was such as to justify the building of a railroad from Los Angeles to San Pedro, which has subsequently become a part of the Southern Pacific system. This, in turn, reacted in giving a greater impetus to commerce.

The modern era of the harbor, however, may be said to have begun with the erection, by the Federal Government, of the great breakwater completed in the year 1910. From that instant trade began steadily to increase. Another gigantic impetus to San Pedro trade was given by the opening of the Panama Canal, in 1914. In the year 1909 the City of Los Angeles extended its boundaries to the sea, so as to include its seaport, San Pedro. The most rapid growth has occurred within the last few years, until today the tonnage, as reported for the year 1926, totaled 23,067,365 tons, brought by ships from all parts of the world. The valuation is estimated at more than $800,000,000.

Today, San Pedro leads the world in its importation of lumber and the exportation of petroleum. It leads all other American ports in tonnage of intercoastal commerce; it stands fifth in tonnage of foreign commerce, according to statistics of the United States Shipping Board. New York alone, for the last three years, exceeded the total tonnage of ocean commerce. With the marvelous progress of the region of the Great Southwest, which pours its treasure through the gateway of San Pedro, it would be scarcely possible to predict the future that awaits Cabrillo's "Bay of Smokes."

Mary E. Brusie
(SECRETARY, N.S.G.W. AND N.D.G.W. CENTRAL HOMELESS CHILDREN COMMITTEE.)

AFTER SEVENTEEN YEARS OF DEVOTION and financial responsibility to a cause, and vitally interested in its progress and standards, many of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West are asking the question: "Are all of the children placed for adoption through our Central Committee turning out as well as the youngsters we've got in our town? Some of the children must be twenty-one years old now. Hundreds are sixteen years and over. How are they measuring up with the average boys and girls who have not been deprived of the influence and training of their natural parents?"

Because the stork keeps those actively engaged in the work so very busy during every working day of the year selecting new homes for the little ones who come into the world unprovided for—229 for the year ended March 31, 1927—the workers of the Central Committee have had time to visit but a very small percentage of the children placed for adoption sixteen or seventeen years ago. The full number of placements now totals 3,003. The supervision of the children placed each year, and that of the unadopted left under supervision from the year before, keeps everybody busy. The reports of foster-parents, however, who have written us of their children's progress, or who have called in the office to tell us of their happiness, to which may be added a small army of children known to our members throughout the state, entitle one to the belief that a large proportion of foster children placed in permanent homes for adoption when infants are fully meeting the hopes and aspirations of their foster-parents.

Those individuals in a community watching the development of an adopted child who has failed to measure up to the expectations of everyone concerned, invariably decry the wisdom of taking some one's else child to rear. I am convinced that if it were possible to make a foster-child understand that upon him and his conduct depended the future happiness of hosts of other children, he would stop and think a bit, perhaps, before misbehaving. Countless children there are in the world who, like their parents—natural or otherwise—are quite indifferent as to any odium that might fall upon themselves, but who would hesitate to make others suffer because of their shortcomings. Just as in grammar-school a boy will confess to misconduct rather than keep his whole class in after school, or the guilty boy in a reform-school will "own up" rather than be responsible for his whole company's missing a football game on a bright spring Saturday afternoon.

A COMFORT TO HIS PARENTS.

The real "fly in the ointment" is the seeming inability, on the part of the majority of neighbors and friends, to feel the same tolerance that the foster-parents do when comparing the adopted child with the child of natural parents. It can be noted, however, that their enthusiasm is correspondingly great if an adopted child is any kind of a marvel. But most children are not marvels; neither were you nor I.

A foster-mother came into our office at 959 Phelan Building, San Francisco, not long ago with her eighteen-year-old daughter whom she had taken into her heart and home when the child was two years of age. She was a lovely girl to look upon—modest, gracious, well poised, responsive, with bright eyes, no paint upon her cheeks save nature's own, soft, brown hair—a real flower. We had been told of the girl's development each year by her teacher, who was a Past Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West. The mother and your secretary went into the inner office while the girl interested herself in a little baby waiting in the outer office to be taken to his new home, and when the door was closed I fairly gasped:

A DAINTY LITTLE MISS

"What a lovely girl!"

"Isn't she? Isn't she?" replied the mother, and "Oh, I cannot begin to tell you one-half of her lovely qualities. She is refined, womanly, trustworthy and honest, a good student and a regular pal. I thank God every day that she is mine!"

"And the girl owes a few thanks for having you," thought I. Many things this mother told me with pride beaming in her face and love in her heart.

WILLING SUBJECTS.

One of the incidents that stood out was about the summer before, when her daughter's high-school class had planned a moonlight picnic. The girl was looking forward with the rest of her friends to a wonderful time. Her mother asked her what older person was going to accompany them on the trip—purposely avoiding the word "chaperone"—and the girl replied: "Why, I don't know, mother, but I'll find out." Sh came home at night somewhat downcast and tol her mother that the girls at school thought sh wasn't right in her head when she asked thei about some older person going with them. The all hooted at the idea; said it wasn't being don and that she was old fashioned; that they a had partners and were going to have a goo time.

She put the question: "Shall I go?" to he mother, who very wisely told her that she was senior in high-school, had reached the age whe she knew right from wrong, fun from folly, an she knew her mother's ideas about such thing so she must make her own decision. Two day later she came into her mother's room and, witl out any of the holier-than-thou air, very simpl told her mother that she had decided not to g and had so informed her classmates. This wa the only adopted child in the school. Perhap the foster-parents throughout the girl's earl years of training had lived what they preache Natural parents, sometimes, are too busy keep ing their own social affairs running smoothly, c too confident that their own children will b strong enough to withstand the temptations an combat the impulses of youth, to worry muc about what their own children are doing, wher they are going or when they are coming home.

At the last Grand Parlor of the Native Daugh ters, Chispa Parlor No. 40 of Ione, Amado County, presented a very beautiful baby baske to the Central Committee. A millionaire's chil could not have had made for him a lovelier c more completely equipped basket, with a large blue satin bow for decoration. About Christma time this basket was sent to one of "Our Boys, who came into the care of the agency when s years of age. We knew of his marriage and c the new baby and addressed the basket to th baby. In acknowledging it the father said: "W received the package and we think the basket beautiful. We got quite a kick out of Peggy getting mail at ten days old. I am working f a fine old man over sixty years old. He has six-hundred-acre farm, one hundred acres in o chard and hay. He built us a nice four-roo house and we are very comfortable. There plenty to do, but I like to do it. My wife is ge ting around again and I am sure glad, becau I think the world of my wife and baby." A goo citizen for California!

One of the first children your secretary too to her new home was a little girl of five yea You have heard the story, many times, how aft supper we went over the four-acre place with l fruit on the trees, the strawberries in the gra flowers everywhere, and of the child's delig when she saw the five-foot dividing fence co ered with gorgeous sweetpeas, and her exclam tion: "Oh, are those 'ours' too?" and of t understanding smile and the "she's alread adopted-us" expression that flashed between th man and his wife. Years later the foster-mother writes:

"Edna was married November 5, 1922, to Frank ——, a very fine young man of twenty-three years, sober and industrious, and his family treat our girl like their own daughter. They have their home and automobile and a dear little daughter." The little girl wrote: "I am not the same little girl whom you brought up to the country twelve years ago when I called: 'Hello, daddy,' to the Chinaman who was out in the orchard. Do you remember?" in rearing their daughter as the foster-parents exercised in rearing the mother.

The other night a sixteen-year-old boy came into the office to inquire about his parents. He was taken for adoption when three years old. He is going to night-school, working in an insurance office during the day and earning eighty dollars a month. A handsome lad, talented in music and able to add to his income through his violin playing. He is living at the Y. M. C. A., visiting his foster-parents' home once a week. He caused his foster-parents no end of worry and many sleepless nights. His only comment now is that they did not understand him. How many boys who never have been away from their own parents preface their confidences with: "My parents don't understand me"? Both groups of boys will look back some day and, thinking of their parents, will say: "Wasn't I the bunk when I was sixteen or eighteen?" as the case may be. "A fellow never knows when he is well off."

The elder boy is a student, with a rare talent for mathematics. After reaching home the mother wrote: "Virginia is our first fat baby and all sunshine, a darling. r christened Thanksgiving afternoon. Such a vely service. During the service Mr. —— was most overcome, and when I asked him later hy he was so moved, he said that he looked at s dear family—to him such a lovely group—and wondered what he had done to deserve such treasures and such happiness. I want you to know this because you all helped us to get our three jewels and make our home complete."

There is the girl of sixteen, adopted when a year old, who came to the office on her way to Los Angeles after three months' traveling with her parents in Eastern cities. "No grandparents could think more of their own grandchildren than they do of our daughter," the foster-parents said with pride. Later, there came an invitation to her graduation from high-school.

Another adopted daughter has fifty thousand dollars in her own name. She has been taught to sew, to keep house, to do all the things she may need to do should her parents' wealth go flying through the window or should she choose to marry the man of moderate means. Are natural parents always so wise?

From all over this great State of California come words of praise and commendation and appreciation. About this child with an unusual talent for music; that one for dramatics; another with remarkable business ability, graduated from high-school and keeping books for a dairy firm; another going to college and coming home unspoiled; boys succeeding on the farm with part ownership in a chicken ranch, having begun when tiny boys with one old hen. All these tend to make one expect much from children who are given the proper home training.

In a study of "How Foster Children Turn Out" made by the State Charities Aid Association of New York, the report deals with nine hundred and ten children placed in foster-homes who are now from eighteen to forty years of age. Seventy-seven and two-tenths percent of the subjects are considered capable. "It is a study from a social worker's point of view as to the community value of this particular group of grown-up children. The group boasts no startling successful careers, but it reaches a good general level. The children placed and now grown have taken in the main a respected place in their communities, and have shown common sense, a due regard for other people's rights and have met their personal and social obligations honestly and adequately."

An encouraging report, and one that gives inspiration to those who understand the seriousness of their responsibilities. One can see no reason to doubt that the same, perhaps higher, percentage of children placed each year by the Homeless Children Committee will "make good," and thus justify the interest and fulfill the hopes of every Native Son and Native Daughter of the Golden West.

BACKWARD GLANCE AT NATIVE SONS

Chrales H. Smith
(FIRST SECRETARY, NATIVE SONS GOLDEN WEST.)

ORGANIZED JULY 11, 1875, WITH seventeen young men present, by May 1876, when incorporation papers were filed, the membership in the Native Sons of the Golden West had increased to 120. How many of that number are still living, and how many are now members of the organization?

These are questions frequently asked by recently initiated members, when they find that it was my privilege to have been one of the number present at the time of oganization.

Leaving San Francisco at the close of the year 1875 to return to my home at Antioch, Contra Costa County, and later going to Shasta County to live, I gave up my membership in the organization because there was then no other parlor in the state. Later on, Southern California became my place of residence, and still later, as a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109, Los Angeles, I again became actively interested in the Order.

HISTORIC DOCUMENT IN ORDER NATIVE SONS GOLDEN WEST.

The session of the Grand Parlor held at Santa Rosa last year afforded an opportunity for consultation with other charter members, and also with prominent members of the Order long resident in San Francisco.

The result of checking over the charter list of 120 showed that at that time there were but fifteen or sixteen of them still members of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. We had no means whereby we could ascertain how many others of the charter members might still be living, but not connected with the Order.

Up to June 1, 1876, there was but one Parlor in existence, which eventually became California Parlor No. 1. Later other Parlors were organized, and in 1878 the first Grand Parlor met, in San Francisco.

At the date of organization, July 11, 1875, the following officers were elected: President, J. A. Steinbach; first vice-president, Jasper Fishbourne; second vice-president, F. G. W. Fenn; third vice-president, S. P. Harmon; recording secretary, Charles H. Smith; financial secretary, H. F. Harmon; treasurer, H. C. Stevenson; marshal, Fred Streeper; executive committee, John E. McDougald, S. M. Stemwood, Myles O'Donnell, Abraham Mayer, Charles D. Olds. They were chosen for a term to end in December of that year.

The officers installed in January, 1876, were: President, Jasper Fishbourne; first vice-president, H. C. Stevenson, second vice-president, Thos. C. Bee; third vice-president, Frank W. Yale; recording secretary, D. B. Marx; financial secretary, Tom L. Stovall; treasurer, John H. Grady; marshal, D. W. Wepley; executive committee, John E. McDougald, Edward A. Brackett, George W. Coffey, H. F. Harmon, Henry Marx; surgeon (a new office), B.T.Mouser,M.D.

At the time of organization the membership was open "to males over eighteen years of age, who were born in California, or west of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, after the 7th day of July, 1846, being the day on which Commodore Sloat raised the American flag at the City of Monterey." This was subsequently amended t read: "White males who were born within th State of California," and, still later, to "Whit male citizens of the United States who wer born within the State of California."

Below will be found the roster of charte members, which includes all received up to Jun 1, 1876, together with the place and date birth and the number of their membership ce ticate. THE PRIDE which the Native Sons and Daughters of California feel in their great State is best expressed in the vast development work they have performed, and in the loyalty and high purpose with which they are approaching the tasks of the future.

In a commonwealth so blessed as is ours, to improve and enlighten the future we have but to keep faith with the past.

GOD'S OCEAN

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

When I see God's great ocean—
With breadth that cannot be surpassed,
And waves ever restless in motion,
With billows so deep and so vast;
Its blue like the sky hanging o'er us,
Its white like the clean driven snow,
With a glory that's spread out before us
Like a great "sea of glass" here below—
I catch in its meaning a token
Of His goodness and mercy to me,
Like a chain of rich blessings unbroken
Reaching out to Eternity.

SAN PEDRO--THE PORT OF OPPORTUNITY

Frank A. Vanderlip
SAN PEDRO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

SAN PEDRO, CALIFORNIA, FIFTH PORT in the United States, and the harbor of the City of Los Angeles, nestles in the arm of a panne velvet group of hills which rise 1,482 feet above the cobalt Pacific in one of the most exquisitely cordial climates in the world. The commercial rendezvous of Occident and Orient, it has an economic future rivaled only by its magnificent residential possibilities.

Immediately behind the port are the valleys and mountains of one of the richest agricultural and mineral regions in the world, Southern California. In the farther hinterlands are mining, and stock and grain raising states that are coming to look to San Pedro as their logical sea outlet. To south and north stretches a coastal plain in which nearly all soil products are plentifully represented, and upon the slopes of whose bordering mountains stand the greatest timber resources of the United States. Five thousand miles west is the opulent, populous continent of Asia. The Pacific, with its plenteous marine life, lies at its door. And, fourteen hundred miles southeast, between lethargic Mexico and nascent South America, is the Panama Canal.

BUSINESS DISTRICT OF THE SAN PEDRO OF TODAY.

—Courtesy "San Pedro Daily Pilot."

The mathematical location of this center of world commerce is 33 degrees 45 minutes north latitude, 118 degrees 16 minutes west longitude. To be more enlightening, if less accurate, the City of San Pedro overlooks a broadly crescent shaped California bay ninety-seven nautical miles northwest of San Diego, 368 nautical miles southeast of San Francisco, and twenty land miles by track or boulevard south of the business center of the City of Los Angeles, although it is a part of the latter. Its climate would be like that of Charleston, South Carolina, in whose latitude it is, but for the tempering Japan current.

With rubber from the Malay and Strait settlements, tea and spices from the Orient, copra from Polynesia, and all the heterogenous mass of cargoes from a thousand world ports, comes the spirit of romance which is afoot every day in San Pedro. People who live in the mild, salty breeze that fans Palos Verdes Hills look down upon the tile roofs of a city of 45,000 permanent inhabitants, in whose streets walk the five races of mankind. They look out over commercial shipping and the United States battle fleet in the finest of man-made harbors on the sky-blue father of oceans. The inspiring ensemble of modern civilization and cosmopolitan glamour, is the product of the less than thirty years since a government-constructed breakwater transformed a batch of sandbars and marshes into the skeleton of a port.

Before the advent of the breakwater, the port, then more properly bay, had a leisurely history of approximately three centuries and a half, more interesting to the student of exploration and early settlement than the economist. This ancient background, however, lends to busy wharves and foamy headland added charm. As one's imagination peoples Manhattan and the Hudson River valley with quaint costumed Dutchman, swaying post chaise and ragged continental, so here do naked redskin, doubleted Spaniard, robed padre and hard-bitten seamen color the early picture [described elsewhere in this issue of The Grizzly Bear].

Today the pueblo has become metropolitan Los Angeles, of 1,268,680 inhabitants. Today San Pedro ranks second in the United States for the amount of ocean-borne commerce handled over its wharves. In the march of progress, the port has become one with the ramifying pueblo.

During the last fiscal year, ending June 1, 6,417 ships handling 23,067,365 tons of commerce valued at $804,014,311 called at this port. The net tonnage of the ships totaled 17,469,291. Of these vessels, 1,287 brought 4,838,018 tons of foreign commerce alone valued at $122,876,639. Although San Pedro gets more of the Panama Canal's trade than any other port, such has been the growth of its foreign trade that intercoastal traffic last year brough only eleven more ships and little over a millio more tons than did foreign trade. Becaus Southern California is the fastest-growing regio in the world, lumber imports of San Pedro ar the greatest on the globe. Last year they wer 1,183,181,328 board-feet. Because approximate ly one-ninth of the world's production of petro leum comes from wells within a few miles o the port, its oil export is the greatest in th world. Last year it totaled 122,915,588 barrels

In 1900, after more than fifty years of Amer ican supervision, San Pedro, influenced by th remarkable growth of Los Angeles to 100,00 population, felt its importance. Five hundre ships called in twelve months. This overpower ing commerce gave support to those who main tained that a breakwater was demanded by th port's situation. After a false start, the break water was finally under construction in 1900 On it and on dredging and jetty work the gov ernment spent $9,091,257.

The breakwater extends, boomerang shape south from the tip of Point Fermin 2.11 miles On its seaward tip is a revolving light seventy three feet high, whose 67,000 candle-power ray have a range of fourteen miles. The harbor behind the seamole has approximately forty miles of waterfront. The old lagoons have been dredged and the sand bars jettied and developed. The main channel, inside the biggest deposit of sand, Terminal Island, is 400 feet wide from the Outer Harbor to the end of its wharves, with a full width of 1,000 feet between the wharves at San Pedro and East San Pedro (Terminal Island), thence widening to a turning basin 1,600 feet in diameter opposite a branch lagoon, the west basin. The controlling depth is forty-eight feet at the harbor entrance, thirty-five feet to the Outer Harbor wharves, and the main channel is being dredged from thirty to thirty-five feet.

The actual construction work of channels and terminals commenced in 1912 and the first municipal wharf was completed in 1914, soon after the Panama Canal was finished. Tonnage over the wharves in that year reached a new peak of

Union-Ethyl
As Its Finest Motor Fuel

THE wide acceptance of Union-Ethyl by western motorists is the best recommendation for this super motor fuel.

It proves that western motorists appreciate a gasoline that takes them up the hills at faster speeds than they have ever gone before.

A gasoline that gives instant acceleration, immediately overcoming sluggishness in traffic.

A gasoline that eliminates carbon troubles, resulting in a sweeter, smoother, finer running motor.

If you haven't yet tried Union-Ethyl, do it now.

1,682,794, increasing to 2,312,387 tons in 1917, when development was stopped by the war. Resumption of commerce after the armistice was followed by the discovery of oil at Signal Hill and the advance of port business by leaps and bounds to the high mark of 26,553,066 tons in 1924. The increase in tonnage was accompanied by phenomenal building activity.

Tonnage fell off in 1925 to 22,265,421, but increases in the quantity of manufactured goods handled, including oil refined in new refineries in the Harbor District, kept up values. At present, tonnage again is on a gradual increase, with steadily mounting values. From the first, San Pedro, benefiting more than any other port from the Panama Canal, has made the federal waterway pay. The tolls on San Pedro oil alone pay the passage's operating expenses.

The harbor's exports include such various products as whale oil, cotton, borax, pearl extract, fertilizer, dried fruits, fine cloth and furniture. Scarcely anything is grown or manufactured that does not pass over these wharves in a year. Steamship lines calling at the port total more than 150.

Ninety per cent of the water frontage is municipally owned and municipal wharves total 33,785 linear-feet, private wharves 24,335 feet. The Municipal Harbor Board owns and operates twenty-two sheds of a combined length of 13,048 feet. Two of them are of the two-story type, 100 feet wide and 980 feet long, designed especially for the Oriental trade. All wharves are accessible by rail and paved roads.

A six-story and basement terminal warehouse, 152 by 482 feet with an area of 480,000 square feet and equipped with the latest freight handling devices, is operated by a warehouse company on agreement with the city. It is served by the municipal belt-line railway so that goods can be moved quickly to any of the wharves or inland. A portion of the warehouse is under United States Government bond. Two cotton compresses are operated in connection with the warehouse, and the port has become the shipping point for California and Arizona cotton, highly valued for its long fibre; each press has a capacity of sixty-five bales an hour.

The vast lumber import is handled by thirteen lumber companies, seven of which occupy 200 acres of harbor land with wharfage. Oil loading facilities, including docks, bunkering barges, storage tanks and case oil warehouses, valued at millions of dollars, are maintained by nine oil companies. The harbor has two completely equipped shipbuilding and drydock plants capable of repairing or building the largest of vessels. Both are private enterprises operated on a paying basis. One of them owns the largest floating drydock on the Pacific Coast.

Fire protection, in addition to the private fomite and water outfits of the various concerns, consists of two city fireboats and ten land companies. This equipment, to be increased shortly, is considered ample for the singularly concentrated harbor, in spite of the great oil and lumber fire hazards. One of the fireboats is the largest and most fully equipped in the United States.

The waterfront is served by the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific and the Pacific Electric lines and by the 57.5 miles of tracks of the municipal terminal railroad. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railway has but recently made direct connection with the waterfront by way of the municipal line over a temporary route. Within two years it is planning to enter the harbor, with the other transcontinental lines in a joint arrangement, under the Dominguez Slough viaduct.

Appreciation of the shipping advantages of San Pedro is growing fast among manufacturers of products which have a market in Western United States, South or Central America, and in trans-Pacific countries. Cheap power and ideal living and working conditions are other factors which enter the situation. Notable among the latest converts to this port is Henry Ford, who is building a million dollar assembly plant.

With oil, the harbor district's chief item of production, must be considered fish, for San Pedro is the greatest tuna packing port in the world. And within the last five years it has gone after the sardine business, in which New England formerly was supreme, and now packs more sardines than the rest of the United States put together. There are about 1,200 tuna fishing boats here, and twenty-one canneries, employing 2,657 to 7,000 persons. The property investment in the local fishing industry is about $8,000,000, and the cost of various types of boat varies from $2,000 jig boats to purse seiners worth from $15,000 to $20,000. During the 1925-26 season, the San Pedro canneries packed 3,188,402 cases of one-pound oval cans of sardines and 3,757,445 cases of tuna.

Nearly all of the tuna pack is consumed in the United States, whereas eighty percent of the sardine pack is exported. The principal sardine markets are Argentine, Manila, Strait Settlements, India, Dutch East Indies, United Kingdom, Belgium and the Orient. It is a well-known fact that sardines canned at San Pedro are sold more cheaply in Japan than fresh fish. Japan is a heavy buyer of fish-meal fertilizer. Fish oil, soap, shortening, poultry food, oil and various chemicals are among the byproducts from the local fish industry.

Amazement engendered by consideration of the port's miraculous development is replaced by a thrill of prophetic enthusiasm as one begins to realize what the harbor's destiny is going to mean to this and that industry. But turning from wharves to city, thence to outlying seacove and sweeping hill slope, prophetic enthusiasm becomes inspiration as the full significance of the city's situation is apprehended.

The prospect of a city at its feet is a welcome adjunct to any residential colony. When the city is a cosmopolitan, colorful port and its background the blue Pacific, blending with the motley of the city and the fawns and greens of sloping shore in care-erasing harmony, the situation needs little to be artistically ideal. What little may be lacking in the situation of Vista Del Ora and Miraleste tracts, which overlook the port picture from the side of San Pedro Hill, is supplied in the Point Fermin Palisades development along the shore cliffs just west of the city. These are the residential outposts of San Pedro and are the forerunners of an army of others which will occupy the thousands of acres of the Palos Verdes Hills as San Pedro works out its destiny apart from commerce and fish canneries.

Between the wharves and the newer residential developments lie the bulk of the homes, the lodges, churches, schools, theatres, fire stations, stores and hotels of the men and women who are carrying on as San Pedro's dual destiny is in the making. They, with their children, number 43,484. They are drawn from every state in the union as well as Canada, Mexico, Europe and Asia; almost none from Africa, with the sturdy commonsense stock from the Middle West predominating. Few, if any, of them enjoyed previously more satisfactory living conditions than they have now in San Pedro.

Over pressagented as the California climate has been in the past, its importance cannot be overemphasized. Few in the East realize that the almost total absence of frost means, besides bodily comfort and insignificant fuel bills, inexpensive homes, low-priced food, increased efficiency in work and leisure, and sun and fresh-air generated health. The California climate is at its mildest in San Pedro, through direct contact with the Japan current and hill protection from oceanic winds. Ship transported, and therefore cheap, lumber in its front yard, and vast truck gardening areas adjoining the harbor district make house construction and food even better priced than in other parts of Southern California.

With these unusual advantages, San Pedro has all the ordinary conveniences of the average American city. It has 100 miles of paved streets; nine elementary schools and a high school, with two more primary schools and a junior high-school in process of construction; twelve churches, two libraries, a $750,000 Y.M.C.A., five luncheon clubs; a lodge of practically every order in the United States, six theatres, numerous hotels and hundreds of stucco apartment houses, parks and playgrounds; in fact, everything that the citizens of a modern community need for the worship of God and the pursuit of happiness.

The San Pedran, although he is able to accomplish, aided by the climate and his happy frame of mind, a lot of work in six or eight hours, and has more time for recreation than the average American, cannot hope to avail himself of half the recreational facilities at hand. Were there not two golf courses, comparable only to those in the Scotch hills; were there no theatres, no libraries, there still would be the sea, practically inexhaustible in its power of refreshing mind and body. San Pedro's golf courses, its parks and the sea attract thousands of inland pleasure-seekers weekly throughout the year.

One of the refinements of sea recreation at the harbor exists in the California Yacht Club, whose anchorages are occupied by more than 300 yachts. The club grounds, under lease from the Harbor Department, comprise 191,918 square feet improved with a large club building, flowers and trees. Surf bathing is provided at Brighton Beach on Terminal Island, and still-water bathing on the Outer Harbor near the seamole and in the plunges at the "Y" and the city-administered Anderson Memorial center. All manner of salt-water fish are plentiful within a few miles of the breakwater. Among the game fish are tuna, yellowtail, barracuda, sword and sail fish.

For fans, the teams of the fourteen warcraft in the harbor and the garrison of Fort McArthur offer competition of collegiate calibre. Important golf and tennis tournaments, regattas and A.A.U. basketball are among the local sports attractions, and the Los Angeles Coliseum, where intercollegiate games are staged, is but twenty miles away. There are several athletic clubs, and the Y.M.C.A. and center provide well-equipped gymnasiums, hand and volley ball courts and swimming pools. A $2,000,000 country and beach club already is under construction and a new $1,000,000 yacht club is planned for the cover-indented shoreline within a few miles of the western city limits.

Although the city is equipped with plentiful park and playground facilities, one combination park and playground, but partially completed, is exceptional and makes the best of the marine advantages of San Pedro, the contiguous Point Fermin Park and Cabrillo Beach. The park, in its present form, occupies the triangular tableland atop Point Fermin. It is a tree shaded, lawn carpeted, path, shrubbery and flower embroidered jewel of a park, with the sea on two sides of its supporting bluff. Plans of the city park department call for immediate extension of the park half a mile northwest, and parking of its approach on the city side. Eventually the park will extend for miles along the sea.

Bisecting Point Fermin's immediate vista is the harbor breakwater, which juts out almost at its base. On the bay between the seamole and the point is the site of Cabrillo Beach, and the city is condemning all adjoining property to keep all concessions from it. Inside the breakwater will be a still-water bathing beach.

Here, all together in the space of a relatively few acres, will be facilities for a complete marine holiday for man, woman or child. Above, in Point Fermin Park, beneath breeze-tossed foliage, can the philosophically inclined contemplate sea, beach and harbor; can picnic parties lunch, or traveled sixty explain the world to eager seventeen. Below, will be available all the variety of active seaside recreational pursuits patronized by man.

For the bather, will be still water or surf and sandy beach. There will be boats for fishermen, or thsoe who merely wish to feel afloat. At one side of the beach will remain the rocks that harbor fascinating specimens of salt-water life. And, approximately in the center of things, will be the threshold of that most extraordinary promenade, the more than two-mile walk out into the sea upon the breakwater.

There are so many phases of San Pedro and its life that warrant special treatment. One of the big features of the port is its use by the United States battle fleet as a home base. A goodly portion of the personnel of 15,000 officers and men live ashore and are a part of the life of the community. The 240 officers and men of Fort MacArthur are even more closely related to the city, all of them living within its boundaries. The fact that San Pedro is the key point in the defense of the Southern California coast, hinted by the presence of the battleship divisions of the fleet and fort, is another topic that begs development.

But, after all, the big thing in San Pedro, a thing that literally strikes you in the face when you look over city and harbor from the hills, is its future.

The Pueblo of Los Angeles grew up twenty miles inland, as did hundreds of other pueblos in the southwest, because there were plenty of good water and pleasant surroundings. Now, with water plentiful, practically throughout Southern California, and the conception of pleasant surroundings modified by time, the metropolis of Los Angeles is growing towards its harbor, where, economically, it belongs. The rapidity of this growth will depend on how fast the people of the United States realize the advantages of living in a really temperate climate. It is within the realm of probability that a city as large as New York or London will swallow San Pedro as a borough within the next fifty years.

Pleasant, economical living, plentiful natural resources, and proximity to the other great storehouses of natural resources, South America an Asia, are forces which should build the greatest city of the world here eventually.

The commercial, industrial and business development of this great city, however, will not obliterate the residential destiny of San Pedro. Like a ball on the rim of the fan that will be Los Angeles' growth to the sea, the 16,000 acres of Palos Verdes Hills, with their more than ten miles of commercially valueless, rugged seacoast, will remain a sanctuary of soul-exalting vistas, untainted air crisp, with the tang of the ocean, and inviolable quietude. The abruptness of their lofty contours will keep them so.

High in their rambling haciendas of the Palos Verdes Hills will the master minds of the port metropolis of the future re-create conceptions disturbed by the turmoil of the day. A glance around, that will measure city against its background of plain and mountains, and against the biggest ocean of the world, will re-establish things in their proper relation. And as night closes and a billion lights shimmer in the basin, Los Angeles merchant and financier, surgeon, lawyer and builder, will know that he sits with the modern gods on the modern Mount Olympus.

HISTORY AROUND WILMINGTON

Stanley A. Wheeler

AROUND WILMINGTON CENTERS much of the early history of transportation in the southern part of California, for here they built a railroad line to Los Angeles in 1869, the same year that the first trans-continental line was completed to San Francisco. Wilmington also claims the first telegraph connection from the Los Angeles Harbor district to the outside world, and here for many years, as at present, an important shipping industry was carried on.

But perhaps the most picturesque feature was the old camel route, established about 1858 and running to Yuma, Arizona, and other points inland beyond the Colorado Desert. The camel route operated until 1866 and had Wilmington as its extreme western terminus. Part of the old caravan depot still stands and old-timers can point out the spot where the camel corral was located.

From 1862 to 1868 the United States Government stationed soldiers, varying in number from 2,000 to 7,000, in this city, then called Newtown, to distinguish it from Oldtown, or San Pedro. During the Civil War this garrison was active in suppressing any demonstrations which favored the cause of the Southern, or slave, states.

All military activities in Wilmington were centered around the Drum Barracks, built in 1859 with material brought around the Horn aboard sailing ships. This building is still well preserved and is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Keaveny. Mr. Keaveny has gathered together a large collection of historical material and exhibits about his community and the whole of the state.

While occupied as army headquarters for the southwestern states from 1862 to 1868, Drum Barracks was at different times the home of Captain Phil Sheridan, made famous by "Sheridan's Ride" during the Civil War; by Winfield Scott Hancock, Henry Hancock, George Magruder, General George Stoneman, later governor of California, and Lieutenant Hunt, first husband of Helen Hunt-Jackson, author of "Ramona." All were young army officers.

Wilmington was founded in 1858 by General Phineas Banning, soldier, shipping magnate, stageline operator and city planner. With his partner, he is said to have bought the original 2,400 acres of the town from Manuel Domingues at $1.10 per acre. In 1872 the town was incorporated as a city, taking the name of Wilmington in honor of General Banning's native city in Delaware.

Together with San Pedro, Wilmington annexed itself to Los Angeles in 1909 in order that the Harbor of Los Angeles might be developed with Los Angeles funds. Both communities still retain much of their civic identity, however. Wilmington has a population of 15,000 and, in addition to its ever-increasing maritime trade, is now bidding for a place in manufacturing and oil refining.

(JENNIE RAYMOND.)

"DAWN AND THE DONS."

By Tirey L. Ford; A. M. Robertson, San Francisco, Publisher; Price, $3.00.

There is always something inspiring about a book that has been written from the author's personal love for and intimate knowledge of the subject. In the foreword, the author says that he hopes the reader will get as much enjoyment from the reading as he had in the writing of the book.

In the opening chapters, Ford tells about the influence Marco Polo and his travels had upon Christopher Columbus, who was searching for the way to India and, incidentally, opened the way to Cabrillo, then Viscaino, to follow.

It is an everchanging picture we get of the struggle of Father Serra to establish the missions; then came the period of colonization, when Anza led the way overland with a group of Spanish and Mexican settlers. The attempts of the different nations to take possession of California all left their imprint of the lives of the residents.

With the discovery of gold by Marshall and the coming of the Gringo, the idyllic life of the dons gradually disappeared. The daily life of the senor and senora with their large families, their social affairs and religious customs, the author has so minutely described that there is no doubt as to the reason for California's far-famed hospitality.

The Monterey Peninsula, the mecca of the early dons, has changed to a haven for poets, musicians, artists, authors, and those fortunate mortals who are not tied to a life of routine.

The charming black-and-white illustrations of Jo Mora need no word of praise for their appropriateness to the contents of the book. "Dawn and the Dons" is not only a beautiful gift book, but also a valuable reference work, as Ford very carefully quotes his sources of information and has added a very useful index.

"THE AMAZING CHANCE."

By Patricia Wentworth; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Following an accident, Anton Blum, supposedly a German peasant, awakens to talk like a British aviator. Anton cannot remember whether he is Jim Laydon, who was married to Evelyn Prothero, or Jim's cousin, Jack. They looked enough alike to be twins and they were in the

SAN FRANCISCO'S INDUSTRIES

Capen A. Fleming

(MANAGER, INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

THIS IS THE LAST OF THE PRESENT series of industrial articles that began recently in The Grizzly Bear. We have, however, by no means considered all the interesting and important phases of San Francisco's industrial life. However, enough has been written to prove San Francisco's supremacy in very many lines of western industry. A few lines of the city's industry which have not been touched on before will now be dealt with briefly:

Of our food products, we have referred to the local manufacturers of mayonnaise, coffee, sugar, candy, chocolate and yeast, but nothing has been said concerning the manufacture in San Francisco of flavoring extracts, baking powder, crackers, carbonated and cereal beverages, macaroni and chewing gum, nor of the milling of flour, the packing of fruit, meat, tea, tamales and many other commodities.

In the manufacture of macaroni products, for instance, San Francisco is the leader of the West, the South San Francisco plant being the largest of its kind west of Chicago. The headquarters and some important plant units of the largest fruit and vegetable packing corporations in the world are in San Francisco.

The local manufacture of safes and vaults is important, as are a few other items in connection with building and improvements. For instance, in San Francisco we have a lock factory whose output exceeds any other plant of its kind in the West. This plant maintains its own warehouses in New York and Chicago, and exports its locks to foreign countries. Although it may seem peculiar, this factory can ship its product to its New York warehouse cheaper than to the warehouse in Los Angeles, due to the cost of the thirty-mile haul from San Pedro to uptown Los Angeles.

We also lead the West in the manufacture of elevators, the very ones which carry you to your office floor each day. Again, in this line we have in San Francisco the largest factory in Western America. And if we go beyond the bounds of San Francisco to Millbrae, on the San Francisco Peninsula, and to Richmond, we find a very large output of porcelain bathroom fixtures. The Millbrae plant is also marketing a new line of its own make of pottery. The pieces of pottery are beautifully decorated in the firing of crystalline formations, which develop in fantastic designs from the chemical applied to the surface, and which are fused to the surface, but without the loss of their brilliant color.

Aside from furniture proper, which has been touched on previously, we have in the wood products group the manufacture of burial caskets, boxes and barrels, the importance of which warrants mention. The printing and publishing industry, in all its phases, is our largest industry. San Francisco has some nationally-known printers, and the unique character and quality of workmanship give San Francisco undisputed leadership in the field of fine printing and lithographing. This is recognized nationally.

The paint, oil and varnish industry, both in and around San Francisco, is of particular importance. Large plants, together with several smaller ones, turn out a great volume of paint products, which are shipped throughout the entire West.

Important makes of trucks and automobiles are manufactured in San Francisco. These, with other large automobile factories in Oakland, give to the San Francisco Bay area undisputed Western leadership in the manufacture of automotive vehicles.

In the chemical group of manufactures, San Francisco produces perfumery, tooth powder, tooth paste and various other toilet preparations, as well as soap—both toilet and laundry—rust remover, cleansing powder and inks. The cleansing powder is used to clean kettles, sinks and floors of hotels and office buildings.

San Francisco leads the West in the manufacture of newsprint ink. Writing fluids are made here, but newsprint ink gives the big volume. A San Francisco corporation, with a plant at Berkeley, makes this product, while a San Francisco branch industry which has maintained Pacific Coast offices and warehouses here for many years is now building a large new ink plant at South San Francisco. San Francisco-made newsprint ink is shipped from here in tank cars to print the newspapers of the West. This is the only city west of Rochester, New York, where photographic paper is made—that upon which photographic prints are developed.

San Francisco is famous for her high-grade line of engineering, surveying, mining and nautical instruments made by one concern—this being the only city in the entire West where such instruments are made. Another industry has recently been started to manufacture nautical instruments also.

San Francisco has the only bottle cork factory in the western half of the United States, and this is one of our new industries. An older industry makes metal bottle caps, or crown corks, as found on pop bottles. Typewriter and adding machine ribbons, also carbon paper are made here for the office. Tobacco products manufactured here constitute an important industry.

Tin containers are made here in large quantities by four corporations, one of which has three plants within the city limits of San Francisco. These cans bring you your coffee, your canned fruit, your canned vegetables and the various other types of canned goods. If it were not for San Francisco's very large production of batteries, your radio would not function. The battery plant is one of the largest branch plants in San Francisco.

This question of branch plants is an interesting one. Originally, almost everything distributed on the Pacific Coast was of Eastern manufacture and sold through the agency of wholesalers. Later, one by one, Eastern industries entered the field direct, to compete the better with local industries. As a rule, an Eastern industry comes to the coast in the first place with an office only, or with an office and a warehouse from which to supply the western territory direct. If the warehouse is not established when the branch is established, it follows as business demands it. The third step is a branch factory itself in which are made the articles that heretofore had been shipped from the Eastern plant.

San Francisco is western headquarters for over 1,000 of these branch industriees, and many of them have, like the battery and ink plants just referred to, set up manufacturing plants in San Francisco, or down the peninsula, or across the bay.

Around the San Francisco Bay, we have the five counties of Marin, Contra Costa, Alameda, San Mateo and San Francisco. The 1925 bureau of census figures (the latest available) are interesting in that they show San Francisco the unrivaled leader in industry of all the bay counties. For instance, in the number of industries, we find in Marin County 31, in Contra Costa 93, in Alameda County 908, in San Mateo County 78, and in the City and County of San Francisco 2,160. This gives San Francisco 66 percent of all the industries in the five bay counties, or decidedly over half. When we speak of 2,-160 industries and also of over 1,000 branch industries, this does not mean that half of our industries are branches. Only the comparatively few, perhaps 10 percent of the branch industries which actually manufacture in San Francisco, are counted in the census toal of 2,160 San Francisco industries.

Next, let us consider the counties from the standpoint of value of manufactured output produced in each. This gives Marin $5,814,726, Contra Costa $274,617,595, Alameda $256,880,-142, San Mateo $41,029,685, and San Francisco $438,182,482. In percentages, we find the three largest producers ranking as follows: Contra Costa produces 27 percent of the total manufactured product of the five bay counties; Alameda County, including Oakland, Alameda City and Berkeley, produces 25 percent of this total, and the City and County of San Francisco produces 43 percent, or nearly one-half.

The individual items for the five counties give a total of manufactured output for the San Francisco metropolitan district of $1,016,524,-630. As compared with this, we have the lesser figure of $903,015,543 for the metropolitan district of Los Angeles.

The foregoing should serve to show the soundness of our California prosperity. On a number of occasions, it has seemed timely to point out the fact that industry is the one indispensable factor which underlies community growth and prosperity. If this is recognized, then it follows that everything will be done to foster the growth of industry instead of to stifle it, as seems sometimes to be the case.

It is highly important for San Francisco to keep in mind that our dominating position in other factors is due to our dominating position in industry. That part of the San Francisco Peninsula lying south of San Francisco presents an almost virgin empire to receive our industrial growth as well as our ever-increasing population. Our future lies on the San Francisco Peninsula to the south.

BIG CLASS N.S. INITIATED IN HONOR GRAND PRESIDENT.

One of the largest class initiations in the history of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West was that held at Native Sons' Building in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch. One hundred and ninety-two candidates were initiated, for the following Parlors: California No. 1, two; Pacific No. 10, five; Golden Gate No. 29, seven; San Francisco No. 49, seven; Rincon No. 72, three; Stanford No. 76, eleven; Niantic No. 105, nine; Hesperian No. 137, one; Alcalde No. 154, three; South San Francisco No. 157, thirty-one; Sequoia No. 160, one; Presidio No. 194, fifteen; Marshall No. 202, five; Dolores No. 208, one; Twin Peaks No. 214, fifty-five; El Capitan No. 222, two; Guadalupe No. 231, fourteen; Castro No. 232, twelve; Balboa No. 234, six; James Lick No. 242, one; Bret Harte No. 260, two.

The initiatory ceremonies were conducted by the following picked team from the San Francisco Parlors, the selections being made after the officers of about fifteen Parlors had competed for the honors: President, Daniel Nilan, South San Francisco No. 157; junior past president, Eugene O'Donnell, Dolores No. 208; senior past president, Thomas Foley, Pacific No. 10; first vice-president, Harmon Skillin, Castro No. 232; second vice-president, Arthur Sanford, Precita No. 187; third vice-president, Val Clement, Dolores No. 208; marshal, John Reid, South San Francisco No. 157; inside sentinel, Theodore Portello, South San Francisco No. 157; organist, J. Hartley Russell, Stanford No. 76.

PROPOSED NEW SIERRA ROAD WOULD OPEN SCENIC SECTIONS.

New recreational areas in the Sierras, rich in scenery, will be opened to motor touring by the proposed 250-mile Sierra National Parks highway, to traverse the country southward from Yosemite Valley to Kern County, according to the California State Automobile Association, which is co-operating with the San Joaquin Valley groups sponsoring the project.

The project was launched at a recent conference in Fresno of representatives of San Joaquin Valley counties, who organized the Sierra National Parks Highway Association. The proposed location would traverse Sierra country that is little known to the automobile tourist. It is a project not so much of locating and building a new road as of the connecting up of existing short sections of road.

The tentative route planned would enter the Sierra country from Kern County, traveling northward at an elevation where the summer climate is ideal. It would touch the Mount Whitney plateau country and Kern River Canyon, pass through the Balch and Wishon Park areas, into the Kaweahs, Sequoia National Park and General Grant National Park into and across Kings River Canyon, the North Fork of the Kings River, and the McKinley grove of big trees. The road would permit visiting on the Kings and San Joaquin Rivers some of the greatest hydro-electric development projects in the world. It would skirt Huntington Lake, touch Bass Lake and lead through Wawona and into Yosemite.

"There is no thought of asking state aid in the completion of this project," says H. J. Brunnier, chairman of the highways bureau of the automobile association, "nor will an endeavor be made to have any secions of the route made a part of the state highway system.

"Portions of existing roads on this route are either within national park areas or within the boundaries of national forests and one of the sections is a part of the state highway system. Sections which are necessary to build and which are not in those areas will be handled by county authorities. It is proposed to create a harmonious co-operation between the national park authorities, the United States Forest Service, the California Highway Commission and the various boards of supervisors, that this road might become a connected highway within a period of two years.

"Just as an instance of the territory that will be opened up to the one seeking high mountain scenery, it is said that this route will pass through a valley that rivals Yosemite in grandeur. This valley cannot now be reached except by pack mute. The nearest road to it is seventeen miles away.

"The proposed new Sierra highway, while making available additional recreation territory for the motorist, will not invade the precincts of those who seek to keep mountain territory in its natural state and available only by hiking or by use of horses.

"This road, while making available much additional recreational territory, will in no way tread upon the toes of the 'wilderness man' who wants his mountains left as God made them. Between this route and the crests of the Sierra lies a vast area containing hundreds of peaks, thousands of lakes, glaciers, canyons and waterfalls. Road building into that area is not practical; indeed it is practically financially prohibitive. The Sierra National Parks highway will make this back country accessible for the tourist with comparative little preparation and with much less expenditure of time than is now necessary if he wishes to get into the heart of the high Sierras."

N.D. GRAND PRESIDENT'S VISIT DRAWS BIG CROWD.

The official visit of Grand President Pearl Lamb to Genevieve Parlor No. 132 N.D.G.W. was the occasion of one of the largest meetings of the year in San Francisco. As she was being conducted to her seat of honor the following original ode was sung by Grand Organist Lillian Troy, Agnes Troy and Bre Jobson:

"We're assembled this evening to honor our Chief,
Pearl Lamb, who is with us tonight,
And hope that the visit, although rather brief,
Proves an evening of joy and delight.
And that our dear sister, away from her home,
Will feel that in number one thirty two
She has friends who adore her and are glad she's come
To Genevieve, ever loyal and true.
And that when she goes from her visits here,
To the Parlors all over the state,
She'll remember this one all during the year
That she spent with the sisters this date.
Now, dear Sister Lamb, we've sung you our ode,
And we trust you'll have a good time,
Return home to Tracy, your own loved abode,
Feeling happy, healthy and prime."

Past Grand President Genevieve Baker, in a very inspiring speech, presented the beautiful American altar flag to the Parlor, and it was accepted by May Powers, the president, after which Sara Hagan sang the "Star Spangled Banner." Exemplification of the ritual followed, music being under the direction of Grand Organist Lillian Troy and the singing was rendered by the Genevieve quartette—Agnes Troy, Sara Hagan, Bre Jobson, Alicia O'Day.

Grand President Lamb gave a very instructive talk on the projects of the Order. The following were present to honor the Grand President: Grand Vice-president Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts, Grand Inside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson, Grand Organist Lillian B. Troy, Grand Trustees Mae Edwards, Sallie Thaler and Anna Thusen, D.D.G.P. Agnes Troy, Past Grand Presidents Genevieve W. Baker, Eliza D. Keith, Dr. Victory A. Derrick, Addie Mosher, Margaret Hill, Mae C. Boldemann, and sixteen district deputies from San Francisco and Alameda Counties. Presentations of silver were given Grand President Lamb, Grand Vice-president Noonan, Past Grand President Baker, Grand Organist Troy, D.D.G.P. Troy, and silver souvenirs were presented to all the other grand officers. After the meeting all repaired to the banquet hall, where prettily decorated tables were loaded with "good things to eat," and a social hour was spent.

Genevieve Parlor entertained the members of the Oriole Club and also those of San Francisco

Parlor No. 49 N.S.G.W. at a social evening April 28. A program of singing and dancing was followed by refreshments.

RECEPTION OF APPRECIATION FOR N.S. GRAND PRESIDENT.

Friday, May 6, at 8:30 p. m., in the Grizzly Bear Clubrooms, top floor Native Sons' Building, 414 Mason street, Grand President Hilliard E. Welch will be tendered a reception by the San Francisco N.S.G.W. Extension of the Order Committe. A high-class entertainment will be presented and a buffet supper will be served.

All members of the Order are cordially invited to attend and personally meet Grand President Welch, whose term of office will soon expire. A special invitation to be present is extended to all delegates to the Grand Parlor who may be in San Francisco on their way to San Pedro.

Grand President Welch has worked very hard and faithfully during the closing Grand Parlor year, and the San Francisco Parlors have adopted this plan to express their appreciation for his services and efforts in the Order's behalf.

Chairman Charles A. Koenig of the committee has named the following committees to arrange for the function: Speakers—Grand Secretary John T. Regan, John Danner, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Daniel Nilan. Decoration — Wedde, Lunsmann. Reception — Herzog, Barry, James. Entertainment—O'Donnell, Kane, Miller. Presentation — Schonfeld, Dratz, De La Rosa. Refreshments — Greene, Gonzalez, Desomo, O'Mara. Publicity—Schonfeld, O'Donnell.

"OLD GUARD" HOLDS FORTH.

The true spirit of fraternity reigned April 2 at the annual dinner of the "old guard" of Bay City Parlor No. 104 N.S.G.W. Among the speakers were Past Grand Presidents Dr. Charles W. Decker, who instituted the Parlor, Judge John F. Davis and Louis H. Mooser, the guard's only honorary members.

Some of those active in the affairs of the "old guard" are: Eugene W. Levy (captain), I. Lindeman (secretary-treasurer), Harry L. Gunzburger, Grand Organist Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, Max E. Licht, Dr. P. H. Luttrell, Sam Stern, Julian H. Newbauer.

April 13 was the fortieth anniversary of Bay City's institution, and there was a big crowd, including several charter members, at the meeting. Stories of the old days were recounted. At the meeting's conclusion President Elmer E. Robinson, on behalf of the Parlor's present officers, invited all present to join in a banquet at which Eugene W. Levy was the toastmaster.

VETERANS ENTERTAINED.

Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. will observe its seventeenth institution anniversary with a banquet. Delea Koneitzki, the organizer, and D.D.G.P. Elizabeth Muller will be the guests of honor.

The veteran welfare committee of the Parlor visited Letterman Hospital April 19. The veterans were entertained with a motion picture and other entertainment features, after which refreshments were served.

OLD TIMERS COME OUT.

Many old-time members of San Francisco Parlor No. 49 N.S.G.W.—several who had not been seen at a meeting in years—attended the March 31 sociable. An extremely good entertainment was provided, those contributing numbers being Joe Figone, Benny Levy, Will Gatto, Joe Ciminelli, Al Watts and Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald.

Progress is being made in arrangements for the Parlor's annual boat ride July 31. The committee in charge is composed of: M. Pander (chairman), E. Rigney, Joe Figone, I. Beban, H. Kerbaugh.

"DEEP FURROWS."
By Robert W. Ritchie; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York, Publishers; Price, $2.00.

After you've lost your nerve and have gone to the bottom of the ladder, can you come back?

Larry Scott, at thirty-five, is at the top of the ladder in the newspaper game, being star rewrite man for a large New York daily. Larry and Anne, his wife, have been living beyond their income, keeping up appearances in the New Jersey suburb where they reside. When Larry is fired, he tries writing cheap lurid mystery and detective tales and for a time succeeds in making enough money, but when he tries to improve both plot and style his stories are rejected. He hasn't nerve enough to struggle any longer, so he leaves Anne, knowing that she can earn her own living.

Larry tries many jobs, each one a little worse than the last, until he becomes squirrel poisoner on a Sacramento levee. Here he is taught by Jim Tallant, his friend and employer, the beauty of God that can be found in nature. When Jim is murdered, Larry is accused of the crime, but he turns detective and discovers the murderer to be a former convict with a grudge against Jim.

Anne comes to Larry at the first sign of danger and finds that life with him on the fruit ranch—Jim had given Larry the ranch—is not as bad as she had thought.

"PA, THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY."
By Margaret Ashmun; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

There is something pathetic about this sordid story of family on a small farm that holds one until the end, although the theme would have made a clever short story.

Pa, who is really the grandfather, is moved from one family to the other, not because he is wanted, but because he was wise and had refused to sign over his property.

Mattie, the hunchback daughter who was jilted because "Pa" encouraged the young man to do so, is soured and crazy to get married to anyone. Her father bribes a Scandinavian farm worker to marry her, for three hundred dollars and a ten-acre lot that they coax "Pa" to sign a deed for.

"THE HOUSE OF SIN."
By Allen Upward; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Here is a mystery that might well baffle the cleverest of detectives. Dr. Tarleton, an expert on poisons and connected with Scotland Yard, is called at midnight to examine the body of a young man found murdered in the Duke of Altringham's house.

After the doctor discovers the identity of the murdered man, the next thing was to find out what member of the family committed the crime, as all might have had the desire to do so. All are suspected, in turn, as each is suspicious of the other, and yet they try to shield one another. What information they have is carefully kept from the doctor, but he gains knowledge, little by little, that enables him to solve the mystery.

The doctor, at no time, has any information that is kept from the reader, but at the solution very few will have had more than a faint inkling as to the identity of the murderer.

"Carelessness is criminal, forest fires a crime. A fire out before it starts, is a fire out in time."

them is Twin Peaks No. 244 (San Francisco) which recorded a gain of nine(?) (illegible). Others include Sepulveda No. 264 (San Pedro), Hollywood No. 196 (Los Angeles), Viquesco No. 262 (Los Angeles), Redwood No. 66 (Redwood City), Arrowhead No. 110 (San Bernardino), Ramona No. 109 (Los Angeles), Alcalde No. 154 (San Francisco), South San Francisco No. 157, Dolores No. 208 (San Francisco), Marshall No. 202 (San Francisco), Fresno No. 25, Selma No. 107, Pleasanton No. 244, Stanford No. 76 (San Francisco), Glendale No. 264 and Long Beach No. 239.

Two Parlors, both in Los Angeles County, were instituted since the 1926 Grand Parlor Monrovia No. 266, and Santa Monica Bay No. 267 at Santa Monica. Plans are also well under way for the institution of several parlors in the San Joaquin Valley.

During the year the Subordinate Parlors presented numerous American and California State (Bear) Flags to public-schools and public buildings, and the Grand Parlor placed several dedicatory tablets.

PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

The San Pedro Grand Parlor promises to be a very lively one, in the way of proposed legislation affecting the Order. The Grand Directorship, which has been a much-debated question the past few years, will be voted upon again. The Board of Grand Officers is in favor of abolishing that office and assigning the duties to deputy grand presidents to be appointed by the Grand President. On the other hand, Mount Tamalpais Parlor No. 64 (San Rafael) is sponsoring proposed legislation which would create another elective grand officer, "grand membership director," who would have charge of all matters pertaining to membership.

The question of benefits, which has been before the Grand Parlor for lo, these many years, and has created no end of debate, often times red-hot in quality and voluminous in quantity, will be up again. The Board of Grand Officers will submit an adverse recommendation on the insurance plan submitted at the Santa Rosa session. Mount Tamalpais Parlor No. 64 will propose a "sick benefit department" to be managed by a committee of five members to be appointed by the Grand President.

Resolutions will be presented amending the Subordinate Parlor constitution so that, in choosing Grand Parlor delegates, "those candidates, in the number the Parlor is entitled to elect as delegates, receiving the highest number of votes cast shall be declared elected." The effect of this, if adopted, would be to permit election of delegates by plurality instead of majority vote.

Other resolutions will be presented, proposing to amend both the Grand Parlor and the Subordinate Parlor constitutions, and there will be the usual flood of resolutions dealing with this, that and the other question.

CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE.

The Grizzly Bear has made every effort to get an expression of intention from each rumored Grand Parlor office candidate. The information received is presented, although it is a near-certainty that there will be several other candidates when nomination-day comes, Wednesday, May 11:

Grand President—Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson (Santa Clara No. 100) of Santa Clara City.

Grand First Vice-president—Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson (Rincon No. 72) of San Francisco.

LONG BEACH SKYLINE—SIGNAL HILL IN BACKGROUND

VASQUEZ GOLD---
THE OLD POTRERO ADOBE

(W. O. GILKEY,
Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W.)

THE MOON WAS SLOWLY RISING OVER the hills to the west, and the old pepper trees were throwing their shadows across the silvery strip of road that leads around the knoll to the south. At the crest of the hill, at the head of the pass, was the home place of Don Repetto, the kind old man who welcomed stranger, as well as guest, in true Californian style.

As I passed over the brow of the hill, I saw the figure of a man, bent with age, slowly trudging his way up the slope.. "Hallo, amigo!" "Greetings, brother," was the reply. The musical swing of the Spanish language, to the old man's ears, brought back memories of the days of the dons and dashing caballeros.

After extending the hand of friendship, we sat down by the side of the road, under the shadow of the old adobe, and watched the moon cast its weird shadows through the pepper trees that crown the crest of this stately hill.

Our conversation drifted to the locale upon which we had met. In years gone by, this old adobe ranchhouse was the center of social activity for miles around, and many a barbecue was enjoyed by Americanos as well as the old Californian families.

In his younger days, my old friend had been a guest of Alexander Repetto and was familiar with the events of the times. After an exchange of cigarettes, he related the history of the Rancho Potrero and the noted bandit, Tiburcio Vasquez.

He started his career in Monterey County in the year 1837. At the age of fifteen he opened a saloon and dance hall there, but his business career did not last long, as he became involved in a brawl, and was accused and hunted as a murderer. He made his escape, but was later captured and served time in San Quentin penitentiary.

He became dissatisfied with prison life and escaped, later joining with Procopio and Soto, both noted desperados who were later slain in fights. Vasquez attributed his many escapes to his valor. As he said, he was ever ready to fight, but always endeavored to avoid bloodshed.

After many raids up and down the state, he was located at Rancho Potrero in April 1874. Disguised as sheepherders the bandits attacked Don Repetto and, tying him to a tree, compelled him to sign a note on the Temple & Workman bank of Los Angeles for the sum of $800. A nephew of Don Alexander Repetto was dispatched to Los Angeles for the money.

The boy's actions at the bank excited suspicion and a posse, headed by William R. Rowland, went in the direction of the Potrero Rancho. But the boy reached there first, paid the money, and released his uncle.

When the posse arrived they found that the bandit, Vasquez, had left for the mountains in the vicinity of the Cahuenga Pass (Hollywood), going to a ranch owned by one known as "Greek George" Allen. There he was later captured, as he tried to escape through a window of the building, brought to Los Angeles and placed in jail.

Before Vasquez was taken north for trial, Don Repetto called at the jail to see him. After the usual salutations he remarked: "I have called, signor, to say, so far as I am concerned, you can settle the little account with God Almighty. I have no hard feelings against you."

Vasquez returned his thanks, and began to speak of repayment. But Don Repetto interrupted: "I give to you to save further trouble." "Ah, signor," replied Vasquez, "I am a cavalier, with the heart of a cavalier."

In 1875 he was taken to San Jose and tried for murder, was convicted and the following March was hanged. This ended the career of Tiburcio Vasquez, the Dick Turpin of Southern California.

As I sat by the side of the road listening to my friend, the moon had crossed the heavens, and the shadows had stolen back into their hiding place under the soft confines of the century-old pepper trees.

The old man arose and, after exchanging farewells, slowly made his way to the north through the pass toward the Mission San Gabriel, while I stood quietly looking out over the star-lit country far below.

The wind had sprung up, and the quietude of the hill was disturbed by the swishing of the pepper bows, that reached their long arms out to grasp the intruder, as if to hold him for the posse searching for the bandit, Vasquez. Even the rafters of the old adobe swayed, and groaned thieves! robbers!

Today the treasure-seekers who come to this old landmark have found ill luck awaiting them. For the ghost of Vasquez has the gold hidden where it will never be found.

THE SURVEY AND BEGINNING OF LONG BEACH

(DOROTHY B. KENYON,
Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W.)

My grandfather, Captain Charles T. Healey, was born in Hartland, Vermont, in 1833, and came to California in the early '50s. He was the first licensed surveyor in California, and held city and county offices in San Jose.

In April 1882, in response to a letter from Jotham Bixby Sr., asking his services in laying out a townsite known as Wilmore City, Captain Healey, his wife, two daughters and party came from San Francisco.

The trip was made by the steamer "Ancon" and took two days. On arrival at San Pedro, they were driven to the Los Cerritos Rancho, the home of Jotham Bixby. The rancho was formerly owned by Don Juan Temple, who gained it by marriage with Dona Rafaela Cota.

The old adobe house still stands, about five miles north of Long Beach, just beyond the Cerritos oil field. It is occupied by a Mexican family as caretakers at present, but plans are being made to restore it, as a landmark of local history.

After a few weeks at the ranch house, August 29 the Healey family moved to what was then called Los Cerritos Beach. They camped in a tent at the place now occupied by the Heartwell building, at Pine and Ocean. All drinking water was brought in barrels from the rancho, five miles away.

The camping was not pleasant, as heavy sandstorms were of common occurrence. Finally, they were compelled to return to the ranch house, as winds prevented the work of surveying being carried on.

Wilmore City, as planned and "boosted" by Wilmore, wasn't a success, and his contract was relinquished in 1884.

Pomeroy & Mills of Los Angeles took over the 4,000 acres—including Wilmore City—from the Bixby Company at $60 per Acre. The Long Beach Land and Water Company, composed of twenty men, took stock in the company and survey of the lots was extended by Captain Healey.

It was through my grandfather's efforts that the streets in Alamitos Beach Town to east of Alamitos, were designated alphabetically, with Spanish names. He always wished to preserve the Spanish atmosphere of earlier days.

My grandfather died in 1914, but my grandmother still lives at her first permanent home site, which they established over forty years ago at 227 East Ocean boulevard.

A NATIVE SON.

"A native son of the Golden West,
Born in a land we all love best
In California's golden glow,
Where orange trees blossom, row on row,
And the snow-clad peaks of mountains rise
And golden grain 'gainst the blue sky lies.
Where always the air has a sweet perfume
And the song of birds is like a day in June;
Where the breakers roar on the ocean's edge,
'Gainst the velvet moss and rocky ledge.
'Tis a land of love, and God's smile benign
Is in the sunshine and whispering wind.
What a blessing to open one's eyes in a place
God's made perfect and kissed with His grace.
Forests that are centuries old,
With majestic redwoods, tall and bold;
With mines of gold, and wells of oil,
Put there for pleasure and not for toil.
God's treasure chest for the native son,
Put here for him, when the world begun."

(These lines came to The Grizzly Bear from Mrs. Elizabeth Fair of Long Beach, with this brief note: "Please accept the above, which I composed. I have a native son of my own, and was thus inspired."—Editor.)

HISTORY RECOUNTING ADDS INTEREST TO N.D. MEETINGS.

Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W., under the leadership of President Fannie McPherson, is very active. At the April 13 meeting plans were discussed to entertain May 11 the women visitors to the N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor at San Pedro. It was also decided to hold a '49 entertainment in May, the menu, decorations and entertainment to be typically Californian. The drill team, Lillian Lasater chairman, will be in charge. Fredelina Oltman was in charge of the social session following the meeting.

The drill team has proven an asset to the Parlor, having sponsored many successful social functions, among them a recent plunkett dinner. In their natty white-and-gold uniforms, the girls make a decidedly attractive appearance.

The thimble club of the Parlor had a socially and financially successful "pot luck" dinner April 20, in charge of Maude Klasgye. Mrs. Helen Cervantes rendered vocal solos, accompanied by Mrs. Dolores Shirk, Maxine Pitts and Stanley Coates were heard in readings and four-year-old Kenneth Rice gave a humorous pianologue. The club, of which Lucretia Coates is president, meets the first and third Thursdays of each month, and is busy making layettes for the homeless children.

Interest in the meetings is being added through the recounting of history, under the supervision of Burnice Rankin. March 23 each member was requested to relate some incident in California. One, by Dorothy Kenyon, appears in this issue of The Grizzly Bear.

President Fannie McPherson told of the experiences of her father, William A. Baker. He came to California, around Cape Horn, in 1849. He went south, horseback, the following year, settling at Big Pine, Inyo County. With him he brought fruit trees and locust seeds, in saddlebags, and planted them upon the place which he homesteaded. He became very friendly with the Indians of Owens Valley; they came to him for counsel and advice, and he helped them. In 1872 he married Fannie White, who came into the valley overland; she still resides at the old home place. Baker died in 1885.

N.D.G.W., headed by Mrs. Julia Arborn, chairman of the latter Parlor's landmarks committee, attended the annual fiesta of the Mission Indians' Federation at the Riverside home of Jonathan Tibbets, April 17.

Tibbets, a member of Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 N.S.G.W. (San Bernardino), has a wonderful collection of Indian relics which the Native Daughters hope to have housed in Long Beach. For twenty-three years, Indians from San Diego to Mono, and from Yuma to Santa Maria have held their ceremonies at his home.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

George Curtis (Long Beach No. 239 N.S.G.W.) and his wife, Wilhelmina Curtis (Long Beach No. 154 N.D.G.W.) celebrated their thirty-second wedding anniversary April 14. They were married at Anaheim, Orange County, in 1895.

ORDER OF NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

[illegible]

To guarantee social enjoyment, mental improvement and mutual [illegible]

To care, conjointly with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, for the [illegible] children of California, of whatever class, color or creed, by placing them in permanent homes through legal adoption, providing, and engaging in the most [illegible] [illegible] of public welfare work, that of improving the future citizenship of the state.

If YOU were born in California and believe in these principles, you should be a member of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West.

OUR COUNTRY'S KEEPER.
(JOHN F. POTTS.)

You are your country's keeper,
The Government is but you;
You are the woof of the fabric,
Be it weak, or strong and true.

You are of the people,
Through you she will fall or rise;
Yours is the hand that will crush her
Or raise her spires to the skies.

You are your country's keeper,
And yours forever the blame
If the finger of scorn be pointed
At a country sunk in shame.

Yours is the hand that will guide her,
And yours forever the praise
If she girds herself with a glory
That shall last through the length of days.

HARBOR BOARD WELCOMES NATIVE SONS

APRIL 20, AT THE MEETING OF THE Board of Harbor Commissioners of the City of Los Angeles—Walter B. Allen, president; Frank L. Meline, vice-president; O. M. Souden, Robert M. Clarke and C. E. Burge, commissioners,—the following resolution, presented by Judge Clarke, a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. (Los Angeles), was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, The Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West will hold its fiftieth Grand Parlor session at San Pedro (Los Angeles Harbor), May 8; and

"Whereas, The building and development of Los Angeles Harbor was, in a great measure, due to the energy and active work of the pioneers and natives of California, and the harbor, as now existing, is the pride of those who have contributed to the consummation of the great enterprise initiated by these pioneers and native sons of California; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Board of Harbor Commissioners of the City of Los Angeles do extend to the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West and the committee of Sepulveda Parlor in charge of the entertainment, such aid and facilities as may be in our power and at hand for the purpose of making such celebration both a social success and a patriotic celebration; it is further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forthwith forwarded to the secretary of the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West and the secretary of Sepulveda Parlor, San Pedro, California."

MARCH AND APRIL BUSY MONTHS FOR SAN PEDRO NATIVE SONS.

Following their attendance at the joint initiation ceremonies in Los Angeles March 18, four grand officers of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West visited San Pedro as the guests of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 the next day. The group included Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson of Santa Clara, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson of San Francisco, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge of Martinez and Grand Trustee John T. Newell of Los Angeles.

March 31 Sepulveda held open house for the families and friends of members. The program was presented by a boy scout troop under the direction of Recording Secretary James V. Carroll, scoutmaster, and by a large group of young dancing artists from the Ruth Spere school of dancing of San Pedro. First Vice-president Willard Buchanan was master of ceremonies and President William F. Durr gave a brief address of welcome.

Sepulveda's long-heralded boxing program for the benefit of the San Pedro Grand Parlor fund was presented April 6 before a capacity house at Wilmington. The Wilmington Athletic Club donated its services and giant arena for the occasion. So successful was the Parlor's barbecue at Sepulveda Park April 6, that a second event of similar nature was at once arranged for April 24. It was held at Poggie's Grove, in the country northwest of Wilmington. Trustee J. J. Kaveny was chairman and master of ceremonies for both occasions, with J. B. Alvarado, Cosmo Arcy and others looking after the chef duties.

April 21 officers of the Parlor conducted initiatory ceremonies for Los Angeles Parlor No. 45. In return, officers and members of No. 45 came to San Pedro to initiate for No. 263, April 28. Civic organizations moved in support of the forthcoming Grand Parlor session in San Pedro when they attended in large numbers Sepulveda's dance in Liberty Auditorium April 26. During the previous week endorsements were given the event by the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce directors, the Rotary, Lions and Optimist Clubs and several fraternal organizations.

May 12 the U.S.S. "New Mexico" will drop anchor in the harbor at San Pedro. With other units of the United States battle fleet it has been in the Atlantic during recent weeks for participation in tactical maneuvers with the scouting fleet. The "New Mexico" will leave the east coast in advance of other battleships returning to the Pacific and is scheduled to stop at San Pedro for fuel and mail while enroute to Puget Sound Navy Yard for annual overhaul. Efforts have been made to secure permission from the Federal Secretary of the Navy to have the dreadnaught held over in the harbor for three days instead of a few hours, as scheduled.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS HAVE DRILL TEAM.

Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. has a drill team, which will probably make its initial public appearance in San Pedro during the Native Sons' Grand Parlor. It is drilling three times a week, under the able direction of Martin Yturralde. To raise funds with which to purchase uniforms, two benefit dances were held, March 24 and April 14, and proved great successes. First Vice-president Hazel Raines is chairman of the team.

Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas paid a visit to the Parlor April 7, as did also James Mee, chairman of the Native Sons' Grand Parlor committee. Peter W. Anderson, an old resident of San Pedro, father of Elsie Anderson, a member of Rudecinda, was recently killed in an auto accident.

Meetings in Los Angeles last month of the homeless children and the interparlor committees were attended by President Gertrude Riepe, Secretary Charlotte Bennett and Carrie Kuhlmann.

BIG SELMA INITIATION

(Special To The Grizzly Bear.)

Selma (Fresno County)—Under the leadership of Grand Trustee John T. Newell, the officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. traveled 500 miles April 23 to exemplify the ritual for a class of twenty-three candidates for Fresno Parlor No. 25 N.S.G.W. and Selma Parlor No. 107 N.S.G.W., in honor of Grand President Hilliard E. Welch. Among the twenty-two members of No. 45 who made the long trip to also exemplify the spirit of co-operation—and the stations filled—were: Andrew Stodel, senior past president; D.D.G.P. Ronald H. Ross, junior past president; Ray L. Lemoine, president; Julius O. Leuschner, first vice-president; Ralph Harbison, second vice-president; Howard Bentley, third vice-president; Louis W. Smith, marshal; Walter J. Fisher, inside sentinel; D.D.G.P. Albert L. Cron, outside sentinel; Richard W. Fryer, secretary; William G. Newell, director of the team.

In addition to Grand President Welch and Grand Trustee Newell, visitors included, also, Grand Trustee John T. Skelton, Past Grand President William F. Toomey, D.D.G.P. A. P. Krumb and John Monteverde. Of the twenty-three candidates initiated, sixteen were from Selma Parlor and seven from Fresno Parlor, and were rounded up by Deputy Grand President Sidney B. Witkowski, who is engaged in field work for the Order in the San Joaquin Valley. Through his activities, and the splendid co-operation of such men as President Frank M. Lane of Fresno Parlor and President D. J. Sullivan of Selma Parlor, the former has added sixty-five members to its rolls and has twenty-one applications on file, and the latter has added twenty-nine and has twelve applications on file.

Previous to the initiation there was a chicken supper, and then followed a parade, headed by the Selma drum corps, through the city's streets. After the ritual ceremonies there were addresses by Grand President Welch, Grand Trustee Newell, Past Grand President Toomey and Grand Trustee Skelton.

A novel feature was the showing of the San Pedro Grand Parlor badge pendant. Two were disposed of for five dollars each in spirited bidding between Fred Berry and Fresno County's sheriff, "Bill" Jones, and the balance available were gobbled up like hotcakes.

Pill Rollers To Meet—The annual meeting of the California State Pharmaceutical Association will be held at Sacramento City, May 17, 18 and 19.

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

WHAT LOS ANGELES HARBOR MEANS TO THE PACIFIC SOUTHWEST

J. G. Starr

(SECRETARY, BOARD HARBOR COMMISSIONERS, LOS ANGELES CITY.)

A COMPARATIVELY SMALL PERCENTAGE of the people of the City of Los Angeles realize the value of Los Angeles Harbor to them, their city and the Pacific Southwest. When one stops to think that the taxpayers of Los Angeles have invested the stupendous sum of twenty-five millions of dollars in building a great harbor, the average citizen would probably question the necessity and the wiseness of the expenditure. He would probably ask, "Does the harbor return enough revenue to take care of all of the carrying charges?" The answer to such a direct question would naturally be, "No, but indirectly the harbor pays for the entire investment every two or three months."

Twenty-three million tons of cargo were shipped through Los Angeles Harbor last year. This means a great deal to the taxpayers of Los Angeles. It means a saving of over $100,000,000 in freight charges for that period. It gives employment to over 100,000 workers. It encourages large investments, manufactories and industries, and it tends to stimulate business in general.

It has been said by an eminent Eastern writer and authority that, "if even half the plans of the people of Southern California turn out as designed, and as they fully expect, the result will shift the industrial centre of the United States and build at Los Angeles one of the greatest seaport cities anywhere on earth, and eventually have much to do in transferring the nation's theatre of commercial activities from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

Los Angeles Harbor is already second port in the United States in point of intercoastal cargo-tons in and out of the port. This statement takes oil into consideration. Oil is our principal commodity, and it is a commodity that will probably be with us for twenty or more years to come. The oil companies have invested millions of dollars in waterfront loading stations in their sincere belief that oil will be produced in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles Harbor for years to come.

Los Angeles Harbor has created an amazing rise of industries in Los Angeles County. The factory era of Southern California started in about 1900. At that time there were perhaps 150 factories in the Los Angeles metropolitan district, the gross output of which was approximately fifteen millions of dollars. In 1910 the harbor district was annexed to Los Angeles, and in 1924 the factories had increased to 5,700 in operation, with a $300,000,000 annual payroll and an output of $1,202,677,004.

In 1914 the total tonnage through the harbor was 1,682,794 tons, and in 1926 it grew to 23,067,365 tons. In 1918 there were but six foreign steamship lines that touched at Los Angeles Harbor, and today 139 steamship lines pass continually in and out of this port, trading with eighty other ports of the world.

ADOPTED CALIFORNIA SON STIRS NATIVES' ENTHUSIASM.

Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. had a rousing good open meeting April 22, when Dan Daniels, an adopted son of California, was the honor guest. At the conclusion of a splendid talk on the state's history and natural resources, in the preservation of which the Native Sons are most active, he put up one hundred dollars for organization work in the Santa Monica Bay district and said that he would personally urge native-borns to affiliate with the Parlor, because he realized that they could best serve the state from within the Order.

Daniels' talk aroused the Natives' enthusiasm, and contributions of another hundred went into the organization fund of No. 267. President Dwight C. Freeman presided at the opening of NATIVE DAUGHTERS' ANNUAL BAZAAR AND DANCE MAY 25.

More than 150 members and guests attended the twenty-sixth institution anniversary celebration of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., April 20. Bouquets of lovely roses constituted the decorations, one being sent by Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. Jennie Raymond was in charge of the program, which included remarks by President Calisto DeSoto, Louise Robinson and Margery Alexander, charter members, and Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer. Musical numbers were contributed by Lucia Hernandez and Organist Pearl K. Dwinell, and little Nell Elizabeth Stafford appeared in fancy dances, in costume. Under the supervision of Kathryn Ronan, delicious refreshments were served. The piece-de-resistance, the candle-lighted birthday cake, was cut by Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas. President Dwight Crittenden and Past President Leon Leonard of Ramona Parlor were guests at the feast.

D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt visited the Parlor April 6 and gave an instructive talk. Other speakers were Maud Klasgye, Bernice Rankin and Alma Werner. The card party of April 13, under the chairmanship of Lyle T. Necke, was a successful and enjoyable evening. Edith Douglas had charge of the refreshments.

Los Angeles' big May event will be the annual bazaar and dance, the 25th, Treasurer Grace T. Haven chairman. There will be cake, candy and punch booths, a fish pond and a country store, in charge, respectively, of Irene Eden, Clara Bird, Mary McAnany, Jennie Raymond, and Calisto and Theresa DeSoto. A large attendance is anticipated, of both Native Sons and Native Daughters, and their friends. May 4 delegates to the Modesto Grand Parlor will be elected, a card party is scheduled for the 11th, and officers for the ensuing term will be nominated the 18th.

PLANS FOR ADMISSION DAY ARE ALREADY UNDER WAY.

While Admission Day is September 9, Native Sons and Native Daughters of Los Angeles and Orange Counties have already organized to arrange for its due observance in Los Angeles City. Working with them are the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the Union Pacific Railroad, the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, the Historical Society of Southern California and other civic and history organizations.

At a meeting of representatives of all interests concerned, Adolfo G. Rivera (Ramona 109 N.S.G.W.) was made general chairman and John W. Topham (Hollywood 196 N.S.G.W.) general secretary. An executive committee was authorized to handle all details, and the following have been named: Joseph P. Sproul, Marco Hellman, Gabriel Ruiz, E. F. Engelbracht, William F. Durr, C. E. Miller, R. R. Mason, Nelson R. Crow, Miss Ruth Ruiz, Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, Mrs. Florence D. Schoneman, Mrs. Charlotte Bennett, Rowland P. Fontana, R. Murray, A. F. Giroux, Miss Marvel Thomas, John T. Newell, Grace S. Stoermer, Herman C. Lichtenberger, William I. Traeger.

Preparations are being made for a typically Spanish-California fiesta on an elaborate scale. "You will feast your eyes on scenes that most of you have never witnessed and are not likely to see again," says General Chairman Rivera.

MAY 5 BIG NIGHT IN LOS ANGELES.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. has sent invitations to all Parlors south of Tehachapi for a function billed for May 5 in the interest of Grand Trustee John T. Newell's candidacy for Grand Third Vice-president at the San Pedro Grand Parlor. A feature program will be presented under the supervision of Lester Reich and William G. Newell. Another big night is being arranged for May 19.

Fight night at the Parlor, April 14, drew out a big crowd who enjoyed several good boxing bouts. April 23 officers and members journeyed to Selma, Fresno County, to exemplify the ritual.

PRE-GRAND-PARLOR DANCE MAY 7.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. initiated several candidates April 22. The question of increasing the membership fee to $50 is again being agitated. President Dwight Crittenden says that building operations upon the Parlor's Venice boulevard property may actually be under way soon.

Under the auspices of the "Caballeros"—a live bunch of its young men—Ramona will give a dance May 7 in honor of Grand Trustee John T. Newell. That's the Saturday night preceding the San Pedro Grand Parlor, and invitations to be present have been sent all grand officers and delegates. The 20th is set down on the Parlor's May calendar for initiation and the distribution of that month's birthday presents. Officers for the ensuing term will be nominated the 27th.

The Parlor has selected June 12 as the date for its annual institution outing and barbecue, the place to be announced later.

DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

A delightful affair was the thirty-first institution anniversary banquet of Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. held April 6 at the Jonathan Club. There was a large attendance, many of the old-timers being there out of regard for Louis Nordlinger—almost a charter member and for twenty-seven consecutive years the Parlor's faithful treasurer—who was the guest of honor. With his family, he will soon depart for an extended European tour.

Joseph P. Sproul was the toastmaster, and the speakers included: Dr. D. W. Edelman, charter president; W. T. Craig, charter member; A. C. Boschke, present president; Gene Murphy, J. J. Herlihy, M. G. Gill, I. O. Levy, J. J. Regan, Dr. J. Holleran, L. S. Nordlinger, Judge John M. York, A. E. Austin, E. B. Lovie, A. A. Schmidt, P. H. Muller, J. M. Costello, D. H. Laubersheimer, C. A. Casner, J. J. Concannon, H. Cocke. In the way of entertainment, splendid musical numbers were introduced. Henry G. Bodkin headed the committee of arrangements.

Hollywood will stage its famous annual highjinks May 23. Edgar W. Black heads the committee in charge, and promises an evening overflowing with sensations. Arrangements are being perfected for the Parlor's annual barbecue, which probably will be held some time in June.

GLENDALE INITIATES FIVE.

A class of five candidates were initiated April 13 by Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W., the officers exemplifying the ritual in a very creditable manner. Among the visitors and speakers of the evening were Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger and Grand Trustee John T. Newell. Announcement was made that Joseph E. Bellue, a recent initiate, had presented the Parlor with a desk for use of the secretary, and "Joe" was given a rising vote of thanks. Refreshments terminated an interesting meeting.

Glendale will give another of its popular monthly dances at 610-A East Broadway, May 18, and a good time is assured all who attend.

MORE N.D. PARLORS.

Grand President Pearl Lamb of Tracy, San Joaquin County, will be in the southern part of the state during May, it is reported, and during her visit, unless present plans miscarry, new parlors of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West will be instituted at Santa Monica and San Bernardino.

KIDDIES' BENEFIT.

Pearl Keller, of the Keller school of dancing at Glendale, will present her annual children's society vaudeville for the benefit of the homeless children at the Philharmonic Auditorium, June 4.

Tickets may be secured from members of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. joint homeless children committee of Los Angeles and Orange Counties, under whose auspices the benefit will be staged.

COMPTON HAS HISTORY DAY.

The annual California history and landmarks day of the women's clubs of Compton was observed April 9 with an appropriate program. Mrs. Charlotte Phelps was chairman of the day, and luncheon was served by a group of clubwomen garbed in period gowns. Among the speakers was John T. Newell, Grand Trustee

NATIVE PIANIST WINS PRAISE.

One of the outstanding successes of the current season by a resident artist was the public debut recital given by Keith Correlli (Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W.), the pianist, at the Beaux Arts auditorium.

The young artist's recital drew a capacity audience and unanimous praise from the critics. Aside from this recital, he has appeared during the season before Ebell, Friday Morning, Gamut, Matinee Musicale and other prominent clubs in concert.

Corelli's first lessons were given him by his mother, following which his musical education has been conducted under the guidance of such established celebrities as Olga Steeb, Paolo Gallico, Richard Buhlig and Kurt Mueller.

WELL-TO-REMEMBER FACTS.

"Los Angeles, the biggest city in the Western Americas," says the local Chamber of Commerce, "was founded in 1781 by royal decree of the king of Spain, and given the musical name of 'Pueblo de Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles,' meaning 'The Village of Our Lady, the Queen of the Angels.' It was incorporated as an American city in 1851, one year after California's admission to the union. Its growth during the past three decades has startled the entire world. Its population has increased from 102,479 in 1900 to 1,300,328 today, making it the fifth city in size in the United States.

"Its bank clearings of $8,917,424,296 last year were over ten times those of 1910, when the total was $811,387,487. Its building permits increased in value from $21,684,100 in 1910 to $123,006,215 last year, while its postal receipts during the same period increased from $1,476,942 to $9,089,918.

Los Angeles County for years has led all counties of the nation in agricultural production. Last year its crops had a value of $89,817,515. Motor vehicles registered in Los Angeles County totaled 635,949 at the close of 1926, or approximately half of all motor vehicles registered in the State of California."

"SEVENTH HEAVEN" TO FOLLOW "GLORY."

"What Price Glory," which has long been an attraction at the Carthay Circle Theater, will have its final showing May 4. It will be followed, May 6, by "Seventh Heaven," said to have cost more than a million dollars to produce. Manager Fred Miller promises that the premiere of "Seventh Heaven" will be a brilliant one, with an original prologue by Jack Laughlin and special music by Carli Elinor and his orchestra.

Somewhere from out the hidden groves,

NEW CITY HALL INSCRIPTIONS.

As chairman of a special committee appointed for the purpose, Dr. Ernest C. Moore, director of the University of California at Los Angeles, has completed the selection of a series of appropriate inscriptions to be carved into the walls of the new twenty-eight-story Los Angeles City Hall, rapidly nearing completion. They include:

"A people cannot have the consciousness of being self-governed unless they attend themselves to the things over against their own doors."

"The execution of the laws is more important than the making of them."

"Law is reason without passion."

"He that violates his oath profanes the divinity of faith itself."

"The highest of all sciences and services—the government."

"Let us have faith that right makes might."

"Righteousness exalteth a people."

"Though free, they are not absolutely free for they have a master over them, the law."

It's a little thing to do,
Just to think.
Anyone, no matter who,
Ought to think.
Take a little time each day
From the minutes thrown away;
Spare it from your work or play—
Stop and think!
You will find that men who fail
Do not think.
Men who find themselves in jail
Do not think.
Half the trouble that we see,
Trouble brewed for you and me,
Probably never would be
If we'd think.
Shall we, then, consider this?
Shall we journey, hit or miss,
Or shall we think?
Let's not go along by guess,
But rather to ourselves confess
It would help us more or less
If we'd think!

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

SAN PEDRO WILL BE INVADED BY CALIFORNIANS

SAN PEDRO WILL BE INVADED BY HUNdreds of native sons of California during May. Primarily, they are going there, from every one of the state's fifty-eight counties, to participate in the deliberations of the Fiftieth Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. Among them will be men prominent in all walks of life, and some of them recognized as the state's most brilliant orators.

Although natives of California, this will be the first time that many of these San Pedro visitors will have visited the southern portion of the state, and they will take advantage of the opportunity to acquaint themselves with conditions generally. A great many people, among them natives, are of the impression that all that has been said and written about the phenomenal development south of Tehachapi, and particularly in Los Angeles County and City, is not founded on fact. A look around, along with a comparison of the past with the present, will convince them otherwise, unless, perchance, they are prejudiced against the south beyond the convincing stage.

San Pedro, most people think, is simply a seaport. They do not realize that it possesses wonderful homes and, as a residential community, has no superior. San Pedrans should make it their special duty to show the visitors the superb resident districts of the community, so that they may return to their homes knowing that San Pedro is not only a busy business community within the state's metropolis—Los Angeles—but, in addition, a good place in which to establish a home.

Incidentally, the San Pedro Grand Parlor will be the fiftieth in the history of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. The organization had its beginning in San Francisco nearly fifty-two years ago,—in July of 1875, to be exact,—being founded by a California Pioneer from Kentucky, General A. M. Winn. It is the outgrowth of an Independence Day parade, and its foundation-stone is patriotism. By 1877 three branches, or parlors, as they are called, of the Order had been organized, at San Francisco, Oakland and Sacramento, and it was in that year that the First Grand Parlor was held.

Cicero said, "He that violates his oath profanes the divinity of faith itself." Federal, state, county, city and township officials in California, all of whom are under oath to support the constitution and to enforce the law, should digest that!

It is no exaggeration to state that ninety percent of them violate their oaths of office, insofar as the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution is concerned. It is common knowledge that many of them are among the bootleggers' best customers. They consume "booze" publicly and privately, and some of them to such an extent that frequently they are incapable of the performance of duty, much less of realizing the sanctity of the oath taken.

It is largely because this condition does exist among officials generally that disrespect for all law is increasing at an alarming rate. These oath-violating officials are not only making a mockery of the constitution and the law, but are aiding those who would undermine and wreck the government.

So long as the Eighteenth Amendment is a part of the Constitution of the United States and the Prohibition Law is one of the statutes of the land, those citizens who are sincere in their protestations of loyalty to country in times of peace as well as in times of war, will respect the constitution and obey the law, irrespective of their personal opinions.

The welfare of this nation is far more vitally concerned with peace-time loyalty than with war-time loyalty. Without the former, faith in the established government dwindles, disrespect for all law grows, and the ranks of organized government-hating forces are increased.

A great number of Los Angeles County Japs are petitioning the superior court to establish the citizenship of their American-born children—probably with the idea in view of violating the Alien Land Law of the state by purchasing land in the name of their children.

Judge Fletcher Bowron has adopted the policy of demanding as an additional witness in all such cases that come into his court a White American citizen. He takes the view that, because the court is conferring judicial confirmation of citizenship, the certification of citizenship should not be granted on the uncorroborated testimony of those who are not, themselves, citizens nor eligible to citizenship.

Whatever the Japs' purpose, Judge Bowron is right, and his policy should be generally adopted by all courts dealing with such matters. A Jap's word is no good!

Which do you prefer?

Green forests yield abundant timber supply, support industries, build up communities, make the land productive, protect wild life, provide outdoor recreation, create national wealth.

Forest fires devastate productive tree growth, hinder industrial development, pay no wages or taxes, create idle acres, kill animal life, make desolate the beauty spots, destroy natural resources.

Help prevent forest fires—it pays!

This is the season of the year when the young man's—and the old one's, too,—fancy turns to thoughts of God's great open acres, where life IS life, not merely existence.

Justice works fast, in London, England, and, as a rule, there recognizes neither wealth nor position. A fellow who attacked a girl February 21 was tried, convicted and hung, just thirty-seven days following the crime's commission.

In California, Justice moves at a snail's pace and, not infrequently, is stone-blind, particularly when the accused has wealth or "pull' at his command. And as for hanging a girl-ravisher, who ever heard of such a thing in California, since the days of '49?

Health Officer Pomeroy reports that the Jap birth rate in the rural districts of Los Angeles County showed a "sensational" decrease in 1926—being but five percent of the total. The peak year was in 1917, when the Jap birth rate in the same districts was thirty-four percent.

Likely the Japs have come to the conclusion that they have a sufficient number of American-citizen-born subjects and worshipers of the mikado to, in a very few years now, accomplish their purpose—the control of California. So, why increase the "peaceful invasion" army via the breeding-route?

The editor must extend thanks, on behalf of The Grizzly Bear, to the Native Sons and Native Daughters of San Pedro who, through their co-operation, largely made possible this enlarged issue of the magazine—particularly James W. Mee, William F. Durr, Stanley A. Wheeler and Charlotte Bennett.

And most particularly, to Wheeler, the Native Sons' publicity chairman. An experienced newspaperman, he knows the full value of publicity to an organization as well as to a community. All calls made on him—and they were many—for material were willingly and promptly responded to. He is an asset to any organization and to any community that desires to progress.

Representative Arthur Free, in the closing days of the recent Federal Congress, introduced a resolution to investigate the Federal Churches of Christ in America.

That outfit — and particularly its guiding geniuses—should be thoroughly investigated, by those not subservient to it or fearful of its great power, political and otherwise, for it is fostering a nationwide movement to weaken the national Immigration Law and to have eliminated entirely the provision excluding aliens not eligible to citizenship, which includes, among others, Japs.

"The world is a looking-glass and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face. Frown at it, and it will in turn look sourly upon you; laugh at it and with it, and it is a jolly, kind companion."—Thackeray.

"Be faithful, therefore, to the promises you make, to the pledges you give, and to the vows that you assume, since to break either is base and dishonorable."

THINK IT OVER!

The order of Native Sons of the Golden West is, we believe, with the exception of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, the only organization that limits membership exclusively to NATIVE-BORN AMERICANS.

Knowing the serious conditions in this country today, this fact alone should impel every Native Son of California to immediately SEEK AFFILIATION with that American-born and American-operated institution, the man-power and wealth of which are pledged to the protection of American institutions in times of peace as well as in times of war.

OUR LADY OF THE ANGELS

Anna I. Dempsey

Our Lady of the Angels, endowed with charm and grace,
Rose from a sheltered meadow, God's sunshine on her face.
Her balmy ocean breezes spread a whisper on the air
Of gifts of health and happiness to all who lingered there.

Along her sloping hillsides Joy danced with magic wand.
Grain stretched across her meadows and down her silver strand,
And every glowing sunbeam, kissed with zephyrs from the west,
Was filled with Health, that priceless gift, of all her gifts the best.

So, from the earth's four corners came forth the human throng,
The heartsore and the weary, the weakened and the strong,
And many came for happiness and many came for gain,
And for the blessed boon of health each one staked a claim.

Those who came to tarry for just a little while,
Stayed to bask forever in the sunshine of her smile,
And for the gifts she gave them they gave her back ten-fold,
They made of her a garden spot—a picture to behold.

They gave her love and laughter, they gave her pride and fame,
And with the aid of silver screens gave lustre to her name.
They gave her knowledge, gems and art, they gave her golden store,
And with every gift they gave her, they loved her more and more.

Our Lady of the Angels, endowed with charm and grace,
With heaven's dew around her, God's sunshine on her face.
Her balmy ocean breezes still whisper on the air
Of gifts of health and happiness to all who linger there.

THE PALOS VERDES ESTATES

(MARY EVA THACKER.)

A DEED, BEARING THE DATE NOVEMBER 1913, was executed, transferring to Frank A. Vanderlip of New York the ownership of 16,000 acres, or approximately one-half, of the old Mexican land grant, Rancho Palos Verdes. This rancho originally comprised all the land extending from San Pedro to Redondo and for a distance of several miles inland. The land had been held for many years by the Sepulveda family, having been granted to them by the last Mexican governor, Pio Pico, June 3, 1846, the patent of which was approved by the United States Government June 22, 1880. By a decision rendered by the United States District Court, September 5, 1882, a large part of the old rancho passed into the hands of Jotham Bixby, in whose family the land remained until the interest of Vanderlip was aroused.

Recognizing in the Palos Verdes its extraordinary potentialities for development, he and a group of multi-millionaires became interested in the ranch. It was their plan to develop the great estate into a millionaire residential colony, but with the coming of the world war the idea was dropped for the time and the plans were held in abeyance. For several years the great ranch lay dormant, as it were, until in 1920 the interest of a group of real estate men was aroused. They, recognizing the strategic position of the property, inaugurated a movement to purchase the land under the name of the Palos Verdes Project.

The general management of this project is in the hands of Jay Lawyer, long manager of Vanderlip's interests in the West. Among the numerous successful ventures to Lawyer's credit is the part he played in building the Los Molinos Colony in Tehama County—12,000 acres of arid farm land transformed by one of the most prosperous irrigation projects in the whole country, declared by experts to be a model of its kind.

The Palos Verdes Project is a bold undertaking, but perhaps not more so than other remarkable feats in and about Los Angeles which, at the time of conception, seemed visionary, but which have abundantly justified themselves before being half completed. From the first it was realized that inferior improvements and development would ruin forever the opportunity to do a superb thing, in keeping with the situation and the wonderful natural beauty of the estates, as the old rancho is now called. The conclusion was reached that the one thing to do was to develop it in a way to make it the most magnificent residential district ever created.

The project is one of the most unique, as well as, perhaps, the largest constructive undertakings in city building ever carried out in the world. The general organization for the planning and construction of the Palos Verdes undertaking has been selected with the utmost care. There are a general planning board, engineering staff, art jury, landscape architects, city planning staffs and executive board, as well as field organization and transportation management, accounting and other experienced executives of the highest type to carry through this great undertaking.

To carry on the common interest of the residents on the estates, such as the maintenance of street planting, parks, street lights and other improvements, a community association under the name of Palos Verdes Homes Association has been incorporated. This is a permanent association of property owners, in which every building site has a vote. The association has the power to interpret and enforce all restrictions, and collect the annual maintenance tax for the upkeep of the property and for the general benefit of all property owners. Since Palos Verdes lies without the city limits of Los Angeles, such an organization has been deemed necessary. This association holds title to the shorelands, golf course and other parks and to all dedicated streets. It is expected to act as a permanent organizing force for community activities.

Construction in Palos Verdes commenced in April, 1923. Already a picture of a town of unity and harmony, like those one finds so impressive when visiting the lovely Italian villages along the blue Mediterranean, is beginning to be noticeable here. In fact, the general line of architecture bears the mark of the Latin countries fronting on the Mediterranean, which the beautiful bays of the old rancho so strikingly resemble. The undertaking projected by the estates, because of the magnitude of its scope and the completeness of design, has drawn both [illegible] and foreign [illegible] from those appreciative of the beautiful.

[illegible] the old rancho into the most beautiful [illegible] possible to devise [illegible] well under [illegible] but in a [illegible] people [illegible] before attempting [illegible] nor [illegible] Southern California are [illegible] the achievement of the [illegible] have watched the development [illegible] a barren hill or desert [illegible] property. They have seen [illegible] grow in a few years [illegible] worthless sand lots into almost [illegible]

The great natural beauty [illegible] rancho, too, as well as its strategic [illegible] development on a large scale [illegible] been lavish, indeed, with [illegible] tates contain more than three [illegible] in one great unbroken segment. [illegible] coast line fourteen miles in length, [illegible] curving bays of inexpressible beauty. Rising from the shore line, rise a series of undulating plateaus, parted by deep ravines, until they reach an elevation of fourteen hundred feet, whence they descend again to the level of the plain, in a similar series of terraces.

Upon the crest of the Palos Verdes Hills, one stands as upon the Acropolis at Athens, entranced with the grandeur of the view that is revealed to the eye in whatever direction one may turn. Gazing southward one looks down upon the harbor of Los Angeles, with its ships from all the ports of the world. To the northeast spreads out below an uninterrupted view of the myriad cities of the plain, until the eye rests on the lofty peaks of the Sierra Madre Range. Toward the west is the immeasurable ocean, extending until lost to view on the horizon.

The estates, surrounded on the land side by communities that are growing by leaps and bounds, present an opportunity for the future that has few parallels. It is not at all improbable that, before many years have passed, Los Angeles will come to mean all the territory lying between the mountains and the sea, so that the old rancho will eventually become a part of the great "Wonder City of the West."

"While the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return."

SAN PEDRO ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

SEPULVEDA NO. 263, THE HOST-PARlor, and San Pedro, the host-city, are ready for the coming of the Fiftieth Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. This will be San Pedro's first state convention of a fraternal organization, and visitors for the week of May 9 to 14 will be extended, by citizens of San Pedro generally, that brand of hospitality for which the southern part of California has been world famed since the arrival of the earliest Pioneers.

Native Sons who are members of other orders and service clubs will find their organizations in San Pedro and Wilmington co-operating toward the success of the Grand Parlor gathering. Seldom, if ever, has a single community been more firmly united as is San Pedro, anticipating the golden anniversary Grand Parlor. Tracy Gaffey, representing the pioneer Gaffey family, has donated the use of Liberty Auditorium, Seventh and Center streets, where all the Grand Parlor sessions and many of the social functions will be held, and a number of local yachtsmen have offered their pleasure craft for the entertainment of visitors during the week. The Elks, too, have offered the use of their home, at Seventh and Palos Verdes streets.

WILLIAM F. DURR,
President Sepulveda N.S.G.W.

The streets of San Pedro will be attractively decorated, the Los Angeles City Council having agreed to look after that detail, as the Harbor City is a very important part of the Angel City, and the Fort MacArthur band will be on hand throughout the week to furnish music.

From the time of registration to the last strain of music at the closing dance, every moment has been provided for in the program prepared. Attendants at former Grand Parlor sessions would be disappointed with anything less. And they will not be disappointed in San Pedro.

CHARLOTTE K. BENNETT,
Secretary Rudecinda N.D.G.W.

Three days of official business sessions for the menfolks will be interspersed with two full days of pleasure for them. While the womenfolks,

JAMES W. MEE,
Chairman General Committee.

through the co-operation of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. with Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W., will have one continuous round of pleasure.

Every detail of the convention plans has been worked out under the very able direction of James W. Mee, Sepulveda Parlor's general convention chairman, with the assistance of William A. Reuter, vice-chairman, William F. Durr, president of Sepulveda Parlor, and a large group of sub-committee members.

Most of the visitors will arrive in San Pedro Sunday, May 8. Some will come via auto, but the big crowd will be aboard the Southern Pacific special, due to leave San Francisco at 7:30 that morning and to arrive in San Pedro at 8:30 that evening. They will be escorted to the Miramar hotel, general headquarters for the week, where members of the Grand Parlor will receive their credentials, badges and passports. Visiting members of the Order will have to see the committee about their passports to the various events.

The pendant of the badge is worthy of special mention, for it is representative of California, the Order and San Pedro. It is in the form of and faithfully imitates a fifty-dollar gold slug and is made of golden-colored metal. The face side is designed to represent Deadman's Island, San Pedro landmark soon to disappear, and the "San Salvador," aboard which Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo came into the "Bay of Smokes." Also appears the following: "50th Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. San Pedro 1927. Sepulveda Parlor No. 263." Upon the reverse side is "50." A better idea of this unique souvenir of the occasion may be had by reference to the cover design of this issue of The Grizzly Bear.

THE PROGRAM

Monday evening, at Liberty Auditorium, there will be a get-acquainted gathering and informal dance. In addition to entertainment features

WILLIAM A. REUTER,
Vice-chairman General Committee.

there will be brief addresses by James W. Mee, chairman of San Pedro's Grand Parlor committee, who will preside; Mayor George E. Cryer, who will extend the city's welcome; President William F. Durr, who will greet the visitor on behalf of the host Parlor, Sepulveda; Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, who will respond for the Order and the Grand Parlor.

Tuesday has been set aside for an all-day steamer trip to Catalina Island and a ride in glass (not black) bottom boats upon Avalon Bay, including the submarine gardens. Lunch will be served at the St. Catherine hotel. The start will be made from the terminal of the Wilmington Transportation Co. at Wilmington.

In the evening there will be an informal dance in Liberty Auditorium, and the Past Grand Presidents will have their annual pow-wow and banquet, at the California Yacht Club. This banquet is an exclusive affair, for Past Grands only.

Wednesday evening has been set aside for the Grand Parlor banquet. This is also San Pedro night at the "Mission Play," San Gabriel.

Thursday will be given over to an all-day outing at beautiful and historic Point Firmin Park, where a wonderful view of the surroundings of San Pedro may be had. At noon Sepulveda Parlor will serve one of those barbecues for which it has earned an enviable reputation in Native Son circles. The grand ball, a formal affair, is down for Thursday evening.

Friday evening there will be another informal dance, in Liberty Auditorium.

FOR WOMEN ONLY

All the above entertainment features, with the one exception noted, are for both the men- and the womenfolks. The latter, in addition, are to be especially entertained by San Pedro's Native Daughters. They will have headquarters in the Elks' Building, Seventh and Palos Verdes streets, which will open at 10 a. m. Monday and remain open all week. These headquarters will be in charge of the following committee of Rudecinda

Secretary Sepulveda N.S.G.W.

THE WORKERS

SAN PEDRO N. D. WINS WAY IN BUSINESS WORLD

Mrs. Caroline A. Richards, wife of Elmer M. Richards of San Pedro, is a charter member of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. She was born in San Bernardino, her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. John T. Leffen, being Pioneers. She is recognized as one of the most able business women of her native state, California.

Twenty-six years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Richards and their daughter—Mrs. Duane Walsworth, also affiliated with Rudecinda Parlor—came to San Pedro from Riverside. Seeing a wonderful future for this port, Mrs. Richards at once decided that San Pedro would be their future home and she has become actively identified with the affairs of the city and the harbor district.

MRS. CAROLINE A. RICHARDS.

For many years, Mrs. Richards was associated with her husband in the Modern dry cleaning and dyeing business, but nine years ago established the Richards Dye Works, of which she is the manager. Previous to establishing herself in San Pedro, she was connected with the Santa Fe Railroad Company.

In addition to the Native Daughters, Mrs. Richards is a member of the Woman's Club, the Point Firmin Library Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

SAN PEDRO'S NATIVES

RUDECINDA PARLOR

(CHARLOTTE K. BENNETT.)

THE FIRST PRELIMINARY MEETING looking to the organization of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230, the San Pedro branch of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, was held February 9, 1925, with Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer presiding. The Parlor was instituted March 7, and holds the record in the Order for the number of candidates obligated on the occasion of the institution of a Parlor—one hundred and six.

Catherine E. Gloster of Alturas, Modoc County, at that time the Grand President, presided at the Parlor's institution, and was assisted by Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Past Grand President Stoermer and the organizer of the Parlor, District Deputy Grand President Carrie E. Lenhouse. The various stations were filled by officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 and Long Beach Parlor No. 154, headed by their respective presidents, Marvel Thomas and Clara Fay.

Rudecinda Parlor was named in honor of Rudecinda Sepulveda-Dodson, a pioneer Native Daughter of San Pedro and the charter senior past president of the Parlor. The seal adopted by the Parlor is a replica of Deadman's Island, a historic landmark at the entrance to San Pedro Harbor which is soon to be removed to make possible enlargement of the channel. Among Rudecinda's first representatives in the Grand Parlor, at Placerville, El Dorado County, in June of 1925, was Florence Dodson-Schoneman, who was appointed chairman of the Grand Parlor's history and landmarks committee, in which capacity she has ever since efficiently served the Order.

The first officers of Rudecinda Parlor were: Rudecinda Sepulveda-Dodson, senior past president; Mabel Adair, junior past president; Lottie Sandstrom, past president; Hazel Boston, president; Viva Foot, first vice-president; Florence Langan, second vice-president; Madeline Larrison, third vice-president; Charlotte Bennett, recording secretary; Christina Gaffey, financial secretary; Madeline Mallock, treasurer; Marie Stone, marshal; Madeline Boone, inside sentinel; Emily Pinheiro, outside sentinel; Katherine Dodson, Charlotte Dinsmore, Alice Cripe, trustees.

Although but a little over two years old, Rudecinda Parlor has become an important factor in the civic and fraternal life of San Pedro. Working with the local Red Cross, needy families of the community have been aided. It has participated with the Grand Army of the Republic in due observance of Memorial Day, and always joins in the community's Easter sunrise services at Point Firmin. Following the Santa Barbara earthquake, it joined Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. in promoting a big benefit dance.

In the way of stimulating interest in California history and landmarks, Rudecinda Parlor last year sponsored a most successful entertainment for the harbor district Pioneers. It has placed historical pictures in, and keeps The Grizzly Bear Magazine on file in, the local public schools and library. It has participated in all Natives' activities, such as tree plantings, the celebration of Admission Day, the dedication of the "Snowshoe" Thompson tablet at Carthay Center, and California's diamond jubilee at San Francisco in 1925. The Parlor plans to place a bronze marker upon historic Drum Barracks in Wilmington, and will co-operate with Sepulveda Parlor in marking the Dominguez battlefield, another local landmark.

Rudecinda Parlor's present corps of officers is composed of: Gertrude Riepe, president; Hazel Raines, first vice-president; Abagail Hagenow, second vice-president; Florence Dodson-Schoneman, third vice-president; Charlotte Bennett, recording secretary; Mercy Powers, financial secretary; Carrie Kuhlmann, treasurer; Carmen Ardiaz, marshal; Mary Bailey, Modesta Contos, Louise Steinkamp, trustees; Juanita Beckstead, inside sentinel; Mrs. Theo. Walsworth, outside sentinel; Margaret Kreider, organist. Those who have served the Parlor as president include: Hazel Boston, Margaret Dever, Charlotte Bennett and Catherine Ross.

During the Native Sons' Grand Parlor in San Pedro the week of May 9, the membership of Rudecinda Parlor, headed by the officers, will assist in providing entertainment for the visiting womenfolks.

Millie Adams, Asunta Dentone, Florence Bostic, Mabel Lisman, Josephine Cappelle, Anna Clark, Letitia Sarciaux.

SEPULVEDA PARLOR

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

IN THE BACKGROUND OF SEPULVEDA Parlor, No. 263, host to the 1927 Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, is the memory of old Palos Verdes Parlor of San Pedro, wiped out of existence in 1898 with the outbreak of the war with Spain. Today, the present Parlor counts among its honored members a few of the original Natives of Palos Verdes Parlor and a score of their sons. Membership embraces residents of the Los Angeles Harbor district, including San Pedro, Wilmington, Terminal Island and Harbor City.

Sepulveda Parlor was instituted February 15, 1925, with a record charter membership of 125. The ceremonies were conducted outofdoors, at Sepulveda Park, near White Point, on the coast of the Palos Verdes estates, with Grand President Edward J. Lynch presiding at the ceremonies. There was a very large gathering of Native Sons from all over Southern California on this occasion.

The Parlor chose its name in honor of Ramon D. Sepulveda, scion of the family which, in the early days of California, held a vast estate through the graces of the Spanish crown. He was also named to serve as the first senior past president. He is still active in the Parlor despite his many years, and is today one of the most colorful and revered citizens of the southern part of the state.

The first corps of officers chosen by the Parlor included: James H. Dodson Sr., junior past president; James H. Dodson Jr., president; William A. Reuter, first vice-president; Eloi J. Amar, second vice-president; Edward E. Baldwin, third vice-president; Robert R. Snodgrass, marshal; Clyde H. Foot, inside sentinel; Charles Cassidy, outside sentinel; Howard H. Wickersham, musician. Serving on the first board of trustees were James W. Mee, John J. Gaudino and J. J. Kaveny. L. S. Anderson was made the treasurer, John P. Martin Jr. the financial secretary and Ben Sepulveda the recording secretary.

To William A. Reuter of Yosemite Parlor No. 24 (Merced), and Charles A. Giegerich and Edward E. Baldwin of Ramona Parlor No. 109 (Los Angeles) must go the great credit for founding the new Parlor at San Pedro. It was their work and their suggestions which first brought about the petitioning group. Further organization work was done by Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer.

The institution of the Parlor was a notable occasion for many members of older Parlors. With their setting under the giant palm trees of Sepulveda Park within a few feet of the breakers rolling in on the Palos Verdes coast from the San Pedro Channel and within easy sight of Santa Catalina Island, the ceremonials and the barbecue following were different from like occasions in the history of the Order.

At the present time, the official role of the Parlor includes: Ramon D. Sepulveda, James H. Dodson Sr., James H. Dodson Jr. and William A. Reuter as senior past presidents; Edward E. Baldwin, junior past president; William F. Durr, president; Willard Buchanan, first vice-president; Clyde H. Foot, second vice-president; Stanley A. Wheeler, third vice-president; Vincent E. Hopkins, marshal; Ira H. Nance, inside sentinel; Harry E. Fairall, outside sentinel; Frank I. Markey, musician. The board of trustees is composed of John J. Kaveny, John C. Swinford and Albert Mackley, while William Maggio is the treasurer, John P. Martin Jr. the financial secretary and James V. Carroll the recording secretary.

During its twenty-seven months of existence, Sepulveda Parlor has increased its membership to over 300, won the Grand Parlor trophy banner for one year's greatest expansion among all the Parlors of the Order and has undertaken the unprecedented feat, for so young an organization, of entertaining a Grand Parlor.

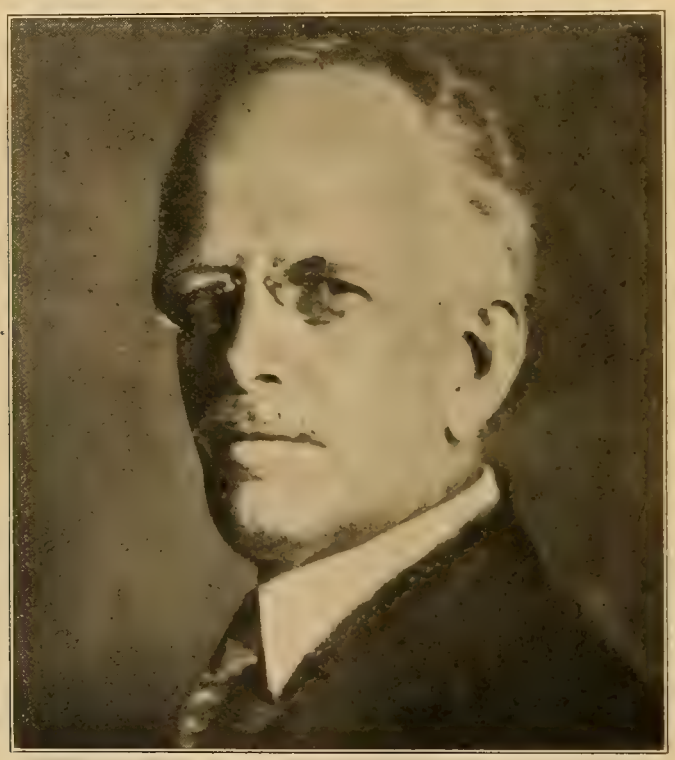
PASADENA AWARDS NOBLE MEDAL TO DR. GEORGE E. HALL



Harry L. Roberts

PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

THE ARTHUR NOBLE MEDAL, PRESented each year to the Pasadena citizen who is deemed to have done the most for his city during the year, has been awarded for 1926 to Dr. George Ellery Hale, distinguished scientist and author, for his work in originating and helping to develop the Pasadena Civic Center plan.

The award was made by the Pasadena Board of City Directors upon recommendation of a special committee comprising Dr. Robert Freeman, pastor of the Pasadena Presbyterian church; Dr. Charles D. Lockwood, prominent surgeon; Mrs. William J. Carr and Mrs. Leo G. McLaughlin, Pasadena clubwomen, and Dr. Walter Adams, director of the Mount Wilson Solar Observatory of the Carnegie Institute.

While the award was primarily based upon the work that Dr. Hale has done in behalf of the Pasadena Civic Center plan, the committee, in its recommendation, made clear that it also took into consideration the many other contributions that Dr. Hale has made to the welfare and civic betterment of Pasadena.

"Dr. Hale came to Pasadena in 1903," the committee set forth in its memoranda, "and from the beginning identified himself with plans for the educational and cultural advancement of the city. His chief contributions may be considered under these three divisions:

"First, he was entirely responsible for the establishment of the Mount Wilson Observatory, and thus brought to Pasadena a great scientific and research institution, with the influence of its work and its staff upon the intellectual life of the city. He then became a member of the board of trustees of Throop Institute, and used his wide knowledge and ability to transform a somewhat mediocre secondary school into the present California Institute of Technology, with its brilliant staff and its world-wide scientific reputation. He was personally instrumental in bringing to Pasadena Dr. Noyes and Dr. Millikan, to whom so much of the success of the institute is due.

"Second, the city is also indebted to Dr. Hale in large measure for the presentation of Carmelita Park. To this he devoted much time and thought, enlisting the interest and financial support of public spirited men to serve as trustees of this property in behalf of the community. Of his services in connection with the Huntington Library, it is not as yet possible to speak in detail. It is not too much to say, however, that as a trustee of this library he has preserved this wonderful collection of material to Pasadena and Southern California, and has brought about the possibility of its use as a great source of literary and historical research by the scholars of the world.

"Third, Dr. Hale has long been interested in projects for city planning, due largely to his acquaintance with Mr. Burnham, the great Chicago architect, and familiarity with his work. He has served on the city planning commission of Pasadena, and was instrumental in devising the plan for competetive designs for the civic center buildings. He has given freely to the community the benfit of his wide knowledge and judgment of architecture at home and abroad, enlisting the aid of such men as Bertram Goodhue in his plans. The results of this work the city is now beginning to see in visualized form."

The new Pasadena Public Library, first completed unit of the Pasadena Civic Center, was dedicated and opened in February, while the new City Hall has been under construction for almost a year and a half and will be finished within a few months.

In his long career as a scientist and scholar, Dr. Hale has been awarded many medals and prizes, and has received honors and degrees from foreign governments and from institutions of learning both in this country and abroad.

Want to reach the California buying public? Then consider the advertising columns of The Grizzly Bear, which is the only publication in the state with a California-wide circulation!

As an astronomer, Dr. Hale's principal researches have been made in solar and stellar spectroscopy. He is the author of many books on astronomical subjects and has written many scientific articles which have had wide circulation. He is a joint editor of "Astronomy and Astrophysics" and of the "Astrophysical Magazine."

Dr. Hale is a native of Chicago. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and also studied at Harvard University and the University of Berlin. He has received degrees from the University of Pittsburgh, Yale University, Victoria University of Manchester, England, Oxford University, Cambridge University, Chicago University, Columbia University, Harvard University, Beloit College, University of California, Princeton University and University of Berlin.

From 1890 to 1896, Dr. Hale was director of the Kenwood Astrophysical Observatory, and from 1897 to 1905 was professor of astrophysics at the University of Chicago, where he organized and directed the Yerkes Observatory. In 1905 he came to Pasadena to organize and direct the Mount Wilson Solar Observatory of the Carnegie Institute. He served as director of the observatory from 1905 to 1923, and is now honorary director in charge of policy and development.

During the world war, Dr. Hale was honorary chairman of the National Research Council, which did so much for the allied cause in scientific research work. He is now an active or honorary member of twenty-one scientific or astronomical organizations in a dozen or more nations, is a commander of the Order of Leopold II of Belgium and a commander of the Order of the Crown in Italy. In 1894 he was awarded the Janssen medal by the Paris Academy of Sciences, in 1902 the Rumford medal, in 1903 the Draper medal, in 1904 the gold medal of the Royal Astronomical Society, in 1916 the Bruce Medal, in 1917 the Janssen medal of the Astronomical Society of France, in 1920 the Galileo medal, and in 1921 the Actonian prize of the Royal Institutions of London.

Acknowledging the receipt of notification that he had been awarded the Noble medal, Dr. Hale wrote:

"Coming from my friends and associates, such an award means much more to me than any honor that might come from a distant source. I don't deserve it, as anything I have done has amounted to little more than a suggestion, while others have done the work and borne the criticism that so often falls on those who strive for progress. Moreover, I have been rewarded a hundred times over by the pleasure I have received from the success of my friends and colleagues. No one could ask for a greater return, and I have never dreamt of any public recognition, much less of such an honor as you now so kindly offer me.

"But surely I cannot quarrel with such a friendly committee, even when I know it to be over generous in its decision. I accept the Arthur Noble award with the pleasure which could come only to one who cares as much as I do for the progress of Pasadena."

The Arthur Noble medal for 1925 was awarded to Gilmor Brown, director of the Pasadena Community Playhouse, generally regarded as the foremost "little theatre" in the country. The award was made to Brown, "because of his distinctive contribution to the community in the field of dramatic art." He has been director of the Pasadena Community Playhouse since it was founded, nine years ago.

GRAND PARLOR PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

MORADO NO. 199 OF MODESTO IS making splendid progress with arrangements for the Forty-first Grand Parlor, which will hold forth in the Stanislaus County seat of government the week of June 20. Florence Giovanetti is chairman of the general committee in charge of all the numerous details.

The tentative program includes: A musical program and get-acquainted meeting June 19; public reception the night of the 20th; trip to historic Sonora and Columbia, in Tuolumne County, and grand ball, the 21st; ritual exemplification the night of the 22nd, and installation of the newly-elected grand officers the night of the 23rd.

The Grand Parlor will convene the morning of Monday, June 20, with Grand President Pearl Lamb presiding. There will be a short session Tuesday morning and all-day sessions Wednesday and Thursday. This is expected to be the best-attended Grand Parlor in the Order's history, as the membership has been considerably increased the past year. Modesto is able to handle a big crowd, and Morado Parlor is prepared to care for the needs of all visitors.

Since the April issue of The Grizzly Bear, several candidates have come into the Grand Parlor office field. Subordinate Parlors will elect delegates in June, and then will follow the announcements of many additional now-prospective candidates.

There is nothing "on the air" to indicate other than that Mae Himes-Noonan (Portola No. 172) of San Francisco, now the Grand Vice-president, will be unopposed for the Grand Presidency.

For Grand Vice-president there are, at this writing, three candidates: Grand Marshal Josephine C. Barboni (Vendome No. 100) of San Jose, Dr. Louise C. Heilbron (San Diego No. 208) of Sacramento City, and Florence Danforth-Boyle (Gold of Ophir No. 190) of Oroville.

For Grand Secretary, the incumbent, Hattie E. Roberts (Oneonta No. 71) of Ferndale will not be a candidate. An aspirant for the office, however, is Grand Trustee Sallie R. Thaler (Aloha No. 106) of Oakland.

For Grand Marshal—Esther R. Sullivan (Marysville No. 162) of Marysville.

For Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel Anna Mixon-Armstrong (Woodland No. 90) of Woodland.

For Grand Organist—Lillian B. Troy (Genevieve No. 132) of San Francisco, incumbent.

For Grand Trustee, seven to be chosen—May F. Givens (Mariposa No. 63) of Mariposa, Marvel Thomas (Los Angeles No. 124) of Los Angeles City, incumbent, Grand Inside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson (Dolores No. 169) of San Francisco, Vida M. Vollers (Marinita No. 198) of San Rafael.

There may be, and probably are, other candidates already in the field for the various offices, but these are the only rumored ones The Grizzly Bear had received a definite answer from up to the time of going to press.

Sub-committees of Morado Parlor that are in charge of the arrangements for the Modesto session include:

Finance—Anna Sargeant (chairman), Lena Browder, Edna Hunsucker, Florence Giovanetti.

Registration—Nellie Dunlap (chairman), Ann Osborne, Agnes Packard, Hattie Hunsucker, Minnie Hansen.

Publicity—Pauline Handley.

Reception—Isabelle Heinman (chairman), Ann Sargeant, Bertha Stowe, Mae Giovanetti, Myrtle Sanders, Hattie Young, Lenna Crow, Ann Olson, Doris Matteson, Lena Browder, Birdie Sivils, Meryle Jamison, Edna Hunsucker.

Big Gathering in History's Behalf.

Oroville—Two hundred Native Daughters from neighboring cities gathered here April 6 at a meeting sponsored by Gold of Ophir No. 190 to encourage greater co-operation in history work in this section. Following discussion a banquet was served. California poppies were used effectively in decorating.

Miss Irene Lund was toastmistress and Elizabeth Phillips delivered the welcome address on behalf of Gold of Ophir. Talks were given by Mms. Waller, Murray, Harrington, Scherman, Bernardo, Hammer and Miss LaRue. A program of vocal numbers was presented. President W. H. Hibbard of Argonaut No. 8 addressed the gathering in behalf of the local Native Sons and was responded to by Florence Danforth-Boyle. The banquet was in charge of Mrs. Hattie Richards and the clever entertainment features were arranged by Irene Lund and Bernice Renfrow.

April 13 Gold of Ophir had a double shower for two of the latest brides among its membership—Mrs. Myra Odneal and Mrs. Rachel Daniels. The affair was held at the home of Mrs. Mart Parker. Cards were played and refreshments served. Verna Parker, Elice La Voy, Thelma Huffman made up the committee in charge.

Beautiful Thoughts Imparted.

Calistoga—One of the most enjoyable meetings ever held in Native Daughter circles of the Napa Valley was the official visit April 7 of Grand President Pearl Lamb to La Junta No. 203 (Saint Helena) and Calistoga No. 145 in joint session. Among the other visitors were Grand Trustees Sallie Thaler and Lily Tilden, D.D.G.Ps. Lulu Burge and Cora Herrick, Maud Cook, Edith Kelley and Ann Tilden of Sacramento. The hall was beautifully decorated with the California poppy, the state flower. Three candidates were initiated, officers of both Parlors officiating.

The splendid address of Grand President Lamb left many beautiful thoughts with those present. On behalf of the hostess Parlors she was presented with a beautiful gift by Adele Mallatt and voiced her thanks for the remembrance. Preceding the meeting an elaborate dinner was served. The table centerpiece was a golden grizzly bear upon a carpet of natural poppies. The occasion was a most happy one. The arrangements committee included: Ella Light (chairman), Esther Thompson, Martha Klubeschedt, Wilna Mitchell, Irma Whitney, Aurelia Butler, Bessie Kellett, Katie Butler, Myrtle Sorensen.

District Meeting Big Success.

San Jose—The district meeting held April 9 under the supervision of Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael was a big success. The ceremonies commenced at Mission Santa Clara, where the original mission bells were struck, and then the pilgrimage got under way.

The destination was San Juan Bautista, San Benito County, where members of San Juan Bautista No. 179 received the "tourists." After visiting the old mission here, a program and refreshments, the visitors started homeward.

In the evening dinner was served and exercises were held by San Jose No. 81, Vendome No. 100, El Monte No. 205 and Palo Alto No. 229. Grand President Pearl Lamb and husband were guests, also Fred L. Thomas, Santa Clara County district attorney. All the Parlors put on "stunts," which proved very amusing. A large crowd was in attendance, the Daughters being privileged to invite the menfolks.

Pioneer Mother's Grave Marked.

Taft—A large crowd from this place and Bakersfield gathered in Cuyama Valley April 10 to witness the marking by Miocene No. 228 and El Tejon No. 239 of the last resting-place of Mrs. Nancy Kelsey, claimed to be the first American woman to cross the plains to California.

Mrs. Kelsey was a native of Kentucky, her maiden name being Nancy Brown. She arrived in this state, as the bride of Benjamin Kelsey, May 1841. She was the only woman in the party of thirty-three, which included several Pioneers whose names are closely linked with California's history.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Margaret Tupper and C. McPherson, who knew the deceased Pioneer Mother well. The memorial services were conducted by President Elma Nichols and the officers of Miocene.

Golden Poppies in Evidence.

Hollister—Grand President Pearl Lamb paid her official visit to Copa de Oro No. 105 and San Juan Bautista No. 179 in joint session March 24. Dinner preceded the meeting, the tables being tastily decorated with golden poppies and purple lupine. Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs was the toastmistress, and the following toasts were responded to: "The Pioneers of California," Ellen Murray; "Cherished Landmarks of San Benito County," Blanche Taix. Helen Leonard and Mayme Avilla rendered vocal solos.

At the meeting hall the ritual was exemplified and Grand President Lamb gave an inspiring talk on "Service." California's state flower graced the meeting-place. Visitors were present from Oakland and San Francisco. Mrs. Lamb was presented with a gift of china.

Biggest Carnival Ever.

Pittsburg—May 19, 20 and 21 Stirling No. 146 and Diamond No. 246 N.S.G.W. will stage what, it is promised, will be the greatest indoor carnival ever attempted in Contra Costa County. A large radio set will be among the many prizes, and several radio artists will appear on the program.

The general arrangements committee includes: Morris Lichenstein (chairman), Mrs. A. S. Delf (vice-chairman), E. L. Clement (secretary), Armond Stow (treasurer), Pete Cinollo, Mrs. W. E. McDermott, W. A. Clement, Mrs. Louis Schmalholz and D. Caruso. Many sub-committees have the numerous details in charge.

Wonderful Message.

Middletown—Clear Lake No. 135 received an official visit from Grand President Pearl Lamb, who was accompanied by D.D.G.P. Lulu Burge and Mrs. Ida Westlake. An elaborate dinner was served; a miniature fountain graced the center of the table, which was decorated with the Order's colors. One candidate was initiated.

The most enjoyable feature of the occasion was the wonderful message delivered by Grand President Lamb. On the Parlor's behalf she was presented with a beautiful picture of Clear Lake by Past President Addie Penny. At the gathering's conclusion an impromptu program

Help Appreciated.

Santa Ana—D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt was the guest of Santa Ana No. 235 April 5 and delivered an address in the course of which she commended the untiring zeal of President Mamie Schonberg. A letter of thanks was received from Rev. St. John O'Sullivan of San Juan Capistrano Mission for the $100 sent for the rebuilding of the baptistry.

Two candidates were initiated and several applications were filed. Refreshments were served at the meeting's conclusion. The Parlor's thimble club was entertained April 13 at the home of Mrs. Fannie Stanley.

Bird Seed Warblers Delighted.

San Jose—An avalanche of telegrams, letters, messages, etc., have poured into Vendome No. 100 since the glee club (Bird Seed Warblers) broadcasted over K.I.W. Thank you, friends, for your kindly interest and compliments. They will be on the air again soon, owing to the tremendous demand. These Native Daughters are a modest lot. If they have brought happiness and cheer to shut-ins, they are amply repaid for their efforts. Mrs. Clara Gairaud directed them, with Miss Tillie Brohaska at the piano. The Parlor ukelele club was also a feature of the broadcasting.

The hospital committee, with the president, Mrs. Emma Nelson, gave the veterans in the Parlor's ward at Palo Alto hospital an Easter party of program and refreshments. The Thursday afternoon club was entertained, with Mrs. Addie Hagen and Mrs. Ella Jennings as joint hostesses. Mrs. Julia Waddington and daughter, Miss Martha Waddington, have gone to Europe for a five months' trip. They enjoyed a few days in Los Angeles before leaving for New York.

The N.D.G.W. luncheon club meets every Thursday during the noon hour. All visiting members are cordially welcome. The past presidents were entertained by Mms. Dellwig and Buffington during the month. The mission benefit card party was held April 28, and was a great success.

Children's Benefit.

Bieber—For the benefit of the homeless children, a committee of Mount Lassen No. 215—Annye Mitchell, Bessie Chace and Nina Rosendahl—sold popcorn, peanuts and lemonade March 19. The booth was prettily decorated in the Order's colors and the girls wore white uniforms and caps.

May Barthold Night.

Oakland — Piedmont No. 87 entertained D.D.G.P. May Barthold March 31, with Harriett Emerson as chairman. An Italian supper was served. The table decorations were indicative of friendship. The honor guest was presented with a luncheon cloth. As a closing feature whist was enjoyed.

Busy Month.

San Jose—Members of San Jose No. 81 enjoyed a very busy month throughout April. The regular first of the month whist party brought out a good crowd of members and guests. The sewing club, which meets every Wednesday, is well attended and a large amount of handwork is being completed. These articles are to be used at the next big card party given for the benefit of the Parlor.

April 21 was a very jolly event, this being the regular monthly birthday party, with the April birthday girls the honor guets. Much sickness has prevailed [illegible] throughout the winter, and [illegible] from many hosts.

Two candidates were initiated by the past presidents' team of the Parlor who will exemplify the ritual at the Grand Parlor session here in June. A delicious banquet followed the meeting.

Morado's members are busy filling a hope-chest, which will be given away in May. April 4 the Parlor went to Oakdale, where the past presidents initiated a class of seven candidates for Oakdale No. 125.

Grizzly Bear Enthusiast.

Merced—Veritas No. 75 has made a record this now-closing Grand Parlor year. Twenty-three candidates have been initiated, co-operation has been given to civic enterprises and many successful social functions have been held.

Mrs. Mary Powell, one of Merced's most-honored Pioneers, is a charter member of the Parlor and active in all its projects. She is a Grizzly Bear enthusiast, too, and has in her possession a copy of every number. She advises every Daughter to read the magazine and become imbued with the Natives' California brand of fraternal spirit.

To Entertain Pioneer Mothers.

Woodland—Woodland No. 90 is making extensive preparations for the entertainment May 4 of the Pioneer Mothers of Yolo County, one of the biggest events of every year. An elaborate banquet and entertainment will be provided for the 300 guests. Many of the grand officers will be in attendance.

MAKE THESE PLACES YOUR HEADQUARTERS

DAYS OF '49 AGAIN AT OROVILLE

OROVILLE—ELABORATE PLANS FOR the "Days of '49" at Ophir, now Oroville, Butte County, are being rushed to completion. The business section of the place is fast turning back to the olden days, false fronts being put up on all business houses, and old hitching-posts and water-troughs making their re-appearance in old familiar places. Every one is dressed in pioneer costume; Whiskerinos are competing for a prize for the best hirsute adornment.

The big days of the celebration will be Friday and Saturday, May 6 and 7. The evening of the 6th, the main program will be held in Exposition Building, where a '49 camp is being established. At this time the spectacular wedding of "Uncle Sam and California" will be performed, the entire ceremony being carried out in a historical way. "Uncle Sam" has been selected and "Miss California" will be chosen by popular vote. A fashion show of genuine old costumes of former days will also be featured. Any one wishing to enter a costume will correspond with Mrs. Jessie Cress, in charge of that department. Prizes will be given for the best historical tableaux presented by any organization, club or group of people.

Saturday afternoon, promptly at 2 p. m., the monster parade will move through the streets of the old mining town. Prizes are being offered for best floats, pioneer costumes and vehicles, and to organizations making the best showing. Detailed information for entrance in the parade will be supplied through Mart Parker, chairman of the feature.

At the conclusion of the parade a program and dedication ceremonies will be presented at the corner of Montgomery and Myers street, where a bronze tablet will be placed upon a new building which stands upon the pioneer banking corner of Oroville. This tablet will be dedicated to the Pioneers of California by Gold of Ophir Parlor No. 190 N.D.G.W. and Argonaut Parlor No. 8 N.S.G.W., both of Oroville. The tablet will read as follows:

"This Tablet Commemorates the Establishment of the First Banking Institution in Ophir, now Oroville, which was Located on this Site and Occupied by McWilliams & Tynearson, G. A. Emery, Geo. Faulkner & Co. 1855-1868, Rideout, Smith & Co. 1868-1912, Rideout-Smith National Bank 1912-1922, Bank of Italy 1922-1927, and since March 1927 by the Bank of Italy National Trust and Savings Association, and Is Dedicated to the Pioneers of California by Gold of Ophir Parlor No. 190 N.D.G.W. and Argonaut Parlor No. 8 N.S.G.W. Placed May 7, 1927, by the Bank of Italy National Trust and Savings Association." The dedication is in charge of Florence Danforth-Boyle.

Following the dedication ceremonies will come band concerts, stage holdups, etc. Saturday evening there will be fiddlers', old-time quadrille and jig contests. Any entries may be made by communicating with Tom Mooney. As a finale for the celebration, May 8, Frank Boyle will stage a rodeo at Betchel Park.

Returns from the "Days of '49" will go into the building fund of the local Native Sons and Daughters, and it is hoped the proceeds will be so large that building operations may commence at once. The executive committee in charge of the big celebration is composed of: Florence Danforth-Boyle, Bernice Renfrow, Pansy Huse, J. Emory Sutherland, Mart Parker and Al Blum.

GOD'S GARDENS

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

God's Gardens, planted methinks, by the angels!
The seeds are pure thoughts of His own;
The color and splendor prevailing,
Are like those surrounding His throne.
For walls, He has built up the mountains,
For flower-beds, the valleys complete;
They're watered by brooklets and fountains,
And perfumed with frankincense sweet.
The blossoms are His very own choosing.
Where could we find aught to compare?
We fancy those growing in Eden
Could possibly not be more fair.
God's Gardens! So rare are the flowers
Which He sees fit to give us each year,
And the joy that comes as we pluck them,
Makes us think some of Heaven is here.

MANY DELIGHTS IN BRIDE'S ACCESSORIES

THE BRIDE CONSIDERS HER VEIL and bouquet, and chooses both to enhance her personality and lend dignity to the occasion. With the veil, perhaps the first consideration is the material, for here heirloom laces play an important part. In fact, the manner of draping may take its inspiration from the filmy web of beauty bestowed by some happy bride of another day. It may be accepted that the bride who possesses an heirloom veil will decide to use it. All the smartest shops take the possible possession of family lace into consideration as they plan the bride's veil. The bride may have to purchase a lace veil, and her choice may range through princess, Lierre, point applique, duchesse or brussels.

Rose point is particularly lovely among the newest lace wedding veils in the panel effect. This is rather narrow at the top of the veil and widens panwise as it reaches the lower edge. The shape is oval.

Another use of real lace is that of the scarves or panels draped from the shoulder, in court train fashion, beneath a sweeping cloud of tulle that softens, but does not conceal, the beautiful pattern of the lace. These scarves or panels have a practical appeal, inasmuch as they may find a place in the formal wardrobe instead of being laid away in lavender for the adornment of some future bride.

The cap style of arrangement is generally used with the lace veil, the border being fashioned into either a coronet or soft ruffled effect with lace. No set rule can be followed, and often an exceptionally beautiful effect is gained by merely draping its length from a wreath of orange blossoms. These are notably lovely when arranged at a rather high point in front.

Whatever the charm of lace, new lace, as well as old, has its appeal. Tulle remains the choice of the vast majority of brides almost irresistible in its allure. The width most in use runs from three to four yards and the length of the veil is generally from three to four and one-half yards, measuring from the head. Often the veil serves as a train.

Sentiment and convention alike conserve the popularity of white, but there is a growing liking for the cream tint, which cannot be noticed from the white but is much more flattering.

The spring bride's bouquet is a triumph of loveliness and, like her veil, it should be arranged with especial regard to her personal characteristics. To be quite correct, the spring flowers are decreed. White orchids, lillies-of-the-valley and white sweetpeas make an ultra smart combination, the shower type being used with a loose natural arrangement.

Another lovely bouquet is of lillies-of-the-valley, gardenias and white sweetpeas. The size of the bouquet and its form should be guided by the general appearance of the bride. Possibly she will catch her veil at her wrists with orange blossoms and dispense with gloves.

There is a decided fascination in the supple length of sixteen-button gloves of white glace kid, and they are correct.

The slippers are of white satin, in a wonderfully firm, lustrous quality, with a dainty, slim toe and fashionably high, slender heel. In place of buckles, she will be ultra smart with frilly rosettes of lace and orange blossoms.

Encircling her throat should be a strand of pearls with a jeweled clasp. Pearls are for the tears that bring good fortune to the bride.

So many delights are there in the bride's accessories. And what is more alluring than the breakfast coat, a creation that must be the palest pink georgette, lined with matching crepe or color combinations, and all aflutter with ruffles and flounces around the skirt? The sleeves have picoted edges and headings, and there must be a flower and ties for the narrow girdle.

For all these intriguing piles of fluffy lingerie to be kept in exquisite order, there are delightful ribbon holders. They are of satin, with slides and clasps, a final touch of charm for bureau drawers opening to a real froth of silken, lacy loveliness.

Naturally she must select with care the smartest of bags as an accent for her traveling costume. She leans to luxury and frivolity. However, in her vanity case, with its roomy compartments, are rouge, powder and lipstick to enhance her beauty.

Gold is the lure that leads feminine fancy to frock indulgence, and beige is a spring color that meets it half way. The gold belt, in tailored form, seeks expression, for the fluffier the frock the more severe the belt treatment.

In such an atmosphere the beige hat, of fine straw and extensive brim, is sure to shine. Shoes must be beige, with gold-tipped ties to fasten over the instep.

To choose gray for the formal ensemble reveals a mind keenly attuned to fashion's influence.

The more ties the dress supports, the more modish it is. The girdle will secure, very effectively, a tucked skirt yoke.

The printed coat is the newest coat of the season. In silk, it is often jacket length. In chiffon or georgette crepe, the tierred skirt is used.

Tiny collars, or none at all, is the style for the new sports coat.

Taffeta and printed chiffon are most popular because they are essentially suitable for summer wear, and because they are so becoming to all types, young and old, plump and slender. The foundation is always straight and simple, yet they have graceful stream lines made by floating jabot-like wings.

Tiers, flounces, panels and layers of materials are some times looped under sashes, scarfs or shawls. Long ends of fringe of various materials, and every other variety of drapery, flow and flutter on all the new gowns.

Inexpensive cotton frocks are approved for the little sister. Durable and figured patterns present the fabric notes in cotton frocks. The long-waisted note appears to be newer than the full-length style so frequently seen on the party frock.

Piping, smocking and cross-stitched designs on voile frocks of peasant type are the important trimming features. Organdie, applied in points, inserts or ruffles, promises a smart vogue for later promotion.

The junior has made very definite strides. She is now a person of very definite character and positive likes and dislikes. She imitates the grown-up in her wardrobe selections. She wants to look just as grown-up as her big sister. She chooses the conservative color combinations and accepts the vogue of black as if it had always been within her reach.

In contrast to this, is the increasing demand for the vivid reds and blues, which are much liked for school wear. Pastel shades are daily attracting more and more attention.

It is extremely interesting to witness the care with which hats are selected to complete the costume. The schoolgirl who has a liberal amount to spend on her clothes no more considers wearing the same hat every day than she does the same coat from season to season.

DON'T LEAVE THE WINDOWS CURTAINLESS ALL SUMMER.

With a good many housekeepers it is the custom to take down every window curtain in the house at the period of spring cleaning. After they have been laundered the curtains are put away until fall cleaning or some other traditional date permits them to go up again. In the meantime the windows remain bare and unattractive, and rooms lose their charm. They are filled with the unobscured glare of summer sunshine, which, while tempting in the first days of spring, is almost unbearable on hot days in many parts of the country. It helps to fade rugs and other furnishings. When privacy or subdued light is necessary the only course is to pull down the shades and incidentally to shut out most of the fresh air.

Curtains undoubtedly need cleaning from time to time, but this old-fashioned idea of housekeeping has given way to the more modern idea that it is not necessary to make homes bare, uncomfortable and ugly in order to have them clean. The Federal Bureau of Home Economics suggests that if the curtains used during the winter seem too elaborate or heavy for spring and summer, it would be a good plan to have a second set made of lighter, sheerer materials.

These would be in harmony with fresh slip covers and gay-colored decorations. They would serve every necessary purpose of curtains, retain softness and charm in each room, and add to its comfort. Side draperies, valances, and unnecessary trimming could well be omitted. As the hot summer sun fades many fabrics, these might be made of plain cream or white material or of some guaranteed fast-colored fabric. Draw curtains would be useful. They could be pulled back at night to permit the maximum circulation of air, and yet, when drawn, their texture would allow more air to penetrate into the room than a shade would.

When need for economy makes it impossible to have two sets of curtains, an all-year type of material can be selected that will stand the necessary wear and laundering required by double-duty curtains.

The action of Grand Secretary Regan in advising Ramona No. 109 that a Subordinate Parlor could not legally elect a Grand Parlor delegate after the time prescribed by the constitution was approved.

It was voted to recommend to the San Pedro Grand Parlor that Resolution No. 26 (insurance), referred to the board by the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor, be not adopted.

Seventy-five dollars was appropriated for cups to be awarded the Parlor making the most meritorious gain in the recent San Francisco membership campaign.

Grand President Welch reported that he had appointed A. W. Boyken (Stanford No. 76) a member of the Board of Appeals in place of Charles S. Peery (Stanford No. 76), resigned.

On motion, the Grand Parlor finance committee was requested to provide in the 1927-28 budget for a $1,500 allowance for the Grand President; also, that the annual $2,000 contribution for the proposed Cabrillo monument be not included in the budget to be presented at the San Pedro session.

Grand President Welch's action in the matter of selecting names of Californians to represent this state in the National Hall of Fame was approved. Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King were selected.

The board voted to recommend to the San Pedro Grand Parlor that the time in which the visiting grand officers may visit Subordinate Parlors be extended from February 1 to March 1.

U. S. C. HONORS NATIVE SONS

The announcement of former Lieutenant-Governor A. J. Wallace, President of the Board of Trustees of the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, of the appointment of Harold J. Stonier and Warren B. Bovard as Vice-Presidents is the first step to be made known of the new program of reorganization and adjustment which has been considered by the University for the past several months. This new program has been made necessary in order to cope with the rapid expansion and development of U.S.C.

HAROLD J. STONIER

President von KleinSmid has made an intensive study of a number of other educational institutions and, acting in conjunction with the Board of Trustees, has worked out a plan to meet the needs of the University from the standpoint of physical requirements as well as increased financial aid to cope with the new program. Complete details of the new plan have not yet been announced, but it is understood that the project includes the addition of faculty and officers not on the staff at present and increased responsibilities for some who are already in positions of authority.

Bovard and Stonier are the first of the present staff officers to undertake new responsibilities, although their new duties will be but a broader and more authoritative interpretation of their former positions. Colonel Bovard has been Comptroller of the University and Secretary of the Board of Trustees for a number of years and he will continue to function in those capacities. He will also handle administrative duties in the president's office in connection with problems of finance.

WARREN B. BOVARD

Stonier has been Executive Secretary of the University since 1923 and, as Vice-President, he will be in charge of educational contacts and development as applied to the interests of organized groups and the general public.

The Board of Trustees have adopted the vice-presidency idea because it has been in successful operation in such leading universities as Chicago, Pennsylvania and California, and because the trustees felt that the title of "vice-president" would express in a more adequate manner the nature of the offices and functions of Bovard and Stonier. They also indicate, by their action, the importance they place upon the work of these two men.

Both Bovard and Stonier are Native Sons of California, being affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. of Los Angeles. Bovard was born and reared in Los Angeles and was educated in that city. Stonier is a native of San Jose and his fellow-citizens may well be proud of his success; he also was educated at the University of Southern California.

It is fitting that Native Sons should be chosen to fill these new positions in an institution so typical of the state as the University of Southern California.

ASIATIC EQUALITY DEMAND MUST COME

barriers against Oriental immigration. Such demand may, or may not, be backed up immediately by force, but any delay will be but a temporary one unless we meanwhile reverse our present onward march in the direction of pacifism and sentimental sympathy with alien and enemy races, and become, again, what we were once, a united nation, and what we have never been before, a nation prepared, equipped and ready at all times and on a day's notice to fight for our rights at home and abroad.

There is endless argument that might be presented on this subject. It may be objected that, long before any conflict can arise between our country and China, there must be a hard struggle between China and Japan for Asiatic supremacy. It is impossible to prove by argument that this contention is not true. Perhaps it is true, only time will tell; but it is the height of folly to trust to such protection. If Japan and China fight, so much the better for us, and we should use every day of the time thus gained to put ourselves in better condition of defense for the inevitable conflict which will then come as soon as the Orientals settle their own differences and recuperate their strength.

Let the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West appoint a strong committee to study the entire subject from every angle—to see what we can do to stave off danger until we are prepared to meet it; to study how Congress may be influenced to act for our protection; to see what California can do for her own protection, for the encouragement and better equipment of the national guard, for the military instruction of young Californians, for education that will uproot pacifist influence and overcome Oriental propaganda and will counteract their effect upon the far too large body of American public opinion that is always susceptible to foreign pleas. Let such committee be empowered to confer with any other organizations that may arise to work along similar lines, or that should be interested in a survey of the entire situation at home and abroad.

Let us have action—immediately!

Valencia Show—Great plans are being made at Anaheim, Orange County, for the California Valencia Orange Show to be held there May 19 to 28.

SAN MIGUEL MISSION FACING DESTRUCTION

AN URGENT NEED FOR ASSISTANCE is portrayed by a visit to old Mission San Miguel at San Miguel, San Luis Obispo County. This historic old building, which is truly one of the landmarks of California today, is facing absolute destruction because of the infirmities caused by the weather-beaten condition of the roof and the supporting beams.

When one considers the important part the mission played in the early days of this part of the state and the extremely interesting history that can be told of it since the padres and the Indians built it in 1797, it is a shame to think of its impending fate.

Nothing in the way of noticeable restoration has been done to the building since the days of the padres, which means for the past 130 years. This also means that the original contours and architecture peculiar to the early days remain intact, despite the destroying elements and time.

San Miguel is in a unique place among the missions of California, inasmuch as it is the only one with the original mural decorations and its original main altar, pulpit and choir floor. Thus, it can be claimed that San Miguel is the original relic of the days of the padres. However, the walls of the sacristy are giving way and the roof will not withstand much more from the elements. The beams must be replaced, if San Luis Obispo County is still to boast its mission as the oldest and the most historical of the state.

It is not the desire of the present padre, Rev. Segarra—who hails from Barcelona, Spain, where they are still building adobe buildings,—to see the building restored to its original condition as has been the case of many other missions in the state, as that would destroy the real historical aspects of the building and make it an up-to-date structure, but merely to reinforce the weakened portions, that the present building might withstand the ravages of time and the elements.

Padre Segarra can tell a most interesting story of the old building, and anyone who is but passively interested in the ruins would be well repaid to go there and hear his story. He can tell of the Spanish origin of the tour of Padre Junipero Serra, to whom every Californian points with pride, and can tell the part San Miguel Mission played in that memorable tour.

Did you ever make a trip to Philadelphia, to the historical points such as the Betsy Ross house, and hear the guide lament the fact that two factory buildings were built right against the home of the woman who manufactured with her adept needle the first Stars and Stripes? This memorable event occurred just previous to the building of San Miguel Mission.

Did you, while there, visit Carpenter's Hall, which is completely surrounded by buildings, and hear the native Philadelphians tell of the mercenary ideas of those erecting such buildings and thus hiding one of the important landmarks of this glorious country, where the Congress of the United States had its first hectic meetings? These meetings were held at the time San Miguel Mission was being built.

Did you visit Independence Hall, which was saved from a like fate by the fact that the city government declared the surrounding ground a public park? In that building repose many irreplaceable relics from the time when they were building San Miguel Mission. And San Miguel Mission contains many irreplaceable relics, just as old and just as important to the State of California, which will soon be past redemption unless somewhere, somehow, something is done to prevent the roof of the building from falling in and ruining them.

It is not absolute restoration that is wanted with San Miguel Mission, but a prevention of further decay which is eating out the vitals of the structure, so that the architecture and the relics may be preserved for future generations to enjoy the same as we do.

It is far more satisfying to hear one say: "There stands the old Mission San Miguel, the [illegible] landmark of California in its original state [illegible] than it would be to stand off and [illegible] where the old Mission San Miguel [illegible] Isn't it true? Reprinted from the [illegible] of April 6, [illegible] Parlor No. 140 N.S.G.W.

AUGUST GUSTAVE KOCH.

August Gustave Koch, member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 Native Sons of the Golden West, having suffered from leakage of the heart for many years, passed on to the Grand Parlor on High, at Los Angeles, March 30, 1927. He was initiated into Ramona Parlor January 19, 1906. He was the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Koch, who came to Los Angeles in 1879 and 1882, respectively, born in Los Angeles January 23, 1886, and a brother to Alfred J. and Henry Koch Jr., both members of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. He attended the Thirtieth street grammar school and St. Vincent's College at Washington and Grand avenue, and was greatly interested in athletics. Eventually, he went into the rubber tire business but, on account of ill health, it became necessary for him to discontinue business about two years ago.

He was deeply interested in our Order, and was held in high esteem by not only the Native Sons but hundreds of friends in our city and county. He was a single man. His surviving relatives, friends and acquaintances will, indeed, miss his genial and kindly personality. We, his brothers in the great fraternity of the Native Sons of the Golden West, tender to his bereaved family and friends our heartfelt sympathy.

DOUGLAS FIR MONUMENT TO YOUNG SCOTCH BOTANIST.

The Douglas fir, well known and majestic forest giant of the Pacific Coast, is a monument to a young Scottish botanist, David Douglas. One hundred years ago Douglas was exploring the Pacific Northwest and adding greatly to the sum of forestry and botanical knowledge, not only of that region, but of North America.

The list of American trees and plants discovered and described by him runs into the hundreds. His privations and self-sacrifice while pioneering for science in the Oregon country from 1823 to 1830 were the more real because they had not for their goal material wealth. Douglas was only 25 years old when he first set out for America in 1823, but he already had a wide experience and reputation as a scientist.

He first saw the tree which later was to bear his name when he came onto the Columbia River, April 8, 1825, describing it as "a species which may prove to be 'pinus taxifolia'." When Douglas' specimens arrived in England, the tree was first called "pinus douglasii," but it was soon seen that it was not a pine. Passing through a varied nomenclature, it was finally named "pseudotsuga taxifolia," fasle hemlock.

Douglas fir is the correct name of this tree, not Oregon pine, red fir or yellow fir, by which names it is locally known and marketed.

OLD INDIAN GUIDE DIES AT ALAMO RESERVATION.

Captain Juanito Razon Agua Delce Tuba, known to old-timers as "Fig Tree John," an Indian who, it is claimed, guided Colonel Stephen W. Kearny and his United States troops on their march, in 1846, from Santa Fe to California, died at the Alamo Reservation near Oasis, Coachella Valley, April 11.

"Fig Tree John" was buried at the reservation in an old blue army uniform, over which was a long coat with brass buttons. He is believed to have been at least 110 years old, although he claimed to be 130.

CENTURY AND HALF ANNIVERSARY CALIFORNIA'S FIRST PUEBLO.

San Jose, Santa Clara County, is in readiness for its second annual Fiesta de las Rosas, which opens April 30 and will close May 7 with a magnificent floral parade.

This year the rose festival is combined with an exposition of progress, in commemoration of the city's one hundred and fiftieth anniversary as California's first pueblo. It was in 1777 that Lieutenant Don Jose de Moraga founded San Jose as a pueblo.

AUTO ADDS YEARS TO LIFE AND AIDS GENERAL HEALTH.

Although fatalities and accidents attributable to motor vehicles are generally deplored, and for the most part are preventable, there is a big story of health promotion and prolonging of life on the other side that is rarely emphasized, according to the Automobile Club of Southern California.

While it is obviously impossible to obtain exact figures, some fairly accurate conclusions may be reached from those at hand. These show that the automobile, instead of being a Juggernaut running amuck through the country, in reality is probably the most beneficent thing of humankind of modern times.

It is pointed out that while there were nearly 22,000 deaths from motor vehicles last year in the United States, this is only one fatality for every 1,000 motor vehicles in use, and only one life sacrificed to every 10,000,000 miles of travel. The injuries approximated one for every 200 autos in use, and these traveled approximately 2,000,000 miles before the injury was involved. Roughly estimating that thirty years of life are sacrificed in each death, it is found that automobiles in the United States are charged with the responsibility of 600,000 lost years for the entire population.

The other side of the story is far more cheerful, as physicians and economists give the automobile credit for adding several years of life to the family by which it is owned in addition to aiding in the general health of that family. However, allowing only one year of additional life to each person using an automobile, it is shown that 50,000,000 years are added to the total life of residents of the United States.

Thus it is shown that the years of life lost through operation of the 22,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States represent only 1.2 percent of the gain, making a most conservative estimate of possible years gained and giving a liberal allowance for years sacrificed. But it is possible to make the benefits of motoring 100 percent by careful driving, says the automobile club.

MILLIONS MOTOR TOURISTS THIS SEASON WILL SPEND BILLIONS.

The American Automobile Association estimates that 40,000,000 people will this year spend their vacations upon the open road. To move them, 10,000,000 motor cars will be required, and they will spend approximately $3,300,000,000. These estimates, based on reports from touring bureaus of 862 automobile associations, are regarded as conservative.

Of the 10,000,000 automobiles that will go touring this season, a third will carry camping equipment and be used for outings of a month's average. Two-thirds of the caravan will remain entour about ten days but will depend on hotels for accommodations. It is calculated that the camping brigade will spend about $1,000,000,000, and that the parties frequenting hotels will spend approximately $2,200,000,000.

The figures indicate that the 1927 touring season will show an increase of ten percent over last year. California is particularly interested in them, in view of the large proportion of motor-tourist travel which comes to this state and the anticipated increase in that proportion this year, due to improvement of transcontinental motor routes.

Courtesy—Courtesy and consideration of others will do much toward improving parking conditions.

Right of Way—Contesting for the right of way is one of the principal causes of automobile accidents.

TO AVOID BEING RECKLESS, HEED THESE DRIVING STANDARDS.

What constitutes reckless driving?

Regardless of what changing traffic rules the motorist may encounter as he travels out of his home territory, there are a few simple standards by which a reckless driver may always be recognized, according to Percy E. Towne, chairman of the public safety committee of the California State Automobile Association. Here they are:

"Driving any vehicle when not legally qualified.

"Driving while intoxicated.

"Driving any vehicle when it is not under practical control, especially at cross walks, near schools, where children are playing, or at points of congestion of traffic or movement of pedestrians.

"Failing to exercise due care in crossing or entering the traffic of another highway, bearing in mind that one must not interrupt the traffic on the more-traveled thoroughfare.

"Driving any motor vehicle across or into a safety zone.

"Exceeding a reasonable, considerate and safe speed under existing conditions or the speed rate established by law.

"Violating any of the regulations so as to cause danger, or failing to take every reasonable precaution for safety."

Towne points out that if a motor-vehicle driver avoids doing any of the things listed he or she will never be reckless and will not be primarily to blame in a possible accident. "A great deal of driving that is reckless beyond legal doubt," he says, "is lost to sight because too many motorists look upon it as a violation of some specific regulation that is entirely too minor to fit the case."

HUGE AUTO EXPENDITURES THROUGHOUT THE NATION.

Motor vehicles registered in the United States in 1926 totaled 22,001,393, according to the Bureau of Public Roads, Federal Department of Agriculture. The 1925 total was 19,937,274. Every state in the union registered a 1926 increase over 1925. Receipts from registration fees, licenses, etc., amounted in 1926 to $288,282,352, and in 1925 to $260,619,621.

In the grand total registered motor cars and trucks, California was second, with 1,600,475, following New York, with 1,815,434. Of the total for this state, passenger autos, taxis and busses totaled 1,384,152, and motor trucks and road tractors 216,323.

The Bureau of Public Roads is also authority for the statement that the forty-four states having a gasoline tax derived a net revenue of $187,603,231 from that source in 1926. California's gasoline receipts for the year are listed as $16,502,123.

STATE-WIDE SAFETY MEET.

The many problems involved in keeping the streets and highways safe will be discussed at a state-wide safety meeting, sponsored by the Public Safety Conference of the California Development Association, to be held at Berkeley, Alameda County, May 16 and 17.

PLENTY OF SNOW.

Motorists who love the purling streams in wooded dells will have ample opportunity this summer to indulge themselves, according to a snow report reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California. This deals with a survey of conditions encountered during a five-day trip in the High Sierras, in the vicinity of Yosemite National Park.

The blanket of snow is declared to be the heaviest that has been recorded in years, and is said to be ample to keep the streams running throughout the dry season.

Federal Highway Funds—California's apportionment of the Federal Government's $4,500,000 forest highway fund for the next fiscal year will be $575,000. The money will be spent upon roads in or adjacent to the state's national forests.

To Oil Roads—The State Highway Commission has undertaken the oiling of 700 miles of crushed rock and gravel roads in California at a cost of $600,000.

Safe Night Driving—Safe driving at night depends on both headlights being lighted and properly adjusted.

Gaining Ground—The fight for the repeal of the war excise tax on automobiles is gaining ground, according to advices from Washington, D. C.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENTS ON DECREASE IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

A decrease of more than 8 percent is shown in deaths from motor vehicle accidents in Los Angeles County for the first three months of 1927, compared with a similar period in 1926. The figures also show that there is a slightly larger decrease in all accidental deaths throughout the county. These facts are disclosed in a report of the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

While the county shows a marked decrease in fatalities, the City of Los Angeles shows an increase. During the first three months of 1926 there were sixty-nine killed, and in a similar period this year, the total was seventy-eight. In the entire county during the first quarter of 1926 there were 142 deaths, while in the first three months of 1927 there were 130, a decrease of twelve.

There was a decided decrease in loss of life, due to motor vehicles, among children fifteen years of age and under. The first quarter of 1926 showed twenty-three deaths from this cause, while so far in 1927 the total is only seventeen, a decrease of six.

As usual, collisions between autos and pedestrians account for the largest number of fatalities, with sixty-one for the three-month period. This was an increase of four, over a similar period last year, indicating that pedestrians are not so alert crossing streets as they might be.

Crossing the street not at an intersection resulted in twenty fatalities. The negligence of motorists at railway crossings caused thirteen deaths, and ten lives were sacrificed in electric railway and automobile collisions.

This reduction in fatalities is considered especially significant by traffic officers, in view of the fact that there were approximately 11 percent more automobiles in use in the county the first quarter of this year than there were in the first three months of 1926.

WORLD'S GREATEST BRIDGE SOON WILL BE OPEN TO TRAFFIC.

Crockett (Contra Costa County)—With the fixing into place March 19 of the continuous steel structure—the world's greatest highway bridge—spanning the northern arm of San Francisco Bay, it was possible, for the first time in history, for a person to walk, dry shod, across the Straits of Carquinez from the Contra Costa County to the Solano County shores.

In celebration of the bridge's completion, Crockett will have a five-day industrial and auto show, May 18 to 22. Special features will be staged daily. The big structure will be formally dedicated and opened to motor traffic May 21.

UTILIZE CRANKCASE OIL.

Don't throw away old cylinder or crankcase oil. Its value as paint is just being discovered and in many localities it is being largely used. It may be used just as it comes from the crankcase, if desired, although a pint or so of boiled linseed oil to a gallon of it will give a better surface. Chrome green or Venetian red, in quantities as desired, may be used for color. If it is used without additions, the crankcase oil is easily and quickly applied. Two coats should be used on new surfaces, and about every two years another should be added.

Starting Trouble Cause—Often when the starting motor of a car does not turn over, the trouble is not a dead battery but a loose or sulphated terminal or connection.

Loose Axle Nut—A loose axle nut or rim is indicated by a popping noise in a wheel of a car when starting or stopping suddenly. It should be tightened, otherwise a serious accident may result.

Steering Wheel Play—For easy steering of a car there should be not less than one inch nor more than two inches play measured on the rim of the steering wheel.

More Tire Mileage—Better tire mileage can be secured by a regular weekly trip to a service station to have the tires on a car properly inflated.

Glaring Headlights—Glaring headlights constitute one of the most frequent causes of traffic accidents.

Be Ready—Have your automobile under control, ready for a quick stop, when doubtful situations arise.

Your Playgrounds—California's forests are your playgrounds. Help keep them clean and green.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR)

MANY CHURCH AND LODGE PICNICS were held throughout California during May 1877. Some 6,000 Sonoma County people attended the Healdsburg Grange's picnic May 1. Jennie Johnson was queen of the May. Over 3,000 farmers and politicians were at the picnic of the grangers of Sacramento County, near Freeport, the same day.

The Emmet Guard of San Francisco had a picnic at San Jose, Santa Clara County, May 20. The train, on its return trip, was delayed over three hours by a gang of hoodlums setting the car brakes at every mile post. There were a hundred or more fistfights aboard the train, and these were followed by as many more street fights after the train had been unloaded in San Francisco.

Queen Victoria's birthday anniversary was celebrated May 24 by a boat race between the crews of the thirteen British ships anchored in San Francisco Bay waiting grain cargoes. It attracted an immense crowd upon the shore, while numerous yachts and other water craft crowded with race viewers floated upon the water.

A yacht race, with six contending yachts from San Francisco, sailed twenty-six miles up San Francisco Bay May 5. It was won by the "Cousins." A boy named McNulty, 17 years old, sailing a plunger and viewing the race, was knocked overboard and drowned.

May 21 the first Southern Pacific train was run to Jaeger's, on the west bank of the Colorado River, opposite Yuma, Arizona.

The Vaca Valley Railway was completed to Madison, Yolo County, May 1 and the event was celebrated with a big picnic there.

Earnings of the Central Pacific Railway for the first four months of 1877 were $4,734,600. This was considered a satisfactory increase over the earnings of the year previous.

A shipment of silver and trade dollars, amounting to $1,000,000, was made to China via steamer by California Chinese merchants May 10.

Falkner, Bell & Co. held several auction sales of wool in San Francisco and at one sale disposed of 1,355 bales at prices ranging from 11½ to 20 cents a pound, the higher prices being paid for choice clips.

Upon Santa Rosa Island, 25,000 sheep were being slaughtered for tallow and pelts, owing to a shortage of feed.

STOCK MARKET SLUMPED.

Secretary of the Interior Carl Schurz decided that the Thompson 1868 survey of the Los Angeles County Rancho San Vicente, embracing 38,000 acres, was erroneous and directed that it be corrected. This was expected to cut off about 2,000 acres. It did not effect Santa Monica, but was expected to benefit the holdings of Senator John P. Jones.

A. W. Von Schmidt appeared before the San Francisco Board of Supervisors May 19 with his scheme to supply 100,000,000 gallons of water daily to that city from Lake Tahoe.

Captain Mullett captured twenty-four sealions upon Santa Cruz Island, in the Santa Barbara Channel, and started for New York with them. He had a contract price of $500 for each one delivered.

The Lick estate sent a representative to Los Angeles to look after the property owned there, which consisted of the whole of Catalina Island and the Los Felis Rancho of 4,400 acres. It was estimated the land holdings in Los Angeles County totaled 51,000 acres.

The San Francisco stock market continued to slump, a miners' strike on the Comstock being the cause. Business fell off to a low volume and many brokers, not making office rent, began closing out. Some of the prosperous ones, who could retire with wealth, were contemplating a European trip, but many others, not so fortunate, were looking for jobs. The stock brokers held a meeting May 26 to discuss the critical situation, and a committee was appointed to consider ways and means of improving it.

I. Friedlander, the "grain king," compromised with his creditors and resumed business this month. War breaking out between Russia and Turkey caused an advance in the price of wheat that increased his assets materially. Later his luck went bad again. Wheat slumped, a warehouse at Keys burned with several thousand tons of wheat, and other complications arose.

A meeting was held in San Francisco May 9 to consider the irrigation of the east side of the San Joaquin Valley, and a corporation was decided on. It was to construct a canal in Merced County, taking water from the Merced River, and distributing it through ditches so as to irrigate 300,000 acres. A committee was named to make necessary arrangements. Thus began, next to the building of the railroad, the most important move to bring prosperity to that section of the state.

TIDAL WAVE MOVES RAPIDLY.

Boring of artesian wells in the Los Nietos section of Los Angeles County had become an epidemic.

Great frauds in grabbing government and state school lands were claimed to have been found, and the newspaper columns of the day reeked with details and exposures.

A gang of rescals were making money by securing loans on forged mortgages on property in Oakland, Alameda County. About $100,000 had been obtained before the scheme was discovered.

B. F. Chase, who invented a process for blowing glass by compressed air, was in Truckee Nevada County, endeavoring to organize a company to construct a glass factory at Donner Lake. There material in plenty had been found Wild mustard became such a pest in the wheat fields of Sonoma County that men were employed to pull the plants ont by their roots and thus eradicate the nuisance.

A tidal wave broke on the California South coast May 10, running up to a height of twelve feet but doing no damage. It was from a terrible earthquake upon the Peruvian coast the day before. It struck Anaheim, Orange County, forty minutes before it reached Gaviota, Santa Barbara County, showing it rolled at the rate of over 200 miles an hour.

Rival bathhouse proprietors at Santa Monica Los Angeles County, began to cut prices. One agreed to supply a bathing suit, and to throw in a drink at the end of the swim, for a dime.

The feast of Pentecost was celebrated in a San Francisco synagogue May 18. After the confirming of several novitiates an alarm of fire was given and the congregation became panicstricken. They managed to make their exit without fatal injury to any, but there were many narrow breadth escapes.

Fire at Merced City May 18 destroyed two hotels and several business houses, causing a $20,000 loss.

The Salinas, Monterey County, flourmill was burned May 10 with a $25,000 loss.

The stage from Gilroy, Santa Clara County, to Los Banos, Merced County, was stopped May by two masked men. One took the express box and the mail sack and robbed the driver of $2

"Yuma Charley," an Indian chief from the Colorado River, bought a squaw for a cayuse and went to Los Angeles City upon the hurricane deck of a box car on his bridal tour. There he attracted much attention and had the time of his life. His squaw, barefooted, was arrayed in an expensive colorful blanket, which she wore entrain. He was a constant visitor at the circus and did not pay a cent for admission, as he was considered a guest.

"IT RAISED HELL."

T. Jeff White, a wealthy and prominent citizen of Los Angeles City, died and willed his estate to his infant child and a Miss Bockman, a divorced woman who nursed him during his last illness, giving half to each. George M. Pinney, who levanted nearly two years before under a cloud of financial crookedness, suddenly appeared May 5 in the district attorney's office at San Francisco and surrendered on two indictments for forgery, but was released on $20,000 bail. Pinney, at the time of his departure to unknown lands, was filling a position in the navy paymaster's department at Mare Island, was a stock broker, a mining magnate and a prominent politician. He and his wife were also in leading social circles of San Francisco and Oakland. His departure left countless creditors to mourn and friends to be astounded. A few days after his return he made a statement, that filled four columns of a daily, in which he charged his financial troubles to Senator Sargent, Congressman Page, George C. Gorham, W. B. Carr and a number of other leading political associates whose campaigns he claimed to have financed but was not reimbursed. In the words of an editor of that date, "It raised hell." Denials and criminations followed galore, libel suits were filed, and the public mind was occupied in endeavoring to winnow the statements with the consensus of opinion that everybody was not telling all the truth. May 31 ten warrants of arrest were issued and served, charging Pinney with embezzlement of the funds of a mining company. He went to jail, being unable to furnish the $50,000 bail required.

Alfred Ver Mehr, the San Francisco minister's son who embezzled $40,000 from his employers and spent it bucking the tigers and tigresses of the tenderloin jungle, then skipping to Mexico whence he was returned in custody, pleaded guilty and was sent to the penitentiary for six years.

CHINESE MURDERERS CONVICTED.

The grand jury in San Francisco May 3 ignored the charge of murder against Antonia Von Apponig, who had created so much attention in the four months past. Her story of the wrongs done her by the murdered man made it appear a justifiable homicide and she was freed.

The trial of the Chico, Butte County, Chinese murderers began at Oroville May 23. The accused young men were depending on the belief that no Butte County jury would hang a White man for killing a Chinaman. Steinbrook, first tried, was found guilty of murder in the second degree, then F. E. Conway, John and James Slaughter and Eugene Roberts pleaded guilty of second-degree murder. They were each given twenty-five years in the penitentiary.

Chin Mook Sow, a Chinese murderer, was hung in the San Francisco jail May 4. About 500 invited guests witnessed a perfect necktie party.

Manuel Salazar was hung at San Rafael, Marin County, May 31 for the murder of a farmer named Brown in Sonoma County in 1876. A large crowd of sheriffs and peace officers witnessed the execution in the jail yard, while the hills behind the court house were black with people observing the scene.

The sixteenth homicide in as many months in Colusa County occurred May 6, when a carpenter named Gardner had a dispute with an old settler named Morine. The former struck the latter, who immediately drew a bowieknife and ripped the carpenter's abdomen open, inflicting a fatal wound.

Peter Schneider was given by Richard Stokes in San Francisco a wagonload of whisky, tobacco and cigars to sell in the interior towns. He became his own best customer, and had the jamboree of his life. Returning without the cargo or any funds, he delivered himself to the chief of police, but that official declined to take him into custody unless Stokes made a complaint. Schneider departed in quest of Stokes, but never returned.

A miner from Darwin, Inyo County, upon the ferryboat opposite Goat Island handed a sealed letter to the captain, with a request that he mail it. He then dashed to the rail and jumped overboard. The boat was stopped and rescuers grasped him by his long hair as he was sinking for the last time. When taken aboard he was found to be insane.

RACE TRACKS DRAW.

Thomas McAdams, James H. Burke and J. Brown started for a sailboat cruise upon San Francisco Bay May 17 and shortly after disa peared near Mission Rock. The boat drift ashore a few days later, bottom up, and t bodies came ashore about ten days later.

W. H. Dory, while working in his mine in N vada County, was buried alive by a cave May

Wm. Robinson, in the Crater mine at Oph Placer County, May 1 looked upward at a bo der in a drift just as it fell and fatally crush his chest.

The 12-year-old daughter of Charles Devera at Temescal, Alameda County, picked up a loa ed shotgun May 5 and was looking into the ba rels when it was accidentally fired. She was i stantly killed.

May 1 Wm. Lavid, on the Klamath Riv starting a water wheel to irrigate his land, w knocked into the water and drowned.

More than 2,000 people gathered at the S linas, Monterey County, racetrack May 6 to s "Goldsmith Maid" and "Rarus" trot for a pur of $2,000. "Rarus" was permitted to win o heat in 2:23 and "Goldsmith Maid" took t other three without much exertion in slow time.

Chico, Butte County, had a successful ra meet during the week of May 13. "Goldsmi Maid" and "Rarus" closed the meet the 19 with a trot for $2,000 and an added $1,000 the best time for a mile trot in the state w made. "Goldsmith Maid," in the second he was sent out for the extra money and got it trotting the heat in 2:14½; she also won t race.

May 28 and 29 this hippodrome of the tr ting elite of the nation, for a $2,000 purse, a with the usual result but in slower time, exhi ited before a large attendance at the Oakla track.

Colonel George Crocker believed he had t fastest double team in the world and attempt to lower the 2:27½ world record May 18 ov the Bay District track, San Francisco. The be time made was 2:30, and the failure was blam on the north wind then prevailing. The effo was again made May 21 and the world reco was lowered to 2:26¼.

There were showers throughout the state M 16 and 28, doing neither good nor harm.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

EXTENSION SERVICE OF INESTIMABLE VALUE

COLLEGES OF AGRICULTURE HAVE three distinct functions: research, the diagnosing and solving of agricultural problems; instruction, the teaching of agricultural knowledge to students; and extension, the carrying of the knowledge gained by research to the farmers, through the Agricultural Extension Service. California's research problems exceed those of any other state by far. With an area, for instance, of about ten or a dozen New England and Eastern states, California has but one experiment station and college to solve her problems, as against the ten or twelve there. Moreover, comparatively few crops are raised in those states, most of them the same in all the states. California has all the crops raised by every other state in the union, with the exception of sugarcane, together with a number of specialty crops grown commercially only here. With such a varied agriculture, carried on under a scale of soil and climate that runs nearly the whole gamut, extension has become a service to the farmer of inestimable value.

Seven times the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California has carried delegates of the Farm Bureau into various districts of the state to show what it is accomplishing. This year, May 16, the Eighth Agricultural Extension and Farm Bureau Travel Conference will leave Berkeley to spend six days in the San Joaquin Valley. This year Director B. H. Crocheron plans to show farmers of the state what has happened when a whole community adopts practices recommended by the College of Agriculture. Demonstration plots visited six years ago will be revisited, and the whole practice will be reduced to dollars and cents. Two hundred and fifty men, in fifty-five automobiles, will make the trip; and this year bankers and businessmen will be invited to come along and see what the College of Agriculture of the University of California is doing with the money the state gives for its work.

PICNIC DAY HAS REAL MEANING.

The annual picnic day at the University Farm, at Davis, Yolo County, last month, was more than a mere picnic event. Originated to bring the farmers and people generally of the surrounding country to the branch of the College of Agriculture there, picnic day has developed into an occasion that has a real meaning to agriculture. Some thirty or forty high-schools, representing nearly every section of the state, sent judging teams to compete in the tests on livestock, grains, dairy products, orchards, etc. Every division of the college had an exhibit calculated to interest the visitors, and to give instruction in modern farm practices as well. The entertainment feature was not overlooked, but it has been subordinated to a more serious purpose of acquainting the young agricultural students of the state with the facilities of the University of California for further technical and practical study.

BANKERS ENLIGHTENED.

Another event at the University Farm last month that is worthy of notice was the bankers' short course, given for two days by the College of Agriculture. The first day was devoted to a study of the research work being done by the various divisions of the college; and the second to the manner of practical application of the results of this research through the Agricultural Extension Service. More than a hundred bankers, from all parts of the state, attended the course; and while they may have learned little that will aid them as agriculturists, it is safe to say they learned much that will be of benefit to them as farmers, in understanding the work of the university in solving the agricultural problems of California.

SIRE IS HALF THE FLOCK.

The sire is half the flock in poultry as well as in other livestock. If a flock of hens must produce 175 eggs to pay expenses, the hens that lay more than that number are the ones that pay profits. Chicks must be purchased, or hatched, from pedigreed stock of known production records to make poultry a safe business. The University of Ohio owns a cock that sired twenty-four daughters, not one of which laid less than 200 eggs in a year, and two of which laid 300. Their average was around 240. Another cock, to all appearances as good, sired daughters that averaged around 170 eggs, and only two of which made as high as 200 eggs. When the profits are figured, and consideration is given to the number of pullets each of these males might have sired, the value of a good cock in the flock is easy to see.

CURE FOR APHIS.

Aphis on the rose bushes, the ornamental shrubs, the flowers or trees about the yard may cause serious damage, if not actual loss. The ornamentals lose their right to such a name, roses fail to produce their blossoms and gardens their vegetables, if the aphis is permitted to go unchecked. Black leaf forty and oil emulsion is the cure. This solution should do the work: whale oil or laundry soap, one pound; water, five gallons; nicotine (black leaf forty), one tablespoon. Mix it well and see that it is applied so that every insect gets its share.

EVERY DAY HARVEST DAY.

More than 150 crops of various kinds are recorded by the State Department of Agriculture as growing commercially in California. Some 300 cars of vegetables are marketed in the state every day. While the spring and summer sees the bulk of these coming to the markets, every day is harvest in California, and there is no time when there are not fresh vegetables enough supplied in the state to fill its table demands, with a plentiful surplus at most times for other sections of the country.

MARKETING TO HAVE OFFICIAL HEAD.

Marketing in California is to be given an official head next month, with the arrival of Lloyd Tenney, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, who will look over the field and consult with Director George H. Hecke of the State Department of Agriculture in making the selection of a man for this most important position. For the last year and a half Prof. B. L. Adams of the University of California, loaned by the College of Agriculture for the purpose, has been shaping the market situation toward this end, and with the passage of the Commission Merchants Act, has carried the work as far as it is possible under the circumstances.

The State Markets Division has been without an actual head for several years; and it is the hope of agriculturists of California that through the co-operation of the State and Federal Departments of Agriculture a market director may be chosen who will become a real factor in supervising the distribution of California's products in the markets of the country.

TUBERCULOSIS SERIOUS DISEASE.

Tuberculosis is one of the most serious of cattle diseases, both to herds and to humans, with which agriculture has to contend. Owing to the fact that no indemnity is paid for slaughtered cattle in California, eradication measures have been slow. However, there are now eighty-six federal accredited herds in the state, with 5,390 cattle. In addition, there are several counties that are modified free areas, with less than half of one percent of infected cattle in the entire county. This movement is spreading, particularly in the beef producing counties, where it is easier to eradicate the disease.

When it is considered that 30 percent of all tuberculosis in children comes from milk infection, the seriousness of the situation is realized. However, children are safeguarded by laws requiring pasteurization, if milk comes from herds not free from disease; and by close inspection even if the cows are known to be free from tuberculosis.

A GOOD WHITEWASH.

Whitewashing trees by the use of a power sprayer is one of the easiest and most economical means of getting the material on the trees and it is a way to get a neat job as well as a thorough one. A good whitewash for this purpose may be made by using a 180-pound barrel of quicklime, five pounds of salt and eight pounds of cheap powdered sulphur. After the solution has been well mixed, strain through a fly screen and pour into the tank. It may look a bit yellow at first, but it will bleach with a day of sun. Don't whitewash in the rain, if a good job is desired.

DIFFICULT SEASON.

This has been a difficult season in the orchards, in some respects. The continued rains have made many fruitgrowers feel they could not delay cultivation, and as a result some soil has been worked much too wet. This injures the physical condition of the soil, and makes subsequent operations more difficult. Don't worry about the height of the cover crop, the more nearly mature it gets the better it is for fertilization.

And as long as the soil is too wet to work, it is doing no damage. However, when the moisture conditions are such that the ground work well, get at the cultivation. Disc the cover crop under, if possible, and usually it is. Better results will obtain from cutting up the growth particularly where it is rank, and working it into the soil in that way, than by plowing it under as a mass.

Cultivation is good, and should be continued throughout the season, as long as there are weeds. With the weeds removed, there is no object in the further working of the soil. Moi ture is retained but slightly through constant cultivation, if indeed it is helped at all. The greatest losses of moisture are occasioned by transpiration through the leaves of the plants; and with weeds gone, cultivation becomes unnecessary. But be sure to see that the weeds are gone for, up to this point, cultivation is essential.

WATCH THE GOSLINGS.

Watch for signs of trouble with the goslings. Often it will be noticed that they are thin and wobbly on their legs, and usually the trouble will be found to be worms. A quarter of a pound of epsom salts and two ounces of powdered copperas in twenty-five pounds of the mash feed will be found an efficient means of control. Also remember that goslings are frightened easily, and that disorders arise sometimes from this cause, or from digestive disorders. A teaspoonful of castor oil will help in this case.

QUALITY FRUIT IN DEMAND.

Don't hesitate to thin when the fruit tree has gone beyond the danger of frost injury, and be sure the job is accomplished before the pits of apricots and peaches harden. The demand of the trade is for quality fruit, and of a large size. Remember, too, that a tree bearing large fruit, as a result of careful thinning, will give more pounds than one loaded with small fruit.

Apricots should be thinned so that there is a space of at least four inches between the fruits on the same side of a limb. The distance may be somewhat less if the fruits are on opposite sides. Clusters of fruits offer a refuge for fungus and insect pests, and no fruits should be permitted to touch. If properly thinned, the fruit will be of much better size and finer quality, the tree will be in better shape for the next year's crop, and the returns over a period of years will be much greater, despite the cost of thinning.

NEW WORLD RECORD.

A new world record in the production of butterfat was recorded in California last month, when Abbekirk Pansje Prilly, a Holstein Friesian cow owned by Mrs. Fred Stenzel at San Lorenzo, Alameda County, made 40.39 pounds of butterfat from 567.1 pounds of milk in seven days. Measured in terms of butter, as Holstein records are given, the cow made 50.49 pounds of butter, the first cow ever to produce this amount in seven days under strict supervision.

The cow was bred by the Bridgford Holstein Company at Patterson, and was a granddaughter of the famous old King Segis Alcartra Prilly. Unfortunately, a few weeks after making this record, and while carrying on at a rate that gave promise for a record on a longer time basis, the cow was seized with liver trouble and died. Her record, however, probably will stand for many years as a testimonial to careful breeding, proper feeding and excellent care.

TURKEY CENSUS WILL SHOW INCREASE.

With the development of the day-old poult business, the turkey industry in California has taken a decided impetus. Incubator hatching was believed impractical for turkeys, but has been shown in the last two or three years to be entirely feasible and economical. As a result, many who did not care to bother with breeding have been purchasing day-old poults, and the turkey census this year will more than likely show a considerable increase.

Poults must be handled with care until they are past the baby stage when, if they are on clean ground and have the proper feed, they become quite hardy. A good range is desirable, although not absolutely essential, as many turkey producers are getting success with penned birds. Freedom from blackhead infection is necessary.

STOCKTON---
A CITY OF ROMANCE

A. M. Robertson

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

DATING FROM THE EARLIEST DAYS of California's famous goldrush, Stockton has been the outstanding historical city in the West. Around the discovery of gold in 1848, the early development of Interior California and subsequent events, was chronicled the history of this city of homes and industries, and coupled with the history of the pioneer days of this city and section is the romance made famous by Bret Harte and Mark Twain.

From Stockton radiate the "old gold trails" leading to the famous early-day mining districts, where still stand those "ghost cities" which, at one time, were active mining camps—cities, at one time populated by thousands of active citizens but now standing practically deserted as mute evidences of the early days of California's gold rush.

The most fascinating, alluring and heart throbbing tales ever penned by man have been written by Mark Twain and Bret Harte on the scenes and stories laid in the mining towns of the Mother Lode section of California. Those towns were active mining camps and hubs of seething gold-mad adventurers—the Pioneers of '49. Wrapped up in the chronicles of the Mother Lode section are all the stories of the lurid life in the gold camps of the pioneer period. It was around the gold discovery and the events which followed that the story of the West has been written, and the sentiment in the hearts of the American people, which is associated with the historic cities of Sonora, Angels Camp and San Andreas and other historic towns of the region of romance, provides the lure and tinges the whole section with a rosy glow of the events of the past.

Millions upon millions in gold have been taken from the hills in the Mother Lode section and is still being taken from certain sections of this country, but in a very small percentage to the amount taken out during the early days. Old timers—miners of the days of '49—who made their stake and lost, and still inhabit these cities of history, still cling to the hope that eventually another strike will be made which will bring back the activity and excitement that prevailed in the days of the early '50s. These old timers, grizzled with age and full of conversation of the days that were, still cling to the fond hope that they will live to see the time when the lost vein will again be found and the old camps again become active. Who can resist a trip through this section of California, within a short ride of the City of Stockton, to review the remains of those once-flourishing mining camps and converse with the men who fought their fight and lost and who still exist through [illegible] and the charity of their more [illegible] neighbors."

From the City of Stockton, at the junction of the San Joaquin and Sacramento [illegible], radiate those old gold trails which wind through the mining land of the Bret Harte and Mark Twain country, and the land of romance and adventure.

Present day Stockton, dominant metropolitan city of Interior California, was the base of supplies and the outfitting point for the Southern mines. It was at Stockton that the thousands of gold seekers who came in sailing vessels around the Horn landed, to secure outfits and then rode over the trails into the mountains in search of the gold trail. Stockton has, therefore, from the days of the earliest discovery of gold, been a point of contact with this romantic section of California, and which country has, in the intervening years since the vein "played out," developed into rich agricultural producing sections, still making Stockton the trading and shipping center for the gold which is still mined, but in the form of agricultural and livestock products.

The old "gold trails" are now paved or macadamized highways, carrying their modern motor stages and automobile parties through this land of scenic grandeur, which makes the heart throb as one contemplates the scenes which transpired in the days when the six-shooter was the law of the land. These highways pass through sturdy forests where the mountains and rushing streams make man forget the worry and the care of every-day humdrum life. Supplementing stage and motor transportation are the facilities of steam railroads, which will transport the visitor quickly from the floor of the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, with their plumed orchards, into another land where the hills and the people are changeless and strong and where one may stand in the one-time mining towns, populated by frenzied gold seekers —towns that are now "ghost cities"—and gaze off into the cool and majestic distances that appeal and inspire. Starting from Stockton, known in the early days as Weber's Settlement, now the economic and agricultural center of California, one can within a few miles' ride undertake a trip over this historic section of California.

So much by way of preface and generalization; but as this story will undoubtedly be read by natives of California who have traveled these historic trails, as well as by those who are only familiar with them through reading stories and histories about this section, the writer feels that a travelogue might be of interest. Let us start, therefore, from Stockton on a trip that will take us to the land immortalized by Bret Harte and Mark Twain, Joaquin Miller and Charles Dana—a trip that will be full of scenic and historic interest.

Our road leads to the eastward over paved highways that were once the old miners' trails, to the lower foothills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, where we first come to Knights Ferry, one-time county seat of Stanislaus County. Those who have read Bret Harte will recall that this community is particularly noted as the location for his story "The Episode of Fiddletown." Near Knights Ferry is the beginning of a belt of lava, which is a remarkable feature throughout the country; this formation is known as Table Mountain. Its top is level and its sides perpendicular. The old location of "Poker Flat" is at the base of this rugged mountain. Poker Flat was likewise the scene of another famous story, "The Outcast of Poker Flat," and is now known as Copperopolis. At a point about four and a half miles above Copperopolis, or Poker Flat as it is more familiarly known, is the point where "Black Hart" held up his last stagecoach in 1883 and where he buried his treasure in a hole in the rotten trunk of a dead buckeye. For ten years "Black Hart" terrorized the Mother Lode section, until he was caught and sentenced to San Quentin prison.

Continuing on a short distance we come to Jamestown, formerly known as "Jimtown." It was near Jimtown that gold was first discovered in Tuolumne County, in the year 1848. The famous placer mines of "Jimtown" are no more, and agriculture is the form of gold which is now being taken from the soils of this rich section.

Beyond Jimtown is historic Sonora, where gold was found most plentiful and a day's wages were anywhere from $500 to $1,500, according to the luck of the miners. Just above Sonora are the bars and flats that yielded fifty-five millions in gold. In one of these bars was found a single nugget weighing twenty-eight pounds and four ounces, and which was valued at $6,120. Other tremendous nuggets have been found in this section, and there will be seen a few prospectors panning the sand of the rivers or streams that still yield small gold nuggets. Bret Harte was particularly fond of Sonora, and it is the location of many of his famous stories.

A short distance from Sonora is the most interesting "ghost city" of the Mother Lode—Columbia, one-time city of 15,000, with a burning ambition to become the capital of California, and it did come within three votes of this accomplishment. Columbia is a quaint old town with a present-day population of 250 inhabitants who would not be content to live elsewhere. These old residents of this present sleepy, but once intensively active, town can tell stirring stories of events of other days and give the visitor first hand information of episodes in the state's history. Main street is the same today as in the '50s; there still stand long rows of pretentious business buildings, significant of the activity that once prevailed.

Returning to Sonora, our journey continues on to Tuttletown, seven miles to the west. The early Pioneers called it Tuttleville, after Judge Tuttle. Thousands of American readers have been entertained by Bret Harte's story of how "Santa Claus" came to "Simpson's Bar," in which he pictures a wild night ride to Tuttleville. The old Tuttletown hotel is still standing and is known as the "hotel of all nations." It was here that Bret Harte and Mark Twain made their headquarters for considerable lengths of time, while accumulating material for their many interesting stories. Tuttletown is one of the best known mining towns in the Mother Lode section.

A few miles from Tuttletown we come upon Jackass Hill, where still stands the cabin occupied by Mark Twain for several months and where he gathered material for his story, "Roughing It." It was also while living in this cabin that he secured the material for the story which was to make him famous in later years —"The Jumping Frog of Calaveras."

Continuing on north we wind down a splendid road, along the Stanislaus River, where we cross at a place known as Robinson's Ferry. To the left of this bridge is a town built especially for the filming of the picture, "The Covered Wagon," a western picture depicting the early pioneer days in the development of the west, and depicting hair-raising episodes encountered by those hardy Pioneers who came to California after gold was discovered in 1848. The last scene of this picture was taken here, it being the end of the journey to California by those represented in the picture, and the village has many times since been used for western pictures.

Adjoining Robinson's Ferry is the little town of Melones, named from the form of gold nuggets found nearby, which were in the shape of melon seeds. Melones is the center from which one may contemplate the entire Mother Lode section. Within a radius of a dozen miles are Sonora, Chinese Camp, Sandy Bar, Table Mountain, Jimtown, Columbia, Tuttletown and Angels Camp. Just below the town a $2,500,000 water conservation dam is being built, which will store and provide irrigation water for the fertile valley sections below.

Angels Camp is the next point of interest, and is but a very short distance from Melones. The hotel, known as "The Angels," which is still in use and a great point of interest to tourists, was built in the year 1856 and was occupied in the year 1865 by Mark Twain while gathering material for his stories. Angels Camp is the location of two of Bret Harte's best stories—"Mrs. Scaggs' Husbands" and "Society Upon the Stanislaus." While in Angels Camp we should visit the Moaning Cave at Vallicita and Mercer's Cave at Murphy's, which are but a short distance, both being old mining towns and containing many points of interest. These caves represent vast cathedrals of silence and contain a series of scintilated chambers with weird and grotesque formations of rock.

From Murphy's it is but a short distance to the Calaveras Grove of Big Trees, where may be seen the oldest living trees, there being in this forest 490 giant sequoias more than twenty feet in diameter. Returning to Angels Camp we continue on to San Andreas, where there are still many paying gold mines in operation. This is also the center of quite a rich agricultural producing section, and the location of one of the largest Portland cement plants in the West. It was at San Andreas that Joaquin Murietta, the notorious bandit, carried on his operations, robbed the wayfarer and held up stages traveling to and from the Southern mines, and this historic and picturesque little city was the location for Bret Harte's story, "Salomy Jane's Kiss."

From San Andreas we start our journey homeward over the fine gravel and paved highway, returning to Stockton by way of Valley Springs, Bellota and Linden. The homeward journey takes us through some of the richest agricultural sections of the San Joaquin Valley, where we may see the production of all types of commercial fruits, berries, grapes and nuts. Near Linden, thirteen miles out from Stockton, is located the largest English walnut orchard in the world, comprising 600 acres.

Returning to Stockton, there are many points of interest to be seen, including the new Civic Memorial Auditorium, City Hall, Hazelton Library, College of the Pacific, State Hospital, State Armory, and a vast number of manufacturing industries, which include a paper products company, harvester plants, pencil factories, iron foundries, automobile truck plant, leather tannery, brick plants and the Stockton shipyards, where are built many types of river and pleasure boats. The Bret Harte and Mark Twain trail map, an oil painting 12x20 feet in size in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium, can be reviewed and will bring more clearly to mind the many historic and romantic points of interest just seen on our trip.

We must not overlook Stockton's present harbor, which is soon to be dredged to a depth of twenty-six feet to permit 95 percent of all ocean-going vessels to dock at our wharves. $6,500,000 has been appropriated by the Federal and State Governments and the City of Stockton for the completion of this work, preliminary engineering having already commenced.

Stockton, therefore, offers more than the average western city. It offers opportunities for commercial and agricultural enterprises, together with a land of recreation unsurpassed, where it is still possible to renew and enjoy the early romance of California.

NATIVE SONS HAVE NEW PRESIDENT.

Harry Herrmann was elected president of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. March 28, to fill the unexpired term of John Gallagher who, having gone to Hanford, Kings County, to reside, resigned. Herrmann was duly installed April 4 by D.D.G.P. Fred G. Krumb. He was formerly affiliated with Golden Gate Parlor No. 29, San Francisco, of which he is a past president, and for several years has served No. 7 as a trustee. R. D. Dorcey succeeds him on the Parlor's board of trustees. President Herrmann promises many feature programs during his term.

At the San Pedro Grand Parlor session, Stockton Parlor will be represented by Hubert R. Mc Noble, Past Grand President; William C. Neumiller, of the Board of Control; George F. Mc Noble, of the Board of Appeals, and the following delegates: Edward Van Vranken, Law T. Freitas, Ray Freidberger, Fred G. Krumb, Joel V. Beck Jr., Walter P. Rothenbush, John M. Perry, Fred E. Potter.

FLIES NOT NECESSARY.

Flies are not needed around the farm, or the city home for that matter. Careful disposition of manure and refuse, so that breeding places are not easy to find, is the best method. However, with flies appearing, some means of control is necessary. Screens will help, but often a repellant aids. Take laundry soap, one pound; water, four gallons; crude petroleum, one gallon, and powdered naphthalin, four ounces. Shave the soap and dissolve in water by heating. Dissolve the napthalin in the crude petroleum, and mix the two solutions thoroughly. Apply twice a week with a brush, keeping it stirred well.

HOLLYWOOD, THE UNIQUE

The Beautiful Residential Section of Greater Los Angeles Where Art, Science and Industry are Happily Combined

HOLLYWOOD HAS BIG PLANS

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

AT THE ANNUAL ELECTION OF THE Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, Parker V. Foster was named president for the fiscal year 1927-28. He is one of the youngest men ever named to this important position, and is regarded as one of the most active in community and civic work in Hollywood.

With the reorganization of the board, J. Don Mahaffey was named first vice-president, M. F. Palmer second vice-president, Sam Kress re-elected for the third year to the office of treasurer, and Carl Bush re-elected to serve his sixth year as executive secretary. Other directors on the board are Charles A. Best, C. E. Boag, E. F. Bogardus, P. D. Dodds, Harry E. Jones, C. J. McLaughlin, Mrs. Burdette H. Norton, Fred L. Porter, Herbert Scholfield, DeWitt Strode and Carl C. Walters.

The new board has already been installed and, with Frank K. Galloway, immediate past president, as advisor, is working out a definite and ambitious program of operation for the coming year. Street improvements, together with improvements in the transportation service, are to be stressed in this program. It is the purpose not only to drive hard toward the completion of street projects already ordered but to inaugurate a new schedule for further street improvements.

One of these takes cognizance of the condition of Santa Monica boulevard from Seward street west to LaCienega, which is already up with both the city and the county engineering departments. Some years ago, Santa Monica was paved with cement concrete from the territory mentioned and most all the distance with a singular style of survey, which eliminated a crown and consequently no gutters. Storm waters at the present run along the Pacific Electric tracks and keep the right-of-way in bad condition by erosion.

Carl Bush, executive secretary of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, has received a promise from Major John C. Shaw, head of the city engineering department, and also from the street department of the county, that during the year the Pacific Electric tracks will be raised at all points where necessary to create a permanent crown in the centre of the street, and when this is finished a new surface of asphaltic concrete will be laid.

New bus lines and additional car service are among the projects outlined for Hollywood under the Foster administration and it is within the realm of possibility that some of the street-car lines now operating in Hollywood will be extended.

The new board has in mind a system of parks and playgrounds for this community, and expects shortly to present the outline of the program for the establishment of these beauty areas.

The chamber has already extended its scope of activities to include further civic enterprises, and was especially active in making the Easter sunrise services in the Hollywood Bowl a success. Executive Secretary Bush took a very active part with the general committee in working out a satisfactory program and also in devising a competent finance plan. The services were attended by the greatest crowd that ever gathered in the bowl for a similar occasion.

During the year to come, the street, transportation and park committees are expected to be peculiarly busy, each in its own way.

Executive Secretary Bush's report of accomplishments under the Galloway administration, recently submitted to the board, was alive with fine achievements for the past year, and when this report was read the new board went on record as pledging itself to a more extensive and ambitious program than that carried on during 1926-27.

He gave a very gratifying outline of activities in the chamber building since the edifice was opened in June 1926, and expressed the determination to still add to the popularity of the building and the accommodations it offers to civic organizations in the future. He enumerated the many projects of civic service which had been carried on since the building was opened, naming especially the community chest, the Julius Caesar enterprise, income tax headquarters, open forum, the recent architectural exhibit and the permanent art exhibit. He stated that the motion picture showing the beauties of Hollywood and delineating the making of the film has been previewed and, with a slight revision, will be ready to be shown as a part of the chamber of commerce program for tourists. It is the plan to show this picture at least twice each week and invite tourists to come in and enjoy it, free.

Taking everything together, it looks as though the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce is to have a very active and successful year under the new administration. In addition to the chamber's annual election, the retail merchants' bureau of the chamber recently elected an executive committee for the fiscal year 1927-28. It is composed of W. W. Walton, Vernon Farquhar, R. C. Markley, Paul Rompage, Earl L. Harter, Oscar Balzer and W. M. Strayer.

DIVIDENDS WITHOUT INVESTMENT in Cincinnati

Ohio

Mrs. P—, Linwood Avenue, Cincinnati, uses in her home the following electrical appliances — electric sweeper, iron, toaster, talking machine. In addition, there are eighteen light outlets. A recent monthly bill for this service was $2.71

but in Los Angeles

this same bill for exactly the same consumption and service would be $2.41, a saving of 30c. Cincinnati domestic electric rates are 12% higher than in Los Angeles.

Over a year's period, the aggregate savings to users of Bureau Power and Light service totals a tidy sum. These savings are, in effect, "dividends." Every citizen is an owner and accordingly shares in the benefits of these lower rates.

Bureau domestic rates are low as any in any city of comparable size in America

CALIFORNIA OUR HERITAGE

Pearl M. Lamb

(GRAND PRESIDENT OF THE ORDER OF NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST.)

"California, land of gold,
Of thee, full many a tale is told.
I love you best, land of the West—
My California."

"TO BE ALLOWED THE PLEASURE and the privilege and the honor of being Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, one becomes better acquainted with the conditions existing in the various communities of California. How I wish I might have the power of instilling into each and every native Californian the importance of belonging to either the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West or the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

"Let us ever renew our pledges of allegiance to our state and to our nation, and renew our fraternal vows as well. Let us never neglect to pay homage and reverence to that noble band of men and women, the Pioneers, and especially to the heroic and the saintly missionaries who labored so heroically to evangelize this Western Empire.

"We know that the history of California is, after all, the biography of the individual, magnified, intensified, and projected upon the screen of the past. It has often been said, and we fully realize, that the habitat leaves an accent on the tongue and lends color to wings. Every tone in his great orchestra of life incessantly sings. We may miss the majors or minors, or hope to elude them it may be, but the endless song of their rhythm is rounding life's symphony.' In the song of our state—that composite of men—the accent of the whole gains color and vigor from overtones in each individual soul.

"So entered the Pioneers with their youth, with their hopes and with their dreams, presaging courage, ennobling the spirit for striving and serving. They camped upon the marge of the stream, the willows and the star-decked heavens their only screen. The new-found world was awakening to songs of birds and whispering trees, and into their hearts God's love effusing, all shadows were dispelled; for them, perfect mornings, useful days and balmy soul-filling evenings.

"We today recall them, clad in the raiment of old, remembered by those who still love them—the raiment of labor, of toilers, and of builders and doers. From within them was welling all the hopes and allurements of youth; to survive, to achieve, to move on to realms in the kingdom of truth. Hope akin to faith, that scaled rough mountains of doubt, where death lurked, where fears waited. We can see in their eyes, looking west as they gazed over the plains to the majestic Sierras—that beacon of promise—a mirage of true bliss where they cradled their offspring, those dawn-mothers and fathers. Day by day, with exalted devotion, through redwoods and flowering wold, steadfast and patient, enduring hardships of hunger and of cold, of the strength of the hills everlasting, the magic of sunset and of morning unconsciously fused with their lives, with their souls. Beauty, honor, aspiring and unflinching manhood and womanhood conquered and built up our homes and peopled the West.

"The early navigators, with the true pioneer spirit, faced every danger known and unknown on uncharted seas, to be rewarded at last by the sight of a new coast upon a strange sea. Christianity and civilization followed in the wake of these explorers, and California was conquered to both. Not by sword and cannon, not by the sound of arms or tramp of military-feet, but by the patient toil and gentle teachings of the gentle mission fathers who, with cross and mission bells, marked El Camino Real and built those grand old missions, twenty-one in all, that are today California's most-prized landmarks.

"We native Californians try to show our appreciation for our heritage by celebrating the date of its admission into the Union of States. Every portion of the history that is portrayed on the Ninth of September each year has a very significant influence on California's present.

MRS. PEARL LAMB OF TRACY.

"Just to think: seventy-five years ago our commonwealth was a vast unknown and unexplored wilderness, and today we boast of a state unparalleled in agricultural development, mineral resources, forest products, commercial activities and general prosperity. Our state is advancing rapidly in all enterprises. I will state but a few, that are forcibly brought to our attention.

"The national wealth of California is over fifteen thousand millions of dollars—more than any one of thirteen of the states on the Atlantic Coast, and more than seven of them combined. In bank resources, California ranks fourth in the nation, only New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania surpassing it. California shows greater value in manufacturing products than any of the eleven states on the Atlantic Coast, only seven states in the republic surpassing it. California has 3,075 miles of electric railway, and 117,670 farms. California ranks fifth in the United States in the expenditures for education.

"I trust statistics have been prolonged to advantage, and I know you will agree that it is little wonder that people from all over the United States and foreign countries want to come to California to visit, and finally to settle down to peaceful pursuits of their various lines of endeavor. It is little wonder that I feel proud of this glorious state. We Native Sons and Native Daughters must at all times carry the flag of enterprise, of progress and of goodwill, and never fail to extend the hand of sisterhood or brotherhood to those who come to live within our midst.

"Staying at home in ignorance of the great work that is going on about us is sloth; as has been said, 'The sloth of the diligent and the slave of the arrogant.' Let us ponder on the immensity of our great state. Work together, and our remaining years will be gilded in new beauty and sweet memories, richly woven into a life well and usefully spent.

"So, dear friends, let us pause for a moment and live over with the Pioneers. Let us forget all the anxious thoughts that crowd our lives. For some, it may be buried hope of years, but the busy world goes on—we cannot heed it now. For some, life's toil may soon be past, and then from all cares they will be free.

"How sweet to think, dear Pioneers, we will some day spend eternity with God and thee."

PETRIFIED SPECIMENS PREHISTORIC DESERT ANIMALS ARE FOUND.

Back in the Miocene age, 5,000,000 years ago, giraffe-like camels and three-toed horses of the size of sheep were fairly common in the desert district about what is now Barstow, San Bernardino County.

Dr. Loye H. Miller, chairman of the biology department of the University of California at Los Angeles, has returned to the university with almost perfectly petrified specimens of these strange prehistoric creatures that roamed the district about Barstow in the dim past.

The petrified remains indicate that two kinds of camels once existed in this district. One was the giraffe camel, so called because nature had caricatured him into one of these gangling creatures. The other was a much smaller camel. In addition, Dr. Miller found remains of antelope deer as small possibly as an ordinary dog of today and of a heavy-jawed carnivore not yet identified.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO

(MINNA McGARVEY.)

Drowsily, sleepily, bees are humming
In the sweet 'fileria by the old mission wall,
All the soft sounds of summer are thrumming,
Out in the clover the meadow larks call.

The lovely old mission is faithfully keeping
Its vigil serenely, through all the long years,
Watching its flock, tho' the village be sleeping,
Soothing their sorrows and calming their fears.

San Juan Capistrano! The magic of beauty
Is caught in your cloisters, near by the sea,
And when your chimes call to prayer and duty
They echo God's pledge of eternity.

THE BIRTH OF MODESTO

Sol. P. Elias

(Modesto Parlor No. 11 N.S.G.W.)

TO THOSE WHO KNOW THE MODESTO of today, with its broad, paved streets and tree-shaded avenues, with its active, progressive population of twenty thousand people, with its palatial homes set in charming lawns and well-kept gardens, with its magnificent churches, schools, libraries, theaters and parks, with its blocks of finely-constructed mercantile establishments, and with its varied industries, bespeaking the intensive development of the surrounding area, it may be a surprise to learn that, had its neighboring village of Paradise acceded to the demands of the promoters of the Central Pacific railroad in 1870, the City of Modesto would probably never have come into existence.

The birth of Modesto reads like a tale from the annals of fairy lore. Picturesque as it is, it is worthy the pen of the literary artist,—one who can delineate the picture and invest it with the flavor and the atmosphere of that buoyant and exhilerating era when a future empire was in the making,—one who can halo the portrait with the virile spirit of the days of '49.

Within the two months from that day on which, in the early part of October 1870, McHenry and Ross moved from Paradise into the infant town of Modesto, the first building to reach it—a rather unpretentious structure, in size only eighteen by tweny-four feet,—this city boasted of nearly seventy edifices, many of which might have been deemed imposing, contained a population of almost three hundred people, and possessed a business district in which every line of merchandise and every sphere of commercial and professional activity were represented. Not since the flush days of the mining excitement had any town in the state witnessed such a rapid and phenomenal growth.

Prior to the entrance of the Central Pacific railroad into the San Joaquin Valley, there were several small trading and shipping points in the vicinity of the site upon which Modesto subsequently reared its majestic proportions—some of them dating back to the days of '49. On the north side of the Tuolumne River there were Paradise, three miles, and Tuolumne City, eight miles to the west. On the south side of the river, there was Berryville, a small settlement close to the present county bridge that spans the Tuolumne River south of Modesto. This place contained a store and a saloon. Here was also located the ferry that conveyed passengers and freight across the river.

Empire City was four miles to the east. The ancient settlement of Westport was about four miles southwest from the site of Modesto. Adamsville, the first capitol-seat of Stanislaus County, had not yet succumbed to the ravages of time. In 1870 the lone oak tree under which the first court was held, in 1854, and from which a man was hanged for horse stealing many years previously, still displayed a part of the hangmen's rope.

On the Stanislaus River, there was Langworth, now a relic of the shadowy past, on the road to Oakdale. It was a small village in a clump of tall oaks and contained a store or two and a primitive schoolhouse. It has become noted in history as the home of Bret Harte in his early career before fame overtook him. It is said that in the brick store—the building is still in existence and used as a modern barn—Harte wrote some of his most entertaining stories, played the role of Bohemian wit among the old-time miners and composed his famous poem, "Society on the Stanislaw."

Burneyville, a ferry settlement, founded by Major James Burney in 1854 after the county's organization, was on the Stanislaus River, close to the present site of Riverbank. Major Burney was one of the picturesque characters in the early history of Stanislaus County. He was the first sheriff of Mariposa County in the rude days. He commanded the state troops in 1851 during the Indian warfare in conjunction with Major Savage, the famous scout and Indian fighter. He was an early county officer of Stanislaus. After Modesto's birth he removed to this city, held the office of justice of the peace, and died in the writer's youth, mourned by every citizen of the county. Coming from the South, he brought with him his slave "mama," who was loyal to the Burney family, even after the close of the Civil War, until her death. During the Indian warfare he became one of the discoverers of Yosemite.

MAYOR OF MODESTO.

Both Empire City and Tuolumne City were very old settlements. Tuolumne City was founded in 1849 by Paxon McDowell, near the mouth of the Tuolumne River, in the visionary hope that it would become the entrepot for this stream. He possessed the idea that he could create a town that would outrival Stockton. It was quite a thriving village for some time. It collapsed at the first low water and practically passed out of existence, remaining the ferry at this point and subsequently reviving with settlement of the county's interior.

John G. Marvin, the first superintendent of schools of California, surveyed the City of Empire in 1850. In early days it was the supply depot for the troops who operated against the Indians in 1851. In this year it was the head of navigation of the Tuolumne River. It was destroyed by the floods of 1853-4, but recovered and struggled along as a small settlement for many years. It was the county-seat in 1854, wresting the honor from Adamsville. Marvin died in Samoa several years after the foundation of Empire City and bequeathed his effects to the Masonic fraternity, of which he was an honored member.

The City of Paradise sprang into existence in the early '60s. In 1870 it gave promise of development into a populous city and would undoubtedly have done so, had it not been for the obstinacy or the short-sighted business policy of its citizenship. Singularly, the town lots of Paradise ran from John Mitchell, apparently the original settler, who subsequently moved south and settled and promoted the Turlock country. Both Paradise and Tuolumne City are now numbered among the dead cities of Stanislaus County. Nothing now remains of them but their memory.

The story is told by old timers that, when the Central Pacific Company's promoters decided to extend its San Joaquin Valley division through this valley from Lathrop, they sought certain concessions from the citizens of Paradise in the way of encouragement of the enterprise. As nearly as can be ascertained, all that was desired was the assistance of the people in the building of the railroad bridge across the Tuolumne River, the granting of a right-of-way through the town and perhaps a money donation. Political sentiment at this period in Stanislaus County was strongly anti-railroad, and the requests were refused. The Contract and Finance Company, an adjunct of the Central Pacific, then purchased the square mile of land upon which Modesto is now situated and located the new town on this site.

While opinion as to the verity of this story among the old timers is contradictory, there is some semblance of truth in it. It passed current among the original settlers of Modesto for many years, until the lapse of time healed the antagonisms created by the erasing of Paradise from the map. While the negotiations were pending, the railroad engineers made a survey of Paradise City, but subsequently staked another through the Modesto site to the Tuolumne River. Perhaps the narrowness of the river's channel at the present point of passing was the decisive factor in the location of the new village.

It is a long stretch of time that takes one back to the date of the birth of Modesto, in 1870,—the year of the determination of the makers of cities to create a new one rather than to connect with an established community. The early history of Modesto—of Modesto, fresh as the breath of springtime, blooming as the rosebuds in its myriad of gardens and bowers and fragrant as its own orange groves—the pearl of the San Joaquin Valley — is now lodged in the hazy memories of the old settlers who yet reside in Modesto. The city's early annals gave little promise of the great development and achievement in industry and agriculture, and in municipal government that came to it in later years – the period of irrigation and expansion of the city into one of the most beautiful and progressive centers in the state.

AEROPLANE VIEW OF MODESTO—"THE CITY OF OPPORTUNITY"—OF TODAY.

The naming of the village possesses the flavor of a tale from fanciful fable. The rapidity with which the population flocked to the new town from neighboring settlements of Empire, Paradise and Tuolumne City, creating a full-fledged city as if by magic, reads like a story from the pages of Bret Harte or Mark Twain when they describe the hegira from an old to a new digging in which "pay dirt" had suddenly been discovered. The winning of the county-seat from Knight's Ferry, after the most consummate political jugglery, in 1871, when Modesto had hardly yet embarked on its life's career, holds all the elements of a frontier contest and was fraught with all the incidents of an early gambling bout.

And young as was the town, primitive as was the community, diverse as were its political and other activities, and whatever may have been the division of the people on other matters, there was unanimity of sentiment on the one subject of irrigation. Modesto was destined to become in the future the center of a vast irrigated area that would blossom as the rose—Modesto would become the pioneer and leader in communal irrigation—Modesto would point the way to California in the utilization of the God-given waters of the mountains and the streams in the intensive cultivation of the soil, bringing prosperity to its surrounding acres and wealth to the Golden State. Modesto, from its very birth, was the open forum, the forensic crucible, for the discussion of the irrigation idea, then new in the state. The pioneer press teems with the literature of the topic. For fifteen years there was debate and sifting—a threshing out of the method in forge of reason. The Wright Irrigation Law was the fruition of all this effort. Modesto was the cradle in which was born the idea of communal irrigation in California.

When it became certain, in the summer of 1870, that the new railroad town was to be located on the present site of Modesto, there was a general stampede from the neighboring settlements. For months the rough, jagged, improvised country highways were thronged with houses and buildings, which were being moved by every available means of transportation to Modesto. The caravans even traversed the stubble fields from which the newly-cut wheat had just been garnered. Tuolumne City, Paradise and Empire were on wheels, enroute to Modesto. It was, indeed, an odd and picturesque sight to see these towns traveling to Modesto—houses, people and furniture—every vestige of habitation and life—every element of civilization—moving as rapidly as possible toward the common goal—the county's new mteropolis—the El Dorado of the plains of Stanislaus.

As the birth of Modesto and the building of the railroad were two momentous economic facts in the county's history, it will prove interesting to note the progress of both as taken from the files of the "Tuolumne City News," published by that pioneer editor, J. D. Spencer, in the city which later in the year he forsook for the newer town. In the issue of September 2, 1870, he noted that fifteen men were engaged in constructing the bridge across the Stanislaus River and that on the following Monday a large force was t commence grading between the Stanislaus an the Tuolumne Rivers. On September 16 he sai that the San Joaquin Valley road was pushin forward rapidly, the bridge across the Stanislau being well under way, 100 mechanics being en gaged on it with perhaps 100 Chinese gradin south to the river. At Murphy's, where the rail road crosses the Stanislaus River—now Salida— were a switch and one of the finest stock corral in the country to be used for transportation pur poses. "The locomotive runs as far as the Stan islaus River and looks bravely into Stanislau County as if anxious to try his speed throug the wheat fields of Paradise."

"The cars of the San Joaquin Valley railroa crossed the Stanislaus River," says this early day chronicler in the issue of October 14, 1870 "and came into this county for the first time o Monday. The event was one of considerable re joicing to many of our people and was witnesse by a large number of citizens. Only a few day more and the track will be completed to the Tuo lumne River, the site of the prosposed ne town."

The editor further stated that the railroad ha purchased 400 acres of land north of the Tuo lumne River and had supposedly laid them ou in townsite and that houses in Paradise and Tuo lumne City were preparing to move to the ne town. In the issue of October 28, it is state that "the first trainload of wheat shipped fro the new town of Ralston was loaded by M. Mc Clanathan on October 27 and went direct to Oak land."

In the same issue Spencer said: "Last week we learned that the railroad company had as a compliment named the proposed new town 'Ralston.' The name looked well and pleased the generality of citizens. It looked well in prin and had a pleasant sound. Ralston was the name and suited every one. It was published far and near as such. The plat now comes out marked 'Modesto.' It appears that Ralston had not been consulted and through excessive modesty declined to submit to the use of his name."

In the issue of November 25, 1870, on the eve of Spencer's casting his lot with the citizens o

ıe new town, he says the following: "Modesto ɔntinues to grow with a rapidity unparalleled ı California. Three or four buildings are added ɔ the town daily. The addition of twenty-five ouses makes a change. The town fronts on oth sides of the track for three or four blocks nd is compact with business buildings. Plat for ıburban residences consisting of two-acre lots as been laid off by Ike Ripperdan one-half mile ıstant from the town and the lots have sold very ıpidly at profitable rates."

Many of Modesto's older residences and a umber of the early stores were hauled from aradise and Tuolumne City to house the new-ɔmers and to provide establishments for the ıerchants of the embryo town. Brick buildings ere demolished in these older settlements, the rick transported to Modesto and used in the onstruction of business edifices for enterprising adesmen. It was even said that structures ere removed from Burneyville, Langworth and Knight's Ferry to assist in the creation of Modesto. By the end of the year 1870, Modesto as a respectably-sized community.

A romantic episode attaches itself to the nam-ıg of the city. Before it had been fully laid ut, people from neighboring settlements began ɔ flock to the infant town. They selected loca-ions and lots which they desired to occupy and laced their buildings upon them. A town had een created before it had received a christen-ıg. In order to make a legal conveyance of roperty to the owners, it was necessary to give name to the city, so as to properly describe the ots sold to the settlers. The railroad company ad given the name of "Ralston" to the town, s described by Spencer. Ralston declined the onor. Explaining this situation to the people, udge Underhill, who represented the Contract nd Finance Company as its salesmanager, called convention of the citizens to select the city's itle. Many of the most prominent men of the ommunity were in this convention.

There were also several members of the directorate of the company present in this convention, W. C. Ralston among them. After several names were suggested, the name of "Ralston" seemed to have the preference. Ralston was then one of the most prominent citizens of the state. He was a tower of strength in the banking world, and a large buyer of wheat, the county's prime staple. While the convention was quietly discussing names, George Buck, formerly of La Grange, later of Tuolumne City, and until his death a citizen of Modesto, arose and said: "Gentlemen of the convention, I propose the name of 'Ralston'."

Ralston, taken by surprise, while appreciative of the honor sought to be conferred upon him by the citizens of the yet-unnamed community, with an innate modesty and in a most gracious manner, declined. In his address of declination he said: "I see a great future for this place. The whole country is one vast field of fertility. Every acre between the two rivers is producing abundant crops. The day is not far distant when your town will be a great city of which you will be proud, and out of pure modesty I decline the honor and thank you."

A. G. Stakes, later district judge of Stanislaus County and formerly its district attorney, immediately arose, saying: "The parent of the infant is modesty—then the baby's name must be 'Modesto.' 'Modesto' is Spanish for modesty." The convention members clapped their hands and the town was named "Modesto."

Old timers still residing in Modesto, and who were young and passive spectators of the passing of older communities and the birth of this city, recall with delight the many pleasant journeys they were permitted to take upon the moving freightage from Paradise and Tuolumne City to Modesto. These hardy juveniles were in the habit of taking passage upon the traveling houses, enjoying the ride to Modesto and returning in the cool of the evening or early next day. The trip was rare and exciting sport.

The Tuolumne River where it passes the old town of Paradise is wide, quiet and gentle. In this channel it moves sluggishly to the mouth of the river, emptying into the San Joaquin. It is here remarkably adapted for boating and other acquatic sports. It has been the expressed opinion of many an old timer that the people of Paradise did not appreciate the opportunity then offered them when the railroad officials invited co-operation. Had Paradise been selected, these old timers pictured the ultimate transformation of that city into a modern, picturesque, inland Venice, amidst the prolific foliage that everhangs the river at this point, with acquatic pageants, midnight revels and dainty music on the moonlit waters of the Old Tuolumne.

MODESTO---CITY OF OPPORTUNITY

MODESTO, THE CONVENTION CITY for the Native Daughters of the Golden West, is a city of opportunity. Situated as it is, ninety miles east of San Francisco in the northern end of the San Joaquin Valley, and in the center of hundreds of thousands of acres of irrigated land, there is not another city in the entire state as ideally located.

A city of approximately 17,000 people, Modesto's commercial and industrial progress is due entirely to intensive development of its agricultural resources, brought about mainly through successful operation of the first and greatest irrigation district in the West. While being one of the banner dairy counties of California, Stanislaus, of which Modesto is the county-seat and center, is fast becoming the greatest fruit producing section of the United States.

Situated in the heart of 400,000 irrigated acres of the best soil in the world, Modesto has naturally become the principal commercial and industrial center of Stanislaus County, with a population of well over 60,000.

A mere inspection of the geography of the San Joaquin Valley reveals the factors of superior climatic conditions in Modesto. The prevailing trade winds blow over the Pacific from the northwest. Seeking the inland through the natural gaps opening off San Francisco Bay, these winds continue southeastward until swerved southward by the Sierras. Thus, they first blow over Modesto. In midsummer, one notices the cool essence of the sea. Nights are often too cool for the auto without extra wraps. Some days in summer register above one hundred degrees for a few hours in the afternoon. The heat is dry—fine ripening weather for fruits and greenswards of alfalfa. Man and beast work at top speed every day. The sun exhilarates, and the dews refresh. The sleeping porch is an invitation to the sea breeze at night. Health follows the zephyrs.

ENVIRONMENT—that is the why of Modesto's charm. If natural conditions are a part of environment, then does the geography of Modesto appeal. If climate is a necessary element of environment, then the healthfulness of Modesto is proven. If the soil and its essential element, water, are factors of environment — and irrigation engineers say that the soil types of the Modesto district are best adapted to the application of water, as typical sandy loams are in any region—then what more can one desire? Finally, if the people are neighbors—intelligent, refined, social co-laborers, whose children are of high-class American type—then is not the social environment and invitation equal with that of the soil?

Study the geography of California, a domain with a coast line reaching as far as from New York to Florida and encompassing the areas of Massachusetts, Delaware, Maine, New Jersey, New York, Vermont, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Ohio, with 1,072 square miles to spare, and you will realize the charm of Modesto's geography.

INDUSTRIAL MODESTO.

In the year 1926 there were over 750,000 cases of fruits and vegetables canned in Modesto. The principal varieties packed are spinach, peas, tomatoes, sweet potatoes, apricots, pears, plums, muscat grapes, yellow free peaches, yellow cling peaches and kadota figs. Of these items, the yellow cling peach is by all odds the most important.

The annual payroll of the canneries in Modesto exceeds $500,000, and during the height of the season over 2,000 persons, mostly women and girls, are employed.

An immense ice manufacturing plant is located in Modesto, which refrigerates approximately 8,000 carloads of fresh fruits and melons shipped from this district to the Eastern markets each year. There are also many large fruit packing concerns which handle the shipment of fruits produced in the Modesto district.

Industrial Modesto has a payroll of over $2,000,000 annually which, added to the millions brought in by the products of the soil, makes for the prosperity of the city. Diversification of crops is what makes Modesto the city of opportunity.

TYPICAL HOMES IN MODESTO—THE IDEAL RESIDENTIAL CITY

Modesto is the trading center of a vast territory and nowhere in the state can be found better, larger or more up-to-date mercantile establishments than here. In the city there is a total of 1,150 business professional and industrial firms. Many large and handsome buildings dot the skyline of Modesto, with three modern hotels that would do credit to a city with many times the population.

The growth of Modesto can best be illustrated by figures which show that in 1910 there were but a couple of thousand people who called Modesto home. In 1920 the census gave a population of less than 10,000, while today there are 17,000 people within the city limits, with many more thousands in the immediate environs.

The growth of Modesto can better be illustrated by the following figures:

In 1918 there were fifty-nine teachers and 1,908 pupils in the public schools of the city. There are now 1,925 teachers with nearly 6,000 pupils.

In 1920 the bank clearings were $72,000,000 in round numbers, while in 1926 the clearings totaled over $125,000,000. Modesto has four substantial financial institutions.

The postal receipts increased from $27,879 in 1912 to over $100,000 in 1926.

Telephone connections in 1920 were 3,000, while there are now over 4,500.

Building permits from 1920 to 1926, inclusive, show an expenditure of $7,500,000.

Easy access to Modesto from every section of Stanislaus, Merced and San Joaquin Counties, over a most modern system of concrete highways totaling over 200 miles, is one of the reasons for the remarkable advancement of Modesto and its development as a commercial, industrial and social center.

Three transcontinental railroads serve Modesto. Adequate freight and passenger service is thus provided the citizens of this modern city. Modesto is situated on the main state highway running from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

MODESTO AS A HOME CITY.

This city is one of the main gateways to the Yosemite Valley, nature's wonderland, visited by hundreds of thousands of tourists who motor through Modesto on their way to this famous resort. Modesto is the logical night stopping place for those from the north who are making the trip to the great valley. With metropolitan hotel service, Modesto presents to the motorist an ideal stopping place. The run into the Yosemite can easily be made in four hours from Modesto.

"But pleasures are like poppies spread, you seize the flower, its bloom is shed."—Robert Burns.

Modesto has one of the most modern educational systems in the entire Pacific Coast states, consisting of seven well-equipped grammar schools, with ample playground and recreational facilities; a departmental school and most modern senior high school, and a junior college which offers the first two years of the university course. Modesto's schools represent an investment of $2,000,000.

There are twenty-five churches in Modesto, covering practically every religious creed and religion, with handsome edifices in which to worship. Church activities in Modesto form one of the principal social features of the city.

Almost every fraternal organization is represented in Modesto, with the Odd Fellows, Masons and Elks having fine homes of their own.

The service clubs are represented by Rotary, Exchange, Kiwanis and Lions. These clubs have large memberships and do much to assist in the upbuilding of the city. The Woman's Improvement Club and The Business Women's Club take an active part in civic affairs. The improvement club has a handsome home of its own.

Modesto has four up-to-date theatres with a combined seating capacity of approximately 40,000. The country side is dotted with attractive community clubhouses that do much to make country life more attractive.

There is a fine nine-hole golf course within easy reach of the city. This course has grass greens and grass fairways.

The newspapers of Modesto are metropolitan in appearance and size, with morning and evening editions. There are also several weekly papers that cover special interest.

Modesto has thirty miles of wide, paved streets, stretching into every residence section of the city.

Modesto is a home city in every respect, and its citizenship is of the highest type, only a very small percentage being foreign. The people pride themselves on the beauty of their homes. Community development has naturally felt the effect of this pride, which has resulted in modern improvements of a civic nature that stamp Modesto as one of California's most beautiful and best governed cities—a city of contentment, health and wealth.

MODESTO'S WATER AND POWER.

Peruse fact regarding the growth of this district in crops and wealth, and the supply of water which courses to the sea in artificial rivers, forty feet wide, and the whole proposition is settled. When one recalls that the era of $12[illegible] land—the minimum one may expect to pay for first-class land with water in California—has disappeared in the Modesto district, and home building values have become well established, he realizes that this condition is an index to the character of the people who settled upon the lands. Should he visit the community and note the beautiful homes and small farms of the Eastern and Middle-westerners who "started" on $2,000 or less, the final query is settled.

Just a little history to indicate how the producing power of soil can be multiplied by the ingenuity of man, how wealth can be created in lands by the conservation of moisture. The grasp of this fundamental of economy has created Modesto and the charms which her citizens would impress upon the world.

Twenty-three years ago the Modesto district was practically one wheat field of 82,000 acres. An inspiration came to the forefathers of irrigation in this district when they realized that thousands of miners' inches of water ran yearly to waste and deposited their fertilizing silts in Suisun Bay.

Modesto was the first city in the United States to provide for a municipal aviation field, considered one of the finest landing fields in California. This field is maintained by the city in connection with the Stanislaus County fair grounds. It comprises fifty-five acres of land and is located in the heart of the city.

The high Sierras serrate the sky with a line of snow all summer long. The auto can reach leaping brooks, ferned canyons and ragged peaks in a few hours from Modesto. To those who desire the sea, there are world-famous resorts and beaches within easy reach.

"Let us pour this water upon these lands," they said. After thirteen years of litigation, they succeeded in turning this water into the laterals and ditches, and a new pulse awakened in the impoverished grain lands. The Le Grange diverting dam on the Tuolumne River was completed in 1893 at a cost of $543,164, but water was not turned into the ditches until 1903.

After years of unprecedented prosperity under irrigation, the Modesto and Turlock irrigation districts jointly erected, in 1923, the Don Pedro dam, the highest storage dam in the world above stream bed. It is built of mass concrete 283 feet above stream bed, forms a lake on the Tuolumne River three miles wide by fourteen miles long, and impounds over 300,000 acre-feet of water. This assures the farmers of the Modesto and Turlock districts ample water and takes the gamble out of farming as far as weather is concerned. Irrigation is thus made possible the year round.

There has been built into the Don Pedro dam one of the finest and most up-to-date hydro-electric plants in the West, with 15,000 KVA installed and an ultimate capacity of 70,000 KVA. Thus the water, as it passes through the Don Pedro dam, generates the power that turns the wheels of industry and lights the homes of the city dweller and farmer, as well as operates the drainage pumps which control the water table. By making use of the by-product of our water storage, the farmers of these two districts have eliminated the risk of high water table, which is the most serious danger to all irrigated lands.

The balance of the power is distributed direct to the consumers, who are farmers and businessmen, most of whom own property in the districts and are thereby part owners of the power project. A very favorable rate for cooking and heating is offered, and as a result there are more farmers' wives in the Modesto and Turlock districts, in proportion, cooking and heating with electricity than in the City of San Francisco. With this revenue from the distribution of power, the districts have been enabled to make substantial reductions in taxes, and, in the years to come, it is not too much to say that water will be brought to the lands tax free.

One of the outstanding features of the success of irrigation in the Modesto district is the fact that "the land owns the water and power forever" and the land alone pays the tax in the district. All improvements are exempt from taxation. Besides the Modesto and Turlock irrigation districts, there are two other well-organized and successful districts in Stanislaus County, the Oakdale and the Waterford districts, making a grand total of over 400,000 acres under irrigation, with Modesto as the chief shipping, commercial and social center of the entire county.

"There is a destiny that makes us brothers, none has gone his way alone; all that we send into the lives of others comes back into our own."

STANISLAUS COUNTY PROMISES TO SURPASS ANY IN CALIFORNIA

Hugh P. Donnelly
(SECRETARY, STANISLAUS COUNTY DEVELOPMENT BOARD.)

UNDER SMILING SKIES, WITH A wealth of water and electrical energy at hand, surrounded by fertile fields, the inhabitant of Stanislaus County dwells.

Here is no Utopia where wealth comes unsought, but to him who works intelligently there is a smiling good fortune in wait. The amazing growth of the county in the past years presages an increasing prosperity for the future. Land values are stable; taxes are low; markets are ready.

Stanislaus County lies in the heart of the San Joaquin Valley, and the noted William Allen White, writer and publisher, said: "The San Joaquin Valley is without doubt the most productive valley in the world." Stanislaus is one of the richest counties in agricultural wealth, as well as in individual wealth, in the valley. Shaped like a generous hand extended in greeting, Stanislaus County comprises 1,486 square miles. It is 226 square miles larger than the State of Rhode Island. The greater part of its 951,000 acres is arable. It is bounded on the north by the Stanislaus River, on the south by the Merced. The Tuolumne and the San Joaquin Rivers flow through it. These rivers, fed by the eternal snows of the high Sierras, yield a never failing water supply for irrigation, and it is true that the greatest of Stanislaus' assets, from an agricultural point of view, are her world famous water systems and irrigation works. There are four irrigation districts and two privately owned systems in the county. There is a total of 162 miles of broad main canals and 284 of laterals.

THOUSANDS HIGH BRED, CONTENTED CATTLE FACTORS IN MODESTO DISTRICT'S PROSPERITY.

The United States Department of Agriculture said, in part, in a soil survey of the county, "A very large part consists of deep, well drained, easily cultivated soils, responsive to irrigation and cultivation, and under favorable conditions producing almost phenomenal yield of crops." With this rich soil, her abundant water and equable climate, Stanislaus produces not only valuable crops, but a great diversity of them; over sixty products are raised in the county on a commercial scale.

Alfalfa heads the list in value; last year's crop was estimated at $6,556,625. Other leading products are raisins, grapes, peaches, beans, corn, cantaloupes, barley, sweet potatoes, almonds and table grapes.

We are all aware that transportation is an essential to a locality. No matter how abundant the crops, or how splendid the produce, we cannot collect on their value until we have a ready and easily accessible market. Three great transcontinental railroads provide Stanislaus with rapid transit for her products to Western, Midwestern and Eastern markets. Two hundred miles of highways traverse the county and link Stanislaus in the huge valley chain.

Because of its natural advantages, which are sound assets for those who appreciate the importance of better living, the population has increased marvelously in the county, from 9,500 persons in 1900 to approximately 60,000 today. This has been a steady influx, and new settlers are constantly arriving.

The three towns on the west side of the county, Newman, Crows Landing and Patterson, are wonderfully situated, as they are in the dairying center, and Stanislaus is the leading dairy county in the state, with dairy products valued at more than $10,000,000. Her herds of dairy cattle are famous the world over. Large creameries provide steady markets for dairy products. Beef cattle worth $1,123,671 were raised last year on the west side.

Newman, the fourth city in size in the county, is progressive, has several miles of paved streets, two banks and fine school and commercial buildings. Three million dollars' worth of dairy products are shipped annually from there.

Crows Landing lies midway between Patterson and Newman. It has two banks, a community clubhouse and good schools.

Patterson, surrounded by the Patterson Colony, is a modern city, distinctively beautiful. It has two banks, a good hotel, fine schools a business buildings.

Westley, on the northwest, is the center one of the largest and most prosperous dr farming sections in the county.

Nestled in the foothills of the Sierras, on t eastern side of the county, are many prospero cities and towns. They have the glamour of t early fifties combined with today's efficient pr gressiveness.

La Grange holds the key to prosperity. He the headwaters of the Tuolumne were first verted and the huge La Grange dam built f the irrigation of the valley below. The rich bo tom lands near La Grange are among the mo fertile in the world. Oranges, olives, lemor limes, grapefruit, pears a peaches grow in the foo hill section.

Oakdale has a fine bu ness section, thrivi banks, good hotels, a wo an's clubhouse and mode schools. Its per-capi wealth is the largest any city in the Unit States.

Knights Ferry, twel miles east of Oakdale, the community center the stock raising interest

Valley Home, north Oakdale, has a good po office, stores and schoo It is surrounded by alfal ranches, orchards and vin yards.

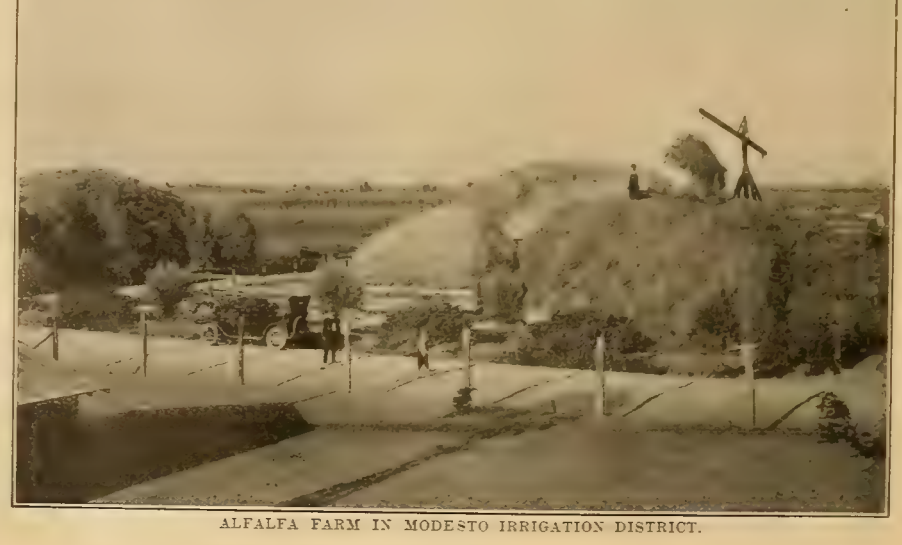
Riverbank, west of Oa dale, is the division poi of the Santa Fe railroa and several hundred ra road men are employe there. It has an up-to-date business section a a pleasing residential and suburban district.

Claus is an active town, fortunate in progre sive citizenry.

Empire is a thriving city in the midst of splendidly producing land.

Hughson, its southern sister, is also the cent of a splendid agricultural section. It has a $9 000 high-school building and various oth school and business buildings.

Denair, a delightful town, is surrounded some of the most fertile land in the county a is rich in agricultural produce.



Waterford, surrounded by the broad acres the Waterford irrigati district, has fine school banks and stores.

Hickman, Waterford near neighbor on the sout is an active communit richly endowed with n ture's produce.

Montpellier, six mil south of Waterford, is t shipping center for t greatest tonnage of gra in the county, for it is the heart of a huge dr farming section.

The largest city and t county-seat of Stanisla County is Modesto. It li in the center of the coun and has a population over 17,000. There a large numbers of splend buildings, and Modesto famous for its high stan ard of development. Su rounded by the Modesto i rigation district, it is pa ticularly advantaged.

Grayson is in the dry-farming belt, and is prettily situated near the San Joaquin River.

Ceres, five miles south of Modesto, is placed in the heart of the orchard and vineyard section. It is a rapidly growing community with wide-awake business houses and community organizations. It has schools which compare favorably with any in the valley.

Keyes is a shipping point for cantaloupes and watermelons, also sweet potatoes. It has a large number of warehouses and fruit sheds.

Turlock, the southern gateway of the county, hub of the fertile Turlock irrigation district, is one of the most progressive cities in the valley. It has an extensive business section and fine residential sections.

All these and other cities and towns of the county are growing constantly in beauty and wealth. The county, of which they are an integral part, bids fair to surpass any other in the State of California.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

PRODUCTION AT LESS COST MUST SOLVE FARM PROBLEMS

THE FUTURE OF CALIFORNIA AGRIculture must depend upon economy of production. There can be little hope—in view of the increased plantings of fruit specialty crops, with the world market governing dairy and beef products and grains, with foreign competition in poultry—of higher prices for commodities. If there should come higher prices, in all probability they would be the result of temporary conditions, and the level would fall when conditions return to normal. The solution must be the production of crops at less cost.

The United States Department of Agriculture has shown that when a dairyman doubles the production of his herd, he multiplies his profits by four; if he increases his production per cow four-fold, he multiplies his profits by ten. Breeding, culling and feeding unquestionably are the keys to the livestock situation. And as far as the specialty crops are concerned, the breeding and culling angles still apply. Asparagus growers have found, for instance, that they can double their production by using only the male plants. Orchardists have found that there are some trees that return no profit, and they have culled them out. Feeding, too, plays a part here. Trees must have proper rations, or they will not produce the maximum either of quantity or quality. Hence fertilization must be reckoned as a factor of economic importance.

Competition is keen and will grow keener. California farmers are alive to this fact, and they know that there must come a change of conditions. Advertising may icrease consumption or may open new markets, but the situation must be met chiefly through increased production per unit, greater economy of production, higher quality and improved marketing.

DON'T INVITE TROUBLE.

Don't break out dead twigs or limbs in a tree, unless they are snapped off right at the joint with the larger limb. This seldom happens in breaking, however, and the result is a dead spur that invites fungus and injures fruits. When a dead twig or limb is to be removed, do it in a workmanship-like manner. Cut it close to the parent limb or the trunk of the tree, as the circumstances require, and if it is a limb of any size, be sure it is cut in the direction of the larger limb so that it will heal over.

Don't leave an invitation for trouble in cutting off a limb, large or small, dead or alive. And after cutting a coat of good lead paint will assist mightily in the keeping out of disease. There is in Shasta County an old prune orchard that today would be bearing heavily and profitably, had not stumps been left when limbs were cut off. The result has been rotting back from these illy-made cuts until the whole trees have been killed, despite later efforts at tree surgery.

BARLEY AS GOOD FEED AS CORN.

California farmers have been spending huge sums for corn imported from the Middle West for feed. Sheep, hogs and poultry are supposed to do better on corn than any other feed. Recently, however, it was shown that poultry will do just as well on a cheaper, native-grown ration that includes barley; and now the Nebraska experiment station, after running a series of careful tests, finds barley better for finishing lambs than corn. The corn idea was brought West by farmers who had been raised in the corn belt. It is a fetish that need not give concern. Barley will do as well, or better, and it is cheaper.

DRAINAGE EFFECTIVE.

The California College of Agriculture has found a method of reclaiming land that has become barren through the introduction of alkali as a result of rising water table, caused by overirrigation. In some cases, the well-known leaching process is all that is necessary, if drainage then is provided to prevent a recurrence. In other cases, however, sulphur or gypsum must be used, sometimes in large quantities, to overcome the difficulties. In many instances, the cost of reclaiming the land is more than its value. But for the great body of that land in California that has become sterile through alkali, there is hope.

But there is still a larger body of land that is not now alkaline, but that under irrigation is threatened by an ever-rising water table. Drainage is the insurance, and it need not be costly. In some parts of the state wells have been sunk, and pumps are used to lift the water drained from the soil into cement-lined drainage canals. The drainage ounce of prevention most certainly is more economical and effective than the sulphur and leaching pound of cure.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR SUNLIGHT.

Hens need sun; and there is no substitue for sunlight for the laying hen. When sunlight is not available, as it should always be, perhaps cod liver oil may aid in keeping the flock up; but the ultra-violet ray, not as effective as sunlight, is prohibitive in cost. Those who have advocated rearing of commercial poultry flocks under kept-in conditions, are misguided as to the facts. There is no substitute for sunlight, and if the hen is to lay at anywhere near capacity, there must be a run where the rays of the sun can hit directly and without impediment.

TO CURB CUCUMBER BEETLE.

The cucumber beetle is causing some trouble again this year. If there are sufficient plants left at this season, after early depredations, the best control is secured through the application of calcium arsenate, one part, and gypsum, twenty parts, applied as a dust. Gypsum is preferred to lime, because it does not stunt plant growth as does lime. A protective coating must be kept over the plants at all times, for unless the leaves are covered, the dusting will be of little avail. When the next season comes, those who now are having trouble will do well to remember that if plenty of seed is used, a fertilizer applied to secure quick early growth and insecticide is applied early, troubles will be few and far between, from cucumber beetle.

SUMMER PRUNING.

There is no reason why pruning should not be carried on in the summer as well as in the winter. There is no reason why some limb should be left to develop, when the orchardist knows it must come off next winter. Not that any hard growth should be removed; that should have been done already, or if not, should be left until next winter. But when twigs start and show signs of becoming rivals to scaffold or other useful branches, and have no proper place on the tree, they should be pinched off at once. The result will be a tree of greater vigor, less wood to be removed next winter, a better shaped tree and less work.

IRRIGATION NECESSARY.

High-grade fruit comes from thrifty, vigorous trees. These trees must be watered and fed, and particularly is this true in the case of peaches. Thinning is one of the important means to the end of quality fruit, but irrigation must not be forgotten. Perhaps water is expensive, but poor quality and small-sized fruit is more so. Don't pinch the water penny this season. Having thinned your peaches, see that they are kept going to the No. 1 quality right up to picking time.

CHISELING BETTER THAN PLOWING.

Instead of turning over the summer fallow with a plow, better results are likely to be attained through the use of the chisel and the disc harrow. Pasturing up to June, particularly with sheep, is good practice. Then the land can be chiseled while it is in dry condition, and the plow pan will be broken up. Any growth can be disked under easily. Another chiseling before planting will be an added benefit. There is no need to keep working the soil, except to kill the weeds.

Little benefit obtains from constant cultivation throughout the summer, and that benefit, if any there be, is more than offset by its cost. But weeds should be kept down, the plow sole should be broken with a chisel rather than added to with a plow, and the vegetation should be turned under with a disc.

CURE FOR URGENT SLUG PROBLEM.

If, after having cleaned up all the possible hiding places of slugs, snails and bugs that can be found, the pests still persist, then try poison. Take sixteen ounces of bran, mix it crumbly with black molasses and one ounce of calcium arsenate, and scatter it around where the slugs and snails can get their fill. They will eat it quite readily, and once they have eaten it, they will eat nothing else. Care must be taken to prevent the poison from getting in the way of children or animals that may eat it. If your slug problem is urgent, it is worth the trying.

SAVE DAMAGED TREES.

If a tree has been severely damaged by sour sap, or winter injury, cut it back to the bud union, rather than pull it out, provided, of course, that the kind and variety is satisfactory. But even if the variety is not satisfactory, or if the root is good for a new kind of fruit, don't pull it out. Cut back the tree, as has been said, to the bud union, thus forcing out new growth from below. Select the strongest sprout for the new trunk, and bud it to the variety desired. In cutting back, paint the stump well, and be sure, when the new trunk is developed, to cut it in line with the new growth. Don't leave entry for decay. A tree thus started on a well-developed root system will recover rapidly, and will fruit much sooner than a new tree set out at the same time.

NEW STATE MARKET DIRECTOR.

With this month, California has a new market director, Wells A. Sherman, formerly chief marketing specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture. The position is one that is to be co-operative between the state and federal departments of agriculture, although the new market director will have his office in the state department in Sacramento. Some time ago Governor C. C. Young and Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine agreed upon the general terms of the arrangement, and the appointment was made by Director G. H. Hecke of the State Department of Agriculture and Lloyd A. Tenny, chief of the agricultural economics bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture.

For more than a year, Prof. R. L. Adams of the division of rural institutions, University of California, has been organizing the marketing work for the state department, and Sherman comes with a foundation well laid to undertake what farmers of the state consider one of the most important positions in California dealing with agriculture.

PRUNING OLIVES.

There are few rules that can be given for the pruning of olives. Briefly, the safest method for pruning is a thinning out to admit sunlight to the middle of the tree and to keep the tree in good shape. Let young trees grow with little pruning, other than for shape and for thinning. Heading back with olives is a serious mistake, if fruit is desired. Don't leave stubs in an olive tree, or in any other tree, for that matter. Cut close to the larger limb, and don't leave a projection, or the tree's life will be greatly shortened.

WORTH WHILE CROPS.

Where nematodes prevent the growing of other forage crops, soy beans and cow peas have been found excellent crops. They improve the soil, as legumes, and their feeding value, green or cured as hay, compares quite favorably with alfalfa. Some counties have found these two crops well worth while; and farmers with a nematode problem will do well to try them.

GIVE GRAFTS ATTENTION.

Give the grafts placed last winter some care this spring and summer. If the grafts are rewaxed, it will do no damage, and more than likely will be a big help in preventing excessive drying out, in facilitating healing and waterproofing against moisture and decay. Paper bags, if they were used, should be removed. Remove sucker growth, unless no nurse branches were left, in which case a few suckers may be left for the time being to help the tree. A stick, such as a lath, nailed to the stump, will be a great aid in guiding the new growth if it is tied loosely to it. There is no use to graft, if some care is not to be given the new growth afterward.

SUCCESS MAY COME SOME DAY.

STOCKTON---
CO-PARTNER IN CALIFORNIA HISTORY AND ROMANCE

A. M. Robertson

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

CITIZENS OF STOCKTON ARE PROUD of the traditions which have made this city outstanding industrially, agriculturally and from the standpoint of romance and recreation. Stockton citizens are proud of the early history of Stockton and of the development which has steadily taken place since that day in March, 1848, when gold was discovered in California and Stockton became an important trading post over night.

Stockton citizens are proud of the 210 manufacturing industries which last year shipped to the markets of the world $32,000,000 worth of manufactured products, and of the fact that last year diversified agricultural products, amounting to $52,000,000, helped feed the world's population because these products were shipped to world markets.

WHERE ORDER NATIVE DAUGHTERS HAD ITS BEGINNING.
In the basement of this building at Jackson, near Stockton, is the hall where the first Parlor of Native Daughters—Ursula No. 1—was formed

They are proud of Stockton as a home city, of the beautiful streets lined with shady trees, of the beautiful homes where more nearly the traditional American home is typified. They are proud of the public instiutions, including schools, colleges, churches, the new Civic Memorial Auditorium, the city hall and court house, and the business section wherein it is possible to purchase the necessities of life at reasonable prices. But, most of all, citizens of Stockton are proud of this city's relationship to her sister counties, wherein were staged many of the early day events which have made California famous.

In Amador County is situated the town of Jackson, where gold mining operations are still carried on, on a large scale. Jackson is one of a very few cities which has maintained these mining operations to any great extent. J. D. Mason, in closing his history of Amador County, in the year 1880, summarized its condition as follows: "Though quartz mining has practically ceased in Sutter Creek, where its annual production once reached millions, it has been placed on a paying basis in Volcano and Plymouth, and is increasing in Amador and Jackson. New mines are being opened, which bid fair to rival those of Sutter Creek. Agriculture has received a new impetus, and vineyards, orchards and farms are appearing on the side hills, fed by the water from the mining ditches."

Would not that writer be surprised to see the progress made since he laid down his pen; to find that Sutter Creek, again, is astonishing the world with the richness of its mines; that has the Argonaut and the Kennedy, employing enough men to make a small city themselves; that Volcano has "given up the ghost," and has been taken over by a giant power company for a dam site; that Amador City, where a few families bearing pioneer names still live in the ancestral halls, is hearing murmurs of a reopening of the Keystone?

The history of Amador County dates back to the year 1846, when the first White men surveyed the county under the leadership of Captain Sutter. They sawed the lumber for a ferry boat in the pines on the ridge between Sutter and Amador Creeks, but before that the Indians kept close guard of the Mokelumne River lands. In 1848, the year gold was discovered at Coloma, El Dorado County, Captain Weber carried on mining activities in the section of the county known as the Southern Mines. The Mokelumne River, the gulches of Drytown, Volcano and Ione were mined extensively in 1848. Captain Sutter mined on the creek that bears his name.

Since those early days progress has been gradual and continual in Amador County, agriculture supplanting the worn-out mines, although mining, as before stated, has continued on a large and extensive scale in the vicinity of Ione and Jackson.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about Amador County and the City of Jackson to readers of The Grizzly Bear, will be the history of the organization of Ursula Parlor No. 1 Native Daughters of the Golden West, in the year 1886.

The story of this remarkable organization is of peculiar interest to native Californians and of special interest to the citizens of Amador County, for it was in that county, in the City of Jackson, that the Order had its inception a little over forty years ago. This distinctively California sisterhood was founded in the Town of Jackson on Saturday, September 11, 1886, at a meeting called by Miss Lilly O. Reichling, a native of the City of Jackson, who by invitation addressed native California women only.

The meeting was held in Pioneer Hall, which occupied the basement of the Weller building on Main street (see illustrating photograph), now occupied as a general store. Thirteen members enrolled themselves at this preliminary meeting, and two weeks later, on September 25th, a permanent organization was formed, and the name of "Ursula Parlor No. 1 Native Daughters of the Golden West" was adopted.

From this humble beginning in the foothills of Amador County has grown the great sisterhood of native California women, now numbering over fourteen thousand earnest workers for the civic, social and educational development of our wonderful Empire of the West.

Between the date of organization and the month of June 1887, special instituting officers of Ursula Parlor organized and established seventeen Parlors of the Order, in various cities of the state; in July 1887, the first Grand Parlor met in San Francisco, adopted a constitution, selected a corps of grand officers and assumed the general powers of a grand organization. Parlors instituted since that time have been chartered by the grand body, but the honor of instituting the first seventeen Parlors belongs to Ursula, the "Mother Parlor." The total number of Parlors instituted is 239, of which 154 are still active.

To Miss Lilly O. Reichling, now Mrs. Francis H. Dyer, the Order has accorded the highest honor within its gift—permanent membership in the Grand Parlor, with the title of "The Founder of the Order."

The first Grand President of the Order was Mrs. Tina L. Kane, also of Jackson; and to her alone of all the Grand Presidents was accorded the honor of re-election for a second term. Mrs. Ella E. Caminetti of Ursula Parlor also enjoys the distinction of having attained the office of Grand President; and Miss Laura J. Frakes of Amapola Parlor holds permanent honor as Past Grand Secretary of the Order. Thus Amador County is honored for having produced daughters with such noble and high purpose.

The Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West is, as its name indicates, composed wholly of California women, associated in loyalty to their native state and dedicated to its upbuilding and the perpetuation of its traditions.

No state in our union owns a more intriguing and romantic historic background than California. Through all the long history of travail and discouragement, from the first discovery by Cabrillo in 1542 down through the successive periods of the mission occupancy, the Mexican supremacy, the "invasion" by the gold-seekers, to the supreme moment of acceptance into the sisterhood of states, the tale reads like a vivid and engrossing romance.

One of the cherished aims of the organization of Native Daughters is the keeping alive of this beautiful story. Financial aid is given particularly to the movement for the preservation of the missions, the marking of historic places, the placing of "mission bells" along the "King's Highway." It devotes special days for the payment of tribute to the Pioneers; other days of special observance are dedicated to the Flag, to Arbor Day, Mother's Day and Memorial Day.

The Order is a beneficial organization, open to all native-born California White women over sixteen years of age. Liberal features of sick insurance, funeral protection and other desirable benefits are offered, making it one of the most attractive women's orders in the West. A well-equipped home is maintained in San Francisco for the use of worthy members sojourning in that city for rest, recreation or study, or in sickness or distress.

Amador County has five active Parlors of the Order—Ursula No. 1 at Jackson, Chispa No. 40 at Ione, Amapola No. 80 at Sutter Creek, Forrest No. 86 at Plymouth, and California No. 161 at Amador City. All of these Parlors are in prosperous condition, and each, in its sphere, contributes its quota of devotion to the ideals fostered by the organization. Conrad Parlor of Volcano recently elected to consolidate with the Mother Parlor, as did Sequoia Parlor of Mokelumne Hill; while Chispa Parlor of Ione was enriched by the absorption of Geneva Parlor of Camanche.

In carrying out the purpose of the organization, that of maintaining the traditions and aiding in the upbuilding of the state, was the effort exerted by the Native Daughters of Amador County in having set aside a reservation for the Indians, who were deprived of their lands by the early settlers of the county. Thus, in the year 1895, the first Indian reservation was secured for the county. A ranch of several thousand acres was purchased and preparations made for caring for these people. This reservation has been, perhaps, one of the most successfully operated of any throughout the country. The Indians have become practically self supporting, doing road work, wood cutting and various kinds of ranch work. There are at present several colonies of them outside of the reservation in the county, in good homes, with autos and children attending school regularly. There is a special fund provided, whereby a school educating Indian children receives government money. Several of the young people have reached high-school.

Although most of them have gotten far away from the customs of their forebears, some of the older women still weave excellent baskets, not the tawdry ones, made to sell, but beautiful specimens, used in cooking their acorn bread and squirrel stews. There are several fine Indian collections in private homes. U. S. Gregory has this to say of the Indians around Ione:

"Near Buena Vista there remains scarcely a relic of what was once a great Indian village. I have seen hundreds of Diggers from all over Northern California gathered there at their annual pow-wows, remaining for several days feasting and dancing in a great underground dance house. Often they fell from sheer exhaustion and were dragged to the surface to be revived. I have seen them depart for their homes with countless dogs and piccaninnies trailing behind. Not an uncommon sight was a White squaw man with a mud-head squaw and a band of half-breeds following them. Nearly all of these sights have vanished, and only a few are left who remember them."

Indian Dick met Ben Milliken near Yosemite, as he was making his way into the mountains after being released from Folsom, where he had been incarcerated for many years for the murof some Chinamen in Amador County. Milliken became interested in him, and wrote to Will Tam, Jackson merchant, to be good to the old one-legged fellow. He said old Dick had one regret—he had killed only seven Chinamen; the eighth got away! (This charming specimen now lives in Jackson.)

It is probable that trappers visited the country about the Mokelumne in the '40s, but not often, for the Indians watched every move with suspicious eyes. The Hudson Bay agent at French Camp reported that all attempts to ranch or raise cattle on the east side of the San Joaquin had been failures. The Indians appro-orlated the cattle and destroyed the ranches. There were 5,000 Indians in and around the country where Ione now stands. They disposed of their dead by placing them in the tops of trees and tying them with withes.

These Indians, hearing that a man with white skin (Sutter) was building a fort, went to take a look, were corralled, and made to work. Later, they went voluntarily. There was trouble with them sometimes, as their land was taken over by the Whites, but as a rule they gave way, retiring higher into the hills. Volcano and Pine Grove were surrounded by them. Clarence Wooster, born in Pine Grove (now of San Francisco and very facile with his pen), tells of seeing hundred of Indians camped about his grandfather's ranch. There were fine apple orchards here, and the Indians sort of "honed" for the fruit.

There are Indian "mills" (a group of mortars) at Middle Bar, Shenandoah, on the Herbert Ranch (formerly Cough's), on the Ginochio ranch at Scottsville, and many near Butte Mountain. They tell much of the social habits of the squaws. A group of mortars, close together in the huge rocks, proves what the '49ers said. "The women laughed and chatted as they pounded acorns, pine nuts, seeds, hoppers and even buckeye meats in these mills, and probably planned their future actions as cleverly as their later sisters, though not according to Robert's "rules of order"

These interesting bits of California history and early romance which have found a place in the hearts of all true Californians are only a few of the many incidents that have been chronicled and which have been wound around the work of the daughters of California who are members of the N.D.G.W.

Delegates to the annual Grand Parlor of the Order to be held in Modesto, Stanislaus County, during the week of June 20 will find much of interest in making a trip to Amador County, and especially to the Cities of Jackson and Ione, where the early history of the Native Daughter organization was written. The old mining district of Volcano still stands a "ghost city," as mute evidence of the activity that once existed there.

Stockton, depicting the generosity and hospitality of her citizens through the Stockton Chamber of Commerce, offers to the delegates of this annual convention every service and courtesy that may be bestowed upon those who might be interested in seeing the points of interest in this section. Stockton, itself, is fast becoming a convention city of wide recognition, because of the many points of interest centered here and the fact that the new Civic Memorial Auditorium, with a seating capacity of 5,000, together with adequate hotel facilities, makes it possible to accommodate conventions of small or large delegations.

Verily, Stockton is proud of her surroundings and the allurement of her sister communities in the adjoining counties, and is happy to be able to tell a story which may be of interest to those who may or may not have heard the bits of history herein contained.

[Author's Note: Grateful acknowledgment is made to the recently published history of Amador County, by the Amador County Federation of Women's Clubs, for much of the material contained in the above article.]

BIG GATHERING NATIVE DAUGHTERS TO GREET GRAND PRESIDENT.

Joaquin Parlor No. 5 N.D.G.W. entertained May 10 in honor of Grand President Pearl Lamb of Tracy, who paid her official visit. A dinner preceding the meeting was enjoyed by 215 invited guests. The hall was beautifully decorated, roses, sweetpeas and baskets of spring flowers being everywhere, in profusion. Baskets of beautiful flowers were presented the Grand President by Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. and the Ladies Auxiliary of Pioneers of San Joaquin County.

Fourteen Parlors, in addition to Joaquin, were represented at the gathering — Aloha No. 106 (Oakland), Bahia Vista No. 167 (Oakland), Chispa No. 40 (Ione), Antioch No. 233, El Cereso No. 207 (San Leandro), Caliz de Oro No. 206 (Stockton), Califia No. 22 (Sacramento), El

PROCEEDINGS FIFTIETH N.S. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

WITH GRAND PRESIDENT HILliard E. Welch presiding, the Fiftieth Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West was in session at San Pedro, May 9, 11 and 13. Nothing of a startling nature transpired. The one exciting occasion was the election for grand officers, three ballots being necessary before a Grand Third Vice-president selection could be made from among the four candidates.

The two outstanding features of the session were the addresses of Past Grand President John F. Davis of San Francisco and George H. Barnes of Los Angeles, president American Reforestation Association and American Green Cross, the latter speaking by invitation from the Grand Parlor.

Judge Davis' subject was Thomas Starr King, whose selection as one of California's representatives for the National Hall of Fame at Washington, D. C., has created considerable discussion both in and aside from the press. He lauded King's services to the country during the Civil War, and said that it was fitting that he should occupy a place alongside Junipero Serra, who brought Christianity to California.

Barnes' subject was "Forestry and Reforestation," and his words came from the heart. In clear-cut language he told of the stupendous losses suffered through destruction of the forests, and pleaded for national and state forestry policies that will prevent further forest devastation and will bring about the reforestation of devastated forest land.

Reports of grand officers and committees submitted to the Grand Parlor dealt mostly with matters that have heretofore been given publicity in The Grizzly Bear. The history committee gave an accounting of the work being accomplished by the traveling history fellows, supported by the Order through the University of California. In part, the report follows:

"We may consider this matter from two standpoints: the good that we are doing for the sake of California and the benefit that we are deriving for our Order. There is no question but that through our fellowships we are building year by year and piece by piece, from the foundation up, the true history of California. Materials hitherto undiscovered, facts before unknown, important phases of our state's story never before recognized are being discovered and published to the world. . . . Dozens of splendid works on different phases of our history have been published as a result of the fellowships and in all of these direct and praiseful recognition is given to the Order of the Native Sons by their authors.

"In addition to the two men who are successful in winning the much-cherished prize of the fellowships each year, there are dozens trying for the honor and opportunity and each of those produces as a thesis for his degree a work in reference to some phase of our California history and we are teaching the teachers who will expound that history in the schools of California and elsewhere in the years to come.

"For ourselves and our Order we are getting, in the first place, an opportunity to perform a great work which is splendidly worth while and which, to a very large degree, justifies our existence and wins for us the commendation of those outside our Order. We are getting for the Native Sons of the Golden West recognition and publicity which we could not buy for a hundred times the contribution which we are making. . . . But over and above all that, we are doing a great work for California. The story of our state is intricate and complicated as well as being glorious and romantic. It covers a great expanse in time and space and is involved with the history of Europe and Mexico. In the archives of foreign nations there are yet untold treasures of materials on California's history waiting to be mined. Who will do it, the Native Sons of the Golden West or someone else?

"In this work we are building a great monument. We could stop now and the work we have done would be a credit to our Order, or we can go on and build a greater monument and achieve a greater glory. But who wants to give up an endeavor which means so much to the very life of this great organization and which so nearly typifies our purpose in existence?

"In the future years, when California has made a record of her glorious history, a record unsurpassed by that of any other state in the whole United States, a record that all may read, the historians, the scholars and the readers of that history will know that the work was done, the impetus was given, the help to accomplish it was extended by the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, and it will be to the everlasting glory of this Order." [At the University of California's commencement day ceremonies, May 11, John Tate Lanning of Linwood, North Carolina, and Donald Winslow Rowland of Mariposa, California, were announced as the Native Sons' fellows in Pacific Coast history for 1927-28.—Editor.]

A summary of the Grand Parlor proceedings follows, reference being confined to those proposals which received favorable consideration:

LEGISLATURE'S SELECTIONS FOR NATIONAL FAME HALL APPROVED.

By adoption of the following resolution, the Grand Parlor went on record as favoring the selection of Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King as California's representatives in the National Hall of Fame:

"Resolved, That the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, in semi-centennial session assembled at San Pedro, May 9, 1927, most warmly approves the action of the Legislature in passing Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 17, selecting the names of Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King as California's representatives in the Hall of Fame in the rotunda of the National Capitol of Washington, D. C., and hereby tenders to it its sincere thanks for its patriotic judgment in performing this wise service by a practically unanimous vote and for causing the same to be certified to the secretary of state and to be transmitted to Washington:

"Resolved, further, That the Order further commends the action of the Legislature in passing Senate Bill No. 652, providing for a state commission consisting of the state librarian and four other members to be appointed by the governor and authorizing and empowering the commission to carry out the purposes of said resolution, and hereby most respectfully and most earnestly urges the governor to sign said Senate Bill No. 652, and thereby insure to the state the honor of being thus represented by these two worthy names of men who have each performed most noble services for California."

[May 20, Governor C. C. Young attached his signature to Senate Bill No. 652, so this controversy is at an end, unless someone desires to promote a referendum.—Editor.]

CONGRESS URGED TO PASS BOULDER CANYON DAM BILL.

The Grand Parlor expressed its approval of the Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon dam bill, by unanimous adoption of the following resolution:

"Whereas, The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is pledged to the preservation of the natural resources of our beloved state; and whereas, with the growth of population and consequent increase of irrigation, the water levels are shown by the reports of the officials of the state to be rapidly lowering; and whereas, it has become the policy of the State of California to develop and conserve every source of water supply; and whereas, the Colorado River is the greatest available source of water supply for the entire southern portion of the state and an invaluable asset to the people of California; and whereas, this asset at times menaces not only a vast area of the most fertile soil in the world, but the homes of thousands of our citizens; and whereas, there is now pending before the Congress of the United States a bill known as the Swing-Johnson bill, that provides for the development and control of the Colorado River and the safeguarding of the lives and property of the citizens of the Imperial Valley and for the conserving of an immense supply of water suitable for domestic use throughout all of Southern California; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West endorse the Swing-Johnson bill and pledge our unanimous support to this meritorious measure, that means so much to the people of the great southwest, and that we urge our senators and congressmen to lend their best efforts toward securing the passage of the Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon dam bill at the next session of the Congress of the United States."

Extending to the first day of March the time in which a grand officer may make his official visit to a Subordinate Parlor.

Providing additional duties for the lapsation committee of a Subordinate Parlor.

Providing for the appointment in Subordinate Parlors of a funeral committee, "to render the funeral ritual of the Order at all funerals under the auspices of the Parlor."

Adding to the initiatory ritual the following: "I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all."

BUSINESS TRANSACTED.

Santa Cruz City was designated as the place for holding this year's Admission Day, September 9, state-wide celebration.

The sum of $1,000 was appropriated for the purpose of rendering aid and comfort to the distressed in the Mississippi Valley flood disaster.

Oakland was awarded the state-wide Admission Day celebration for 1928.

Proposed appropriations for the preservation of San Miguel Mission, for the restoration of Santa Clara Mission, and for the marking of the site of an historic fort near Fort Jones, Siskiyou County, were referred to the Grand Parlor landmarks committee, which will investigate and act in accordance with its findings, sufficient funds being provided therefor.

Several suggested changes in the initiatory ritual, and a funeral ritual proposed by Twin Peaks Parlor No. 214 (San Francisco) were referred to the Grand Parlor ritual committee for consideration.

The selection of a place of meeting for the Fifty-first (1928) Grand Parlor was referred to the Board of Grand Officers.

Calaveras Parlor No. 67 (San Andreas) and Siskiyou Parlor No. 188 (Fort Jones) were ordered dissolved.

The special committee on insurance authorized by the Santa Rosa (1926) Grand Parlor, was, on recommendation of the state of the order committee, granted further time in which to report to the Board of Grand Officers.

A resolution proposing that twenty cents be added to the percapita tax to provide a fund with which to plant trees along the major paved highways of the state was referred to the 1928 Grand Parlor.

The salary of the Grand Secretary was increased to $5,000 a year.

Five cents was added to the percapita tax, the sum derived to be used in financing the celebration of Admission Day.

The property of the Grand Parlor at Donner Lake in Nevada County, upon which is located the Pioneer monument, erected by the Order, was ordered deeded to the State of California, which has agreed to take over and maintain the property.

The incoming Grand President was authorized to appoint two committees to report to the 1928 Grand Parlor. One, of five members, to revise the initiatory ritual, and the other, of three members, to investigate the proposed establishment of an auxiliary composed of native sons between the ages of 15 and 18 years.

The Grand Secretary was directed to procure arguments relative to a proposed "sick benefit department," and to submit the same to the Subordinate Parlors.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Endorsing the efforts of the Sacramento County Parlors to have the remains of General John A. Sutter and his wife interred at Sutter's Fort, Sacramento City, and commending Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Sunset No. 26) and Joseph R. Knowland (P.G.P.) for their assistance.

Commending Governor C. C. Young for including in the state budget $7,000 for restoring the interior of historic Sutter's Fort, state property.

VARIETY THE SPICE OF THE MODE

IS IT POSSIBLE FOR THE WOMAN OF LIMITED income to be smartly or elegantly dressed? Yes. Once upon a time, when dowdiness was prevalent, a lack of a large checking account was considered by many women the best excuse for a lack of chic appearance, but now, the woman of intelligence and taste knows that the quality of one's wardrobe need not follow the graphic line of one's budget. Common sense and good taste are the best substitutes for an unlimited income, and the greater of these is common sense.

Everybody is acquainted with at least one woman whose shopping method is to buy a dress out of a shop window, because it just happened to strike her eye, or with one who chooses a hat because of its stunning buckle. It is not common sense to rush into a shop and buy the first model on the rack because the dress is cheap. A smart wardrobe is never organized by such a system of shopping. Such hit-or-miss purchases are bad economy.

Knowing that variety is the spice of the mode, one will think carefully of the different ways in which a dress or a coat can be worn, before choosing it and thus two purposes may be served. Dressing well, like any other art, must be done intelligently.

What clothes does one need for vacationing? This is the question everyone is asking. The mountaineer, the camper, the motorist and the tourist on land or sea find this the summer problem. Cool mornings and cool evenings in the mountains demand sweater costumes and the three-piece wool or sweater suit. With this costume the outer sweater or coat can be worn or taken off at will.

At the seashore the brighter and cooler looking costumes, in linen and wash silk, will find favor. The sleeveless one-piece frock can be worn with the bright-colored sweater or jacket. The three-piece suit, with its one-piece frock, sleeveless sweater and deep-toned coat sweater, promises a vogue for smart sports wear. The more practical outfits for the growing girl and child are made of khaki, tweed, linen and crash.

A newer medium in poplin bids fair to insure popularity. Beach costumes for the adult vary. The one- or two-piece knitted suit remains the practical suit for swimming. For playing or strolling on the beach, a new wrap appears on fashion's horizon.

The pajama suit, in many versions, worn at summering places for the past several seasons, promises a real vogue at the resorts. The coolie coat of cashmere may be seen in the shops in larger numbers than formerly, but the painted crepe silk suit in brilliant colorings is the smartest.

Other materials used in the more conservative types of beach coats and wraps are flannels, striped cotton materials, rayon mixtures, a ratine-like fabric with colorful floral patterns, and other combinations of bright-colored wash materials.

The recent period of hot weather brought many shoppers in search of cool clothes for street, sports and beach wear.

A definite trend in bathing suits is the athletic suit, with strapped armholes and shaped waist and legs. Other novelties are the two-piece suits of striped or plain jersey with plain trunks, one-piece suits with jacquard designs in two or more colors, and one-piece suits in compose effects that simulate a two-piece suit.

A high-powered mode of the season is the sweater and plaited skirt ensemble, or the cardigan sweater and skirt costume. The slip-over sweater has every sort of a collarless, drawn in round, square, or straight across vionnet line. Many are cross-barred with transparent gold or silver mesh stripes. Very fine lace and rayon and zephyr sweaters are worn with suits.

White felt hats are seen with the all-white costume, also white gloves and, more surprising still, white stockings. But the usual stocking worn with white is of a sunburned shade. Gloves for the country are pull-ons of white or natural colored chamois or doe skin. In town, the glove matches the beige stockings.

A general change in color trend was remarked in some hosiery lines, but this was said to be in favor of the deeper tan shades with a burnt cast.

Clock decorations and embroidery combine in interesting designs in hosiery. An inverted clock embroidered in silk terminates in a flower in one pattern.

Harmony is noticed between the color of the shoe and the hose. When dark shoes are worn, the stockings are chosen in a slightly lighter shade of the same color as the shoe. If the shoe is of a light color, the hose are chosen in exactly the same color as the shoe. This harmonious blending is observed when black patent leather shoes are worn, as dove gray stockings are then chosen.

One of the most promising styles for the summer months is the extremely and mediumly wide brimmed hats with snugly fitting crowns. Many dealers show the large hair-braid hats in delicate colors. Their sheerness and wide brims make them especially suitable for slightly more formal wear. They are shown in two distinct treatments. Velvet ribbon is a favored trimming in simpler styles, while the more elaborate ones are trimmed in velvet flowers, either in extremely large, single blossoms or groups of blending colored buds. Leghorns are mentioned as another summer item of importance.

Wash silks sponsor pastel shades almost exclusively. A variety of style detail is introduced in the printed dresses. A majority of the models are one-piece, with such treatments as drapes, jabots, etc., emphasizing the light summer effect of the fabrics. Some interesting models have collars of white organdie and edgings of grosgrain ribbon.

Flannel coats for summer are developed in white and pastel shades and some of them have light-colored coney collars. Beige, french blue and rose are mentioned as the leading colors in the flannel coats.

Untrimmed kashas, in white and light colors, are also noted in summer lines. White kasha or basket weave coats are lined with black taffeta and finished with the taffeta stitched down on lapels and revers, and sometimes have full tuxedo fronts. Others have black and white calf collars.

There are also sleeveless jackets, a sports idea, and short jackets, which are very much talked about and may mean the box coat of a suit.

The knotted handkerchief scarf is a new note in the mode, and it may match some part of the costume.

Bows are worn all over the frock, or may be used as drapery. Tiers, tunics, boleros, blousing at the hipline, tucks, rows of stitching and diagonals are the trimmings of the season.

The only news in skirt length is the way in which it is referred to. Skirts are no longer so many inches above the floor, but so many below the knee! Waistlines are as they were—at the hip—and there, apparently, they mean to stay.

PRINTED SUMMER FABRICS AT HEIGHT OF POPULARITY.

Printed wash fabrics are just now at the height of their popularity. They are found in all weights of cotton materials. Manufacturers of voile, batiste, dimity, organdy, broadcloth, zephyrs, cotton charmeuse and novelty corded cottons have all adopted prints. The distinguishing characteristic, according to the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, is that the designs are printed upon the fabric and therefore appear only upon one side.

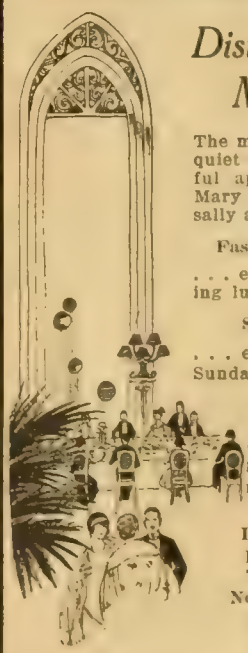
American dyestuff manufacturers have developed large numbers of fast dyes which may be used in the printing processes. This has made it possible to secure domestic fabrics of this kind which launder well and do not fade. The color is guaranteed fast in many of them. To be sure that this guarantee is reliable, it is advisable to purchase well-known brands and also to take a sample home and wash it to be sure the color is fast. This precaution is particularly necessary if the material is to be used for children's clothing, which must withstand frequent laundering.

The patterns are exceptionally charming this year. In some cases the ideas have been taken from hand-embroidered figures. Small patterns are popular. Voiles printed in geometric designs are new. Some of these, developed in black and white, gray or blue, are especially suitable for older women.

For hot summer afternoons batiste, dimity and organdy will be cool and fresh. The zephyrs, cotton charmeuse and corded cottons are excellent for house dresses and for the small daughter's school and play dresses. Edge finishes, collars and cuffs, or inserted bands of a plain material the same color as the background or one of the figures in the material, give these dresses more character and interest. For young girls' party dresses printed batiste, organdy and lawn are youthful and appropriate fabrics.

REPLICA NOTED LANDMARK OF CALIFORNIA IS DEDICATED.

Yuba City (Sutter County)—A replica of an iron fort and warehouse of General John A. Sutter was dedicated near the site of the old Sutter homestead at Hock Farm, near here, May 8. It is constructed from the original material brought around Cape Horn and erected upon the river bank by General Sutter in 1842. In it are the same iron, doors and hinges. The same eaves and the same clamps hold the staff that supports the Flag of the United States.



The dedicatory ceremonies were under the auspices of the Bi-County Federation of Women's Clubs of Sutter and Yuba Counties.

FORTY-FIRST N. D. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

MONDAY, JUNE 20, AT 9 A. M., THE Forty-first Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West will assemble at Modesto, Stanislaus County. Grand President Pearl M. Lamb (El Pescadero Parlor No. 82) of Tracy will preside throughout the four days of deliberations.

Reports of the grand officers will show that, during the incumbency of Mrs. Lamb, the Order has made splendid numerical growth, approximately 1,200 new members having affiliated with the Subordinate Parlors.

Two new Parlors were instituted during the Grand Parlor year—Verdugo No. 240 at Glendale, Los Angeles County, and Lugonia No. 241 at San Bernardino City—and several others are about ready for institution.

The reports, too, will show that the finances of the Grand Parlor are in excellent condition. As directed by the Sacramento (1926) Grand Parlor, the Board of Grand Trustees has made the necessary investments to provide two more scholarships.

The transportation committee of the Grand Parlor, Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley chairman, has advised the Subordinate Parlors that a special train will leave San Francisco over the Southern Pacific at 3:40 p. m. of June 19, arriving in Modesto at 7 p. m. "All visiting members are entitled to the same privilege as delegates," says the communication, "and may obtain identification certificates upon application to the Grand Secretary."

The accommodation committee of the Grand Parlor, Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton chairman, has sent to the Subordinate Parlors a list of Modesto's hotels and their rates. It concludes with: "Delegates desiring to make reservations are advised to communicate with the hotel preferred as soon as possible, in order that rooms may be assured."

Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe, chairman of a Grand Parlor committee to which was delegated the task of collecting a $10,000 fund with which to purchase a grove of memorial redwoods in Humboldt County, hopes that a letter recently sent Subordinate Parlors will produce such results that she may report the fund subscribed, by the time the Modesto Grand Parlor meets. Recent subscribers, in addition to those mentioned otherwheres in this issue of The Grizzly Bear, are: Woodland Parlor No. 90, which will dedicate a redwood to the Pioneers of Yolo County; Annie K. Bidwell Parlor No. 168 of Chico, which will dedicate one to Mrs. Annie E. K. Bidwell, Butte County Pioneer and philanthropist.

CANDIDATES FOR OFFICE.

From the office-seeking viewpoint, the Modesto Grand Parlor promises to be one of the most exciting in several years, as there will be at least two candidates for Grand Secretary and at least three for Grand Vice-president, the doorstep into the Grand Presidency. And, rumor has it, there will be at least one—and possibly more—additional candidate for each of these coveted offices.

Mae Himes-Noonan (Portola Parlor No. 172) of San Francisco, now the Grand Vice-president, will, unless precedent is reversed, succeed to the Grand Presidency without opposition. At the Grand Parlor's close Pearl M. Lamb, the Grand President, will automatically become the Junior Past Grand President.

In response to persistent queries, The Grizzly Bear is authorized to state that the following

THE PASADENA HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT PAGEANT

Harry L. Roberts

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT,
PASADENA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND CIVIC ASSOCIATION.)

CHERRY BLOSSOMS OF OLD JAPAN will mingle with California roses in the beautiful garden which will constitute the setting for the annual commencement pageant of Pasadena high-school and junior college in the Pasadena Rose Bowl on the late afternoon of June 17.

"Springtime and Youth" will be the theme of this year's pageant, in which approximately 2,000 students will participate, with probably 50,000 persons looking on. The graduates total 575. Music for the pageant will be supplied by the Los Angeles Woman's Symphony orchestra, an ensemble of eighty pieces, conducted by Henry Schoenfeldt.

The occasion will mark the seventh time that the commencement exercises of Pasadena high-school have been held in the form of an outdoor pageant. Each year the pageant has been more beautiful and more elaborate than the preceding year. Throngs now come from all over Southern California to tax the capacity of the Rose Bowl on the occasion of the annual event.

Miss Ida E. Hawes, who has planned and directed the pageant each year since its inception, is again in charge this year.

"The heart of youth is much the same the world over," said Miss Hawes, explaining the theme and motif of the pageant, "but springtime changes with changing climes. In Japan, the cherry blossoms announce the coming of spring; in Pasadena, it is the rose.

"Pasadena has long claimed the queen of flowers as her own, and the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Association has paid homage to her each New Year's Day. Just a few months ago, the association copyrighted its rose song, 'When Roses Are in Bloom,' and asked that every loyal Pasadenan strive to make the rose the symbol of Pasadena. It is, then, particularly fitting that this commencement pageant, which is Pasadena's summertime festival, should this year of all years use the rose as its motif.

"On June 17, just a few moments before five o'clock, the 575 members of the graduating class will enter the stadium. The immense stage, transformed into a bower of flowers, will be connected by flower-laden pergolas with the bleachers. On either side, seats will be reserved, under flower-decked canopies, for the seniors, that they may witness the pageant connected with their graduation exercises.

PARTICIPANTS IN A PASADENA HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT PAGEANT

"It is five o'clock; the pageant begins. The Goddess of Spring enters, accompanied by her attendants, the fairies, the elves and the brownies. She takes her place on the bridge which spans the little stream running through the garden, and from this position gives her commands that shall awaken the flowers and the trees. The spring zephyrs, the raindrops, come dancing in, and begin the work of removing the shimmering veils which cover the cherry trees. Then come the sunbeams, and as they mingle with the raindrops and the clouds, the rainbow girls appear, bearing a great pot of gold which they place at the foot of the bow of promise which spans the stage. And then, to the delight of the little Japanese children playing in this fairy garden, the Joys of Cherry Blossom Time appear, expressing their joy in a charmingly vivacious cherry blossom dance.

"Then the scene changes. Great groups of California girls in richest shades of yellow appear, and for them the messengers of spring are also ready to work. The elves and the brownies, the fairies, the raindrops and the zephyrs dance merrily about the rose trees, while the rays of California's bright sunshine aid them to unveil the beauties of the roses, until at last the Joys of Rose Time celebrate the coming of spring.

"But the loveliest flower of all is yet to be presented. At the feet of the Goddess of Spring stands an immense basket, containing evidently a flower of unusual beauty. All the messengers of spring plead with her to join them in their joys, but in vain. Then suddenly, at Spring's bidding, the tiniest emissary of all goes forth—Master Cupid. His touch is magic. From the heart of a dark red rose, the Spirit of Youth springs forth, joyous and free. The Joys of Cherry Blossom Time and the Joys of Rose Time join her in her dance of gladness and delight, for the heart of youth is truly the same the world over.

"Then, led by this Spirit of Youth, the children of Cherry Blossom land and the children of our fair Rose City welcome to their midst the boys and girls of the graduating class."

A concert by the orchestra will precede the pageant. During the staging of the Japanese episode, Japanese musicians will play on Japanese instruments, and during the rose episode, rose songs will be sung by a double male quartet and a mixed trio, the group closing with "Roses Are in Bloom," official song of the Pasadena Tournament of Roses.

Following the pageant, Dr. Merle N. Smith will speak the invocation, and there will be short talks by Lorna Gunning Macdonnell, valedictorian of the class, and Stanley Hahn, class president. William F. Ewing, principal of the school, will then present the class, and a response will be made by John Franklin West, superintendent of schools. The presentation of diplomas by N. P. Moerdyke, president of the board of education, will be followed by the distribution of flowers to members of the graduating class and the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The entire program takes but little more than an hour, beginning at five o'clock and being concluded before dark.

DOGS REQUIRE MEAT.

Don't neglect meat in the diet of your dog. Raw meat is best, but cooked meat will do, and eggs and milk will make a substitute. But meat should be fed to dogs; it is their natural food, and while they can and do live on other foods they should have meat. Otherwise, they are more subject to distemper, mange, digestive troubles and other ills.

Meat, by the way, doesn't give dogs worms. Dogs get worms because the eggs that hatch into worms have been swallowed. If they don't get these eggs, and they won't in meat, they won't get worms. Raw meat need not be the whole diet, but it should be an essential part of it.

Oil Lands' Opening—In the United States Land Offices at Visalia, Tulare County, and San Francisco, June 6, 7 and 8, the Federal Government will open for entry 3,295 acres of land north of the Kern River oil field; these lands have, it is said, a potential oil value.

THE OUTING

(PAULINE HANDLEY.)

"The caravan will leave the Winter Garden at 10:30 a. m., going north out the McHenry road for about five miles, then turning east toward Sonora. The first historical landmark passed are the remains of the ancient City of Langworth, which dates back to the days of '49—once a flourishing little village with general merchandise store and dance hall above, a blacksmithshop, a postoffice, a hotel and a livery stable. There remains now only the brick store in which Bret Harte sat, and dreamed and planned many of his stories and poems.

"Passing through the little town of Oakdale established in 1861, we next come to Knight's Ferry, once a bustling burg and the center of all the county's political and social activity. Sequestered from the beaten line of travel, it has been passed by in the march of progress. The origin of Knight's Ferry is ascribed to Captain William Knight, who crossed the plains with Captain Fremont in the early '40s. In 1849 Dent, Vantine & Co. purchased from the Knight estate this property and proceeded with the construction of the first ferryboat on the Stanislaus for the accommodation of the immense travel then setting in for the Southern mines.

"At that time there were immense tribes of Digger Indians, numbering from 1,200 to 1,500 Indians. A correspondent writing under date of February 25, 1856, to the 'Daily Alta' of San Francisco, states: 'Tribes of Indians from the different grounds are holding a festival near us, dressed and painted in their warlike costume; their evenings being spent in dancing, to the amusement of those fond of novelty, in their grand casa, which is built of mud and large enough to contain one thousand persons, and resembles in shape a large Dutch oven, the entire entrance being low, all must stoop, or be in danger of losing part of their craniums.'

MODESTO'S NATIVE SONS

MODESTO PARLOR NO. 11, NATIVE Sons of the Golden West, was instituted January 27, 1910. Past Grand President Hubert R. McNoble of Stockton was in charge of the ceremonies, and was assisted by Grand Secretary Fred H. Jung, now deceased, Andrew Mocker, at that time Grand Organizer, and the officers of Orestimba Parlor No. 247 (Crows Landing).

The Parlor's first corps of officers included: W. E. Garrison, junior past president; J. D. Turner, president; C. M. Clary, first vice-president; Lowell Gum, second vice-president; B. C. Hawkins, third vice-president; D. K. Young, recording secretary; E. R. Briggs, financial secretary; Harry S. French, treasurer; D. M. Wootten, marshal; F. E. Jamison, Harry Wood, H. P. Weyer, trustees; A. R. Vogelman, inside sentinel; W. Campbell, outside sentinel.

Present officers of the Parlor are: O. A. Buletti, junior past president; Hugo McKinley, president; J. M. Breien, first vice-president; I. A. Dundas, second vice-president; L. E. Bither, third vice-president; C. C. Eastin, recording secretary; J. B. Moorehead, financial secretary; E. E. Hunsucker, treasurer; R. A. Alberts, marshal; M. V. Wilson, L. H. Bowen, L. Harris, trustees; William Wells, inside sentinel; William T. Wallace, outside sentinel; L. B. Schlingheyde, musician.

In 1916, Modesto Parlor was host to the Thirty-ninth Grand Parlor N.S.G.W.

Stanislaus' County Clerk.

"The first place of interest to be passed, just before entering Jamestown, will be the home of Leanna C Donner-App, the last survivor of the famous Donner family who, at the ripe old age of 93, is living in her old home of pioneer days. She is surprisingly hale and hearty, and cannot see why people stop and ask to shake hands with her, as she says she is no different from any one else. Next will be the famous Woods Crossing, where much mining activity went on. There are still standing in Jamestown several old buildings that, in the early '50s, were used as stores and homes.

"It may be interesting to many to know that Tuolumne County has been quite well represented in connection with the Grand Parlor of the Native Daughters. Mrs. B W Conrad of Sonora, a Past Grand President, was born in Springfield. Mamie G Peyton of Stockton, also a Past Grand President, although not born in the county, is a daughter of a fair native daughter of Springfield, Lily Carney. Columbia was the birthplace of another Past Grand President, Dr. Victory H. Derrick of Oakland. She visited the old home town and county in her official capacity not many years ago and was warmly welcomed by all, being accorded a welcome similar to that extended Mrs. Peyton some years before.

"The first discovery of gold in Tuolumne County was made early in the summer of 1848 by a party of Americans, largely from Philadelphia. The party was organized in Stockton and was headed by Reverend James Woods. They entered the rich Mother Lode district a short distance below the present town of Jamestown (Jimtown), near the Harvard Mine, camping on the banks of a creek at a point which they named Woods Crossing, and the creek, like the crossing, was named after the leader of the party. The creek was found to be very rich in gold, from its source above Columbia, throughout its entire length, a distance of over twenty miles, to Jacksonville, where it emptied into the main Tuolumne River.

"In August 1848 Colonel James, a lawyer of San Francisco, located a little farther up Woods Creek and at once engaged in mining speculation. Soon quite a settlement was formed, which was called 'Jamestown.' Some time later the name was changed to 'American Camp,' but was soon changed back to 'Jamestown.' For many years during pioneer days it was called 'Jimtown.' Jamestown is the first old mining town of Tuolumne County one enters in traveling east along the Sonora and Mono state highway and entering the famous Mother Lode, middle and east belt sections. It is a pretty little town and is increasing in size and population; modern buildings are replacing the structures of pioneer days. Jamestown has had a most interesting history. Prentice Mulford, well-known to early residents and to many throughout the county, was an old schoolteacher there. The 'Mother Lode Magnet,' one of the best and brightest newspapers of the county, is published in Jamestown.

"Rapidly following the discovery of rich diggings at Woods Crossing and Jamestown, small parties of prospectors spread eastward. A party of Mexican miners were the very first to follow in Woods Creek for several miles toward the east, where they located in the remarkably rich area now partly covered by the City of Sonora. Their little settlement was, probably until the arrival of the first party of Americans early in 1849, an almost exclusively Mexican colony. It took its name 'Sonora' from their native state in Mexico. For some time it was called 'Sonorian Camp' or 'Sonoramian Camp,' soon changing to 'Sonora.' Sonora has always been the county seat of Tuolumne County, being centrally located. All roads in the county lead to Sonora. In early days it was the commercial center, freighting being carried on with ox teams in the mountain district. Supplies were hauled from Stockton, through Eugene, and from Oakdale. The Sierra railway was built into Sonora in 1897.

"At the present time Sonora enjoys a very large volume of trade and travel. Its merchants are prosperous and up-to-date and its banks have reflected for many years a very gratifying increase. It has a delightful climate, and is the gateway to many summer resorts. Sonora has three newspapers, all weeklies—the 'Union Democrat,' the oldest paper in the county and established in the '50s, the 'Baune' and the 'Tuolumne Independent.' Sonora is rated as one of the very best towns in the entire mining region of California and lies in the center of a rich mineral district. Its early placers were wonderfully rich and the famous pocket belt of that locality has yielded largely for many years.

"Gold was discovered in March 1850 on the south side of Main Gulch, by a party of Americans, among whom were Dr. Thaddeus Hildreth and his brother, George Hildreth. It was known as the 'Hildreth party' and the place was first called 'Hildreth Diggings,' but April 29th was named 'Columbia.' As soon as the news of this new discovery became known a great rush was on, so great that by the middle of April fully six thousand persons had arrived at the scene of this latest gold discovery of wondrous richness and extent. A large majority came in to prospect and work the new diggings, but there was also a great influx of gamblers, camp followers and others. Soon, however, it became apparent that, notwithstanding the extraordinary richness and area of the new find, nothing could be accomplished until a more plentiful supply of water for mining and other purposes could be obtained, so the thousands who were camped on 'Kennebec Hill' and vicinity scattered all over the whole district, making new discoveries almost daily, at Springfield, Gold Springs, Yankee Hill, Pine Log and dozens of other locations. Water was brought into camp early in 1852 from Five Mile Creek, the neareset stream, and the supply was further increased later in the same year from the South Fork of the Stanislaus River.

"Columbia then began to grow in earnest and in a short time became one of the largest towns in the state and was a leading aspirant for the state capital in the contest with Sacramento and other towns. Columbia has a wonderful history, not alone for gold production, but in many other ways. It was called by many the 'Gem of the Southern Mines.' Its gold production is estimated at sixty million dollars. It had the largest area of placer gold diggings in the state.

"The most notable landmark in the vicinity of Columbia, and perhaps in the whole of Tuolumne County, is Saint Ann's Catholic church. This old church, of which so much has been written, was built in 1856 by the pioneer Catholics of Columbia and vicinity who were generously assisted by contributions from the town, regardless of creed or denomination. To Rev. Father Daniel Slattery, to whose efforts the early completion of the splendid edifice is mainly due, belongs the great honor of conceiving and carrying to completion this historic pioneer building, which stands on a small hill to the right of the road as you enter Columbia. The construction of the building was begun in 1856 and all the exterior work was finished by the end of that year. The church was dedicated either late in 1856 or in the spring of 1857. The church has, in recent years, been restored, by the Native Sons, Native Daughters, Young Men's Institute and Young Ladies' Institute."

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

HISTORY BOOK ALONG NEW LINES

"CALIFORNIA AND THE NATION 1850-1869 - A Study of the Relations of a Frontier Community With the Federal Government," is the title of the latest of the publications in history issued by the University of California from its Berkeley press. It is by Dr. Joseph Ellison, and is dedicated to Dr Herbert Eugene Bolton, chairman of the university's department of history. The publication features hitherto untouched documents relating to the Federal Government's part in the development of local laws and institutions.

Guided by the belief that histories of California have hitherto devoted too much space to spectacular incidents and outstanding figures, and too little to the more important legislative program of the Federal Congress which the passage of time has now put in a true light, Dr Ellison has confined himself to that aspect. The several chapters are devoted to

"Pre-Statehood Period," "Mexican Land Grants," "Federal Land Grants to California," "The Mineral Land Question in California," "The Indian Question," "The Civil Fund and the Mint," "The Vigilance Committee and Federal Interference," "Means of Communication and Transportation," "Sentiment for a Pacific Republic," "Loyalty and Disloyalty" and "Attitude of California to the Legal Tender Notes During the Civil War." In the preface to the publication, Dr. Ellison sums up the historical situation as follows

"A large part of the history of a federal country like the United States centers around the relations of the several states of the union with the national government. Yet books on American history generally deal with either purely national affairs or purely local events. The histories by McMaster, Schouler, Von Holst and Rhodes, while admirable in many respects, contain very little on the federal relations of a state like California and, moreover, many of the assertions made are either only partly true or entirely wrong.

"Likewise, with our so-called local histories. Much interesting and valuable information is given in the bulky standard histories of California. But these histories are, generally speaking, narratives of local events with descriptions of local personalities, usually of the more picturesque type. The two most voluminous histories of California, by Bancroft and Hittel, devote chapters to such romantic episodes as the Donner party, filibustering expeditions, discovery of gold and the San Francisco vigilance committees. But there is practically nothing on the less exciting but nevertheless serious controversy between the state and the Federal Government with regard to the public lands. They devote a number of chapters to the mines and miners but they are practically silent on the very important question of the control and disposition of the mineral lands. The present study is intended to supply such omissions in the field and period chosen And so far as I know it is practically the first attempt made in this direction."

CARTHAY CIRCLE MECCA FOR MANY.

Thousands of visitors from in and out of the state visit the beautiful Carthay Circle theater on Wilshire boulevard in Carthay Center every month, not only to enjoy the great pictures, such as Fox's million-dollar production of "Seventh Heaven," richly embellished by Carli Elinor's wonderful music and Jack Laughlin's colorful and entertaining prologue, but also to view and admire the many beautiful paintings and art objects that adorn the theater and which depict the early scenes and struggles of the hardy Pioneers who founded this glorious California of ours.

This beautiful Spanish-type theater is the only playhouse in the world built and dedicated to the pioneers of a state, and since it opened a short year ago it has become world renowned for its beauty and charm. It was built by J. Harvey McCarthy, himself a Native Son and one of the most beloved men in the southland, and the cornerstone was laid with impressive ceremonies by the N.S.G.W.

INTERESTING RELIC.

From Nora Sterry, principal of the Macy-street public-school, The Grizzly Bear received the following, dated May 4, which has been referred to the Interparlor N.S.G.W. Committee for action:

"In the Macy-street school district, at 14 Olvera street, there stands an interesting relic of pueblo days, the only residence extant which was built while California still belonged to Mexico.

"This house has been condemned as a dwelling, and rightly so, because it was constructed in an era which paid little heed to comfort and none at all to sanitation. As an historical exhibit, however, it is unique, and should be preserved. It is only a door or two from the old Plaza and could easily be made into a museum devoted to exhibits of the little colony which centered around the Plaza in the early days.

"I am writing you, hoping that you will bring this to the attention of the Native Sons and that they may be interested in the preservation of this unique old house."

There was a big attendance at the May 19 meeting of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W., when John T. Newell, an old-time member who was elected Grand Third Vice-president at the San Pedro Grand Parlor was given a rousing reception. Many of the "old boys" were out, to extend congratulations to John.

FOR THE GLORY OF CALIFORNIA— THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS.

Those born in California may be are no better Californians than the thousands who by their own choice have left their native states to come and make their homes here. The adopted citizen not infrequently has more enthusiasm for the state if not greater loyalty than the native. But the native son of California nevertheless has an inheritance all his own. There is distinction in the fact of having been born in the Golden State. It gives an individuality which is attainable only by birth. And it is transmitted to all who are native, whether they were cradled under the redwoods of the North or the palms of the South.

It is that thing possessed by the native sons which draws them together, gives them a bond of union, which has resulted in the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, formed in pride of and for the glory of California, to preserve the state intact and aid it on the road to greater things.

Representatives of the Order are meeting at San Pedro this week. They have come from every part of the state, from practically every one of the 58 counties from Del Norte to San Diego, from the high mountain district of the Mother Lode country—where the Forty-niner flourished—and from below sea level in Imperial, the newest of the counties. They know no sectionalism. They are only Californians.—Editorial, "Los Angeles Express," May 13.

ACCESSORIES FOR EARLY AMERICAN ROOM NOW EASY TO OBTAIN.

Have you some colonial chairs, either handed down in the family or good reproductions? Or perhaps a four-poster bed, a highboy, or a sewing stand with which to furnish an "early American room," so popular just now?

The Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, points out that it has never been easier to get the accessories that harmonize with the spirit of such a room than it is today. With cotton materials predominating everywhere in lovely old-fashioned patterns, flower designs and crewel work effects, a colonial room can be furnished at very moderate expense.

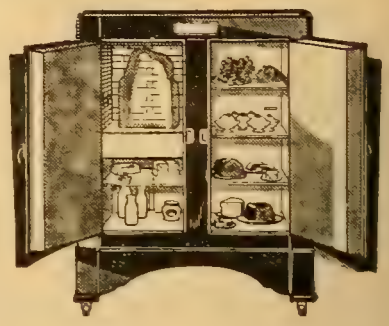
Ruffled tie-back curtains should be chosen for the windows. They may be made of voile, scrim or organdie. Several chairs may have slip covers of cretonne or glazed chintz. For the floor use cotton rugs, too, either woven from rags, braided, crocheted or hooked. Even the wall decorations may add to the old-fashioned flavor of the room, if you have a framed sampler, either really old or a modern version, a bit of good tapestry material or some interesting flower prints. If you happen to own a hand-woven coverlet or paisley shawl, use it in this room.

UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR ESTIMATES CALIFORNIA CITIES' POPULATION.

In an address at San Francisco May 25 before the California Economic Research Council, Professor Charles H. Titus of Stanford University made public the following estimates of population for April 1927 of some of the cities of the state. The estimates are based on investigations by the university:

Los Angeles, 1,190,000; San Francisco, 815,000; Oakland, 298,000; Sacramento, 94,000; Pasadena, 93,000; Berkeley, 70,000; San Jose, 55,000; Stockton, 54,000; Alameda, 36,000.

He said that Los Angeles' population increases at the rate of 90,000 annually, and San Francisco's at the rate of 30,000.



Pass Straightaway—When tempted to pass another car upon a curve or upon a hill, remember that every road has plenty of straight stretches.

Autos Use Copper—Twelve percent of the copper produced in the United States is used by the automobile industry.

Slow at Crossings—Slow down when approaching a cross road. Consider all crossings dangerous.

SAN PEDRO THE GREAT
HARBOR of the GRE AT SOUTHWEST

SAN PEDRO'S HOSPITALITY WAS LAVISH

NEVER IN THE HISTORY OF THE ORder of Native Sons of the Golden West has a Grand Parlor been more royally welcomed and more thoroughly entertained than was the Fiftieth. Such was the unanimous verdict of the hundreds of visitors to San Pedro the week of May 9.

The entire entertainment program, both for the womenfolks and the menfolks, was arranged and financed by Sepulveda No. 263, one of the youngest Parlors in the Order. In carrying out the program Sepulveda performed like an oldtimer and added another laurel to its enviable reputation for undertakings well accomplished. Dodson, Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman, President Gertrude Riepe, Secretary Charlotte Bennett and numerous other members of Rudecinda, and by their helpmates, Mrs. James Mee and Mrs. William Durr who, while not natives of California, are lovers of California and admirers of native Californians.

The San Pedro Grand Parlor entertainment program, as presented in detail in The Grizzly Bear for May, was carried out to perfection. When the Southern Pacific special arrived Sunday evening the visitors aboard were given a rousing welcome and, escorted by the Native Daughters' drill team, which made its initial parade appearance on this occasion, were conducted to headquarters. At the grand ball Thursday evening the team appeared in an exhibition drill.

DRILL TEAM, RUDECINDA PARLOR, N.D.G.W.

The Parlor had the unstinted co-operation of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W., the members of which looked after the exclusively-for-women entertainment features, and the citizens of San Pedro in general.

General Convention Chairman James W. Mee and President William F. Durr of Sepulveda were everywhere in evidence, to see that not a single detail was overlooked. Their efforts were ably seconded by a host of that Parlor's members, as well as by Mrs. Rudecinda Sepulveda-

At the Monday night reception, General Chairman James W. Mee presided, and the speakers included George E. Cryer, mayor of Los Angeles; Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, Past Grand President; William F. Durr, president Sepulveda Parlor; Gertrude Riepe, president Rudecinda Parlor; Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman; Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President; Chancellor K. Grady. Mrs. Rudecinda F. S. de Dodson was introduced to the assemblage as San Pedro's fairy godmother, and Frederick Smith, accompanied by Carl W. Gilbert, favored with violin selections.

The Grand Parlor banquet Wednesday evening was unique, in that it was served in the open at the waterfront. The night was a glorious one and the menu was excellent. Past Grand President William I. Traeger was the toastmaster, and toasts were responded to as follows: "California," George F. McNoble (Stockton No. 7); "Destiny of California," Past Grand President Charles E. McLaughlin; "The Flag," Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington. On behalf of the Order, Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler presented a testimonial of admiration to Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, who fittingly responded.

A perfect day was the opinion expressed by all the womenfolks who took advantage of the Wednesday outing arranged for their exclusive enjoyment. The trip was made under the guidance of Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman, who pointed out the various places of interest. The "Mission Play" at San Gabriel was visited, and

(JENNIE RAYMOND.)

"A REPORTER FOR LINCOLN."

By Ida M. Tarbell; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $1.60.

Two very interesting anecdotes about Lincoln, based on some letters and articles written by Henry E. Wing, who appears in both of the stories. The author, in her foreword, claims that the story treatment has altered no fact, stretched no point and added no artificial evidence to Wing's own stirring accounts of his experiences as the youthful survivor of Fredericksburg and the "cub" reporter for the "New York Tribune" in the last year of the Civil War. He brought news of the lost Army of the Potomac to President Lincoln, and coincidentally "pulled off" the biggest "scoop" of the war.

Wing became the proprietor of "The Litchfield Enquirer," and died while his narrative was in course of preparation.

"THE GIRL IN BLACK."

By Victor Bridges; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Lindsay Brooke has been home but two days from an exploring trip in South America when he drops into a cinema house and is given a seat alone in a curtained-off box. There he overhears a plan of two men to intercept the organist—the girl in black—on her way home, in order to obtain a valuable paper which she is supposed to be carrying with her.

The girl is so refined and attractive looking that Brooke decides to warn her. He thus becomes involved in the untangling of a plot to rob her of the key of an invention of her father and which the criminals wanted in the manufacturing of paper.

"LITTLE INJUN."

By Lowell Otus Reese; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

Here are nine pleasantly written short stories of primitive life on the Mojave Desert and the mountainous country of California, by an author who has lived among the people he so interestingly writes about.

Without neglecting such popular ingredients as murder, mystery and money, Reese manages as well to strike a deeper vein with his details of community affairs in the mining country of Copper Sky.

Many of the characters reappear in the several stories and, with their humor, entertain the reader in the leisure moments.

"JOB'S NIECE."

By Grace Livingston Hill; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Few heroines have more trouble than Doris Dunbar, the oldest girl of the family. She is left in charge of the household after the death of her father, the stepmother being unable to do so because of her shallowness and extreme selfishness. Doris accomplishes this formidable task at the cost of much self-sacrifice and patiently borne suffering.

The ordeal, like Job's affliction, is finally rewarded by Doris gaining the love and happiness which she so well deserves.

DAYS OF '49 RELIC ADDED TO NATIVES' COLLECTION.

Marysville (Yuba County)—Marysville Parlor No 6 N S G W is now the possessor of a rare historic relic—an ox yoke brought to California in 1849 It was presented to Loma T Sabbett, for the Parlor, by Mrs Clara Miller of Hanford-ton, whose father, Mr. Hansen, used it in making his first trip to the state in 1849

The relic will be added to the collection maintained by the Native Sons and Native Daughters in the restored historic Wells-Fargo building at Timbuctoo.

CALIFORNIA MOTORIST'S BIBLE REVISED BY STATE LEGISLATURE.

The California motorist's bible, the state Motor Vehicle Act, will appear in revised form as the result of the number of important changes in legislation affecting the operation of motor vehicles written into the state law by the recent Legislature, according to the California State Automobile Association. A summary of the legislation follows:

Making revocation of an operator's license automatic on three convictions for reckless driving instead of for speeding as at present.

Requiring vehicles exceeding eighty inches in width to carry clearance lights at night.

Increasing the speed limit from thirty-five to forty miles an hour.

Increasing the percentage of motor-vehicle license fees allotted to the State Division of Motor Vehicles from 20 to 25 percent, to provide for more adequate law enforcement.

Requiring parking stations to keep a record of cars stored longer than twelve hours and requiring garage proprietors to notify the police of vehicles stored more than thirty days when the name and address of owner are unknown.

To facilitate the recovery of stolen cars, used-car dealers are required to give notice of sale to the division. Notice of new car sales only have been required heretofore.

Persons found injuring or tampering with motor vehicles may be taken into custody immediately upon discovery by police officers instead of receiving a five days' notice to appear.

Making it a misdemeanor to withhold a certificate of ownership when the purchaser is legally entitled to same.

Examinatitn of new operators of motor vehicles, heretofore optional with the division of motor vehicles, is made mandatory. This provision will prevent the granting of licenses to operate automobiles to persons physically or mentally unfit.

The division is granted authority at any time to cancel all operators' licenses that have been outstanding three years or more and to require renewal subject to examination, in its discretion. Under this provision incompetent and habitual violators of the motor vehicle laws may be "weeded out" in the interest of public safety.

Provision is made for the compilation of a complete record of accidents, involving death or injury, their causes and locations. Under penalty of being guilty of a misdemeanor operators of motor vehicles are required to report accidents of this character to the division of motor vehicles or local police departments within twenty-four hours.

Juries are authorized to recommend punishment for driving while intoxicated. This amendment will result in many more convictions for this offense. Under the present law the court must send all convicted persons to the penitentiary. This has resulted in juries being reluctant to convict, the jurors having in mind the severity of the punishment.

Peace officers are required to report stolen cars to the motor vehicle division after one week and also the fact of recovery. The division is required to check stolen car records before registering or transferring registration of any motor vehicle. This amendment will afford a complete record of stolen cars in the State Division of Motor Vehicles, and facilitates recoveries.

geles City Council and engineering departments, the Automobile Club of Southern California, mayors of cities, chambers of commerce and other organizations interested in solving the perplexing problems brought about by the tremendous increase in traffic.

For years it has been becoming more apparent that all California South is affected by lack of adequate through roads in the congested area of the state's metropolis. Forcing through traffic into bottlenecks and congested areas has been demonstrated as bad business, not only for the city but contiguous territory.

The plan, in brief, calls for the extension of the San Fernando road northerly from the viaduct over the Southern Pacific at Tunnel Station along, and in general parallel to, the Southern Pacific, to a connection with the present road at or near Newhall, and an extension southerly from a point just east of the viaduct at Tunnel Station to a connection with the state highway at the north city limits of San Fernando.

Beginning at a point near where the city aqueduct crosses the San Fernando road, this distributor highway would connect with an extension of the coast state highway through Santa Monica Canyon and possibly Eighth street. From this point it would continue in a generally southeasterly direction, skirting the coast cities through State street, Long Beach, to a connection with the coast state highway near or at Seal Beach. Thence it would extend almost due north to the foothill boulevard east of Pasadena, thence northwesterly and west through the upper section of Altadena to a connection with the state road near La Canada, and from that point along the state road to San Fernando and the San Fernando road at Tunnel Station.

STATE-WIDE TRAFFIC MEET ENDORSES PUBLIC SAFETY PROGRAM.

Activities and accomplishments of the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California in traffic safety and reduction of street and highway accidents have the support and endorsement of organizations and officials throughout the state interested in traffic problems, as the result of the state-wide conference held in Berkeley last month.

The conference adopted a resolution approving the uniform traffic ordinance recommended for California cities by the two motorists' organizations and urged the delegates to work for adoption of this standardized code in their various cities. In further support of this movement of organized motordom to improve traffic conditions, another adopted resolution urged that city attorneys confer with attorneys for the two automobile associations on proposed amendments, that uniformity may be maintained.

Another phase of the movement to provide motorists with the same regulations throughout the state was covered in a resolution adopted, advocating uniformity of interpretation and application of the law. The conference also approved a plan for adult education in traffic safety, and made plans for a general coordination of public safety activities, that the accident toll in California may be reduced.

FEE SYSTEM GETS BLOW.

Hailed as a blow at speed traps, which were legislated out of existence in California four years ago, a recent United States Supreme Court decision has been joyously received by motorists. While not dealing directly with speed traps nor having to do with motoring as such, the decision hits the system whereby justices of lower courts are compensated out of fees paid by defendants in their courts. The court said:

"It certainly violates the Fourteenth Amendment and deprives the defendant in a criminal case of due process of law to subject his liberty or property to the judgment of a court the judge of which has a direct personal, substantial, pecuniary interest in reaching a conclusion against him in his case."

The Busy Season—This is the auto thief's busiest season, congestion creating conditions under which he works most adroitly. Motorists should, therefore, take every precaution to protect their cars.

Their Numbers Increase—During the first three months of this year, motor-vehicle registrations in California were 129,497 in excess of the number for the same period last year.

Going Up—Gas taxes collected by California the first three months of this year reached the record of $4,332,586.62, a gain of $382,564.27 over the corresponding figure a year ago.

AUTOIST'S TOURING "PRIMER" OFFERS TIMELY SUGGESTIONS.

Offering helpful counsel to the motor car owner who plans an automobile tour this summer, the California State Automobile Association has issued a list of suggestions on the motorist's needs concerning route, car and driving which amounts virtually to a "tourist's primer."

After deciding on destination and route, the statement points out, specific knowledge should be secured on road conditions, mileages between points as well as total distance to be traveled, and traffic regulation both state and local, and on the basis of reliable information decisions should be made on probable overnight stopping places. Some of the suggestions follow:

"No tour should be undertaken until the car has been thoroughly inspected. Particular attention should be centered upon its safety features. Brakes adequate for normal driving may prove entirely incapable of performing up to the standard demanded upon the tour. Another feature that frequently escapes attention is the steering mechanism. Travel on the tour will be faster than one's usual pace. There must be no weakness in the car's steering gear. In addition to making steering safe, it should be made as effortless as possible, because driving otherwise may prove excessively and needlessly fatiguing.

"Although it is not generally so regarded, the engine is one of the car's most important safety features. It must be performing at its best to deliver the extra power necessary for long trips at high speed. If one makes certain that carburetion and timing are right, one will have little trouble under ordinary conditions.

"The tires, of course, must be in good condition. Starting out on weak tires may, in some cases, amount to foolhardiness. It is unwise under all conditions to expect old tires to stand up under the gruelling work to which they will be submitted on a touring trip."

The tourist must watch out at all times that he does not become excessively fatigued. It is better to cut the day's journey short than to risk the dangers encountered when one drives in an exhausted condition. Five other points in relation to driving on the tour are summed up as follows:

"Making good time is a matter of driving consistently at a reasonable speed. This rate should be neither so fast as to be dangerous nor so slow as to kill the pleasure of the trip.

"Observe generally the rules of the road and show courtesy to other highway users.

"Be alert and keep a firm grip upon the steering wheel at all times.

"Make careful note of the danger and caution signs put along the highway for your protection. Pay particular heed to the warning to descend steep grades in low or second gear. These are among the most important caution signs.

"Never leave the car on the highway while repairs, such as tire changes, are being made."

THEFT SITUATION IMPROVES.

An improvement in the motor vehicle theft situation on the Pacific Coast is noted. Eight years ago there were 27,000 machines stolen, of which 6,000, or approximately 22.2 percent, never were recovered. In 1926 there were 95,225 cars stolen, and only 10,111, or less than 11 percent, were not recovered.

California Leads—In proportion to population, California has the largest number of motor vehicles of any state in the union—one car to every three persons.

In Excellent Condition—The Mother Lode highway, through California's gold belt, is reported in the best condition in several years.

Not a Mind Reader—Do not stop your car short without giving warning. The motorist behind you may not be a mind reader.

FIVE-FINGER PLAN NECESSARY

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

COMPLETION AT THE EARLIEST POSsible moment of the five finger street plan is necessary to take care of the steadily and heavily increasing vehicular traffic over Cahuenga Pass into Hollywood, George H. Coffin told the altors at a recent meeting of the Hollywood ranch, Los Angeles Realty Board.

This five-finger plan provides for the opening nd widening of Cahuenga, Yucca, Ivar, Argyle, Vilcox and Cole avenues, with the result that all reets leading off Cahuenga or Yucca to the ast or south are opened all the way to Melrose venue, and several of them beyond that point. his project is estimated to cost $3,000,000 and ffects between 1,400 and 1,500 pieces of propty.

"It is impossible to estimate the benefits that ill accrue to the community of Hollywood rom the completion and opening of these traffic arteries," Coffin said. "More than 50,000 utomobiles have been counted on the Cahuenga ass in a single day, and with but two exceptions, this point has the heaviest traffic in the ountry. The Hollywood Chamber of Commerce dvocates a secondary road on the east side of ahuenga boulevard about where the present ar track lies to relieve this congestion, which is ncreasing with the growth of San Fernando alley."

Much credit is due, in the opinion of Coffin, to the pioneers in this street improvement work Edward Winterer, chairman of the street committee of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce in 1922; Dr. E. O. Palmer and his sub-committee who worked for a year trying to get a majority petition for a sensible widening program for Cahuenga and Highland avenues; the thirty citizens who gave bond and agreed to pay any costs the City of Los Angeles might be subjected to should this five-finger plan be defeated by the people, and many others who have given much time and effort in the forwarding of this five-finger plan. Coffin also paid a tribute to Carl Bush, secretary of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, through whose good offices all of these early projects were brought together and developed into the present five-finger project, and who has worked for the furtherance of this street improvement plan since its inception.

It is the purpose and intent of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, under the newly installed administration headed by President Parker V. Foster and Executive Secretary Carl Bush, to concentrate the efforts of the chamber very largely upon street improvements during the new fiscal year.

One of the important street improvement items which the chamber will undertake is the re-laying of the pavement on Santa Monica boulevard from Seward street west to Sherman.

Some years ago, a cement concrete pavement was laid on both sides of the Pacific Electric right-of-way between Seward street and Sherman, a distance of about three miles. City and county engineers now admit that the job was poorly done on a bad survey. It is pointed out that, in a great many sections, the street pavement was laid to form a water-run on the street railway right-of-way, instead of guttering next to the curbs. Erosion by surface water keeps the railway tracks badly cut up and it is now the purpose of the chamber to urge the railway company to raise the tracks wherever needed to a sufficient height to permit a crown in the center of the street; the right-of-way to be permanently paved with some standard material.

Asphaltic concrete will then be employed to bring the sides of the street to a proper contour. Both city and county engineers have promised to co-operate with the chamber in bringing about this much-needed improvement, which it is expected will start as soon as the Wilcox, La Brea and Laurel Canyon storm drain systems are in.

The Retail Merchants' Bureau of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce is laying plans for a new fiscal year of greater activity. Recently an election of the executive committee was held, with R. C. Markley, Oscar Balzer, Vernon Farquhar, E. L. Harter, Paul Rompage, W. W. Walton and M. L. Strayer forming the membership. At a re-organization meeting held immediately after this election, Markley was named chairman and Strayer vice-chairman, with Harrison H. Crawford as secretary and treasurer.

SYMPHONIES UNDER THE STARS.

The Hollywood Bowl Association will open its sixth season of "Symphonies Under the Stars" in the big outdoor auditorium in the Hollywood Hills, July 5. Many new features will be presented at this season's series of summer concerts, including 500 mixed trained voices of the Los Angeles Oratorio.

RAISIN DAY BRINGS OUT SAN JOAQUIN PIONEERS

FRESNO—THIS YEAR, FOR THE FIRST time, Fresno No. 25 and Fresno No. 187 N.D.G.W. had a division, two blocks long, in this city's annual Raisin Day pageant. In making a success of their part in the great spectacle they were assisted by the participation of the N.S.G.W. grand officers and the following Parlors of that Order: Los Angeles County, Stockton No. 7, Yosemite No. 24 of Merced and Selma No. 107. The Bear Flag float of the Los Angeles County delegation won first prize for the best float entered by a fraternal organization.

The division was headed by Grand Marhsal J. Hartley Russell and his aides, Harry Staley and A. D. Stevenot, the flags and banner of the Parlors and the Selma band. Then followed, in order: Decorated cars with the grand officers—Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees John T. Newell and Frank I. Gonzalez, Past Grand Presidents William M. Conley, Herman C. Lichtenberger, William F. Toomey and Fletcher A. Cutler. Decorated car with officers of No. 187 attired in orange smocks and poppy hats. Selma Parlor drum corps directed by Major L. J. Price. Marching units Native Sons uniformed in white and carrying American and State (Bear) Flags in alternating lines. Gilded stagecoach conveying Pioneers; ahead, on horseback, rode 88-year-young Henry F. Akers, a resident of Fresno County for three-quarters of a century. The prize-winning float, a huge Bear Flag made of artificial flowers, standing upon a bed of greenery. Seal of California float, upon which rode Bess Freidman (Fresno No. 187) as Minerva, Fred Pratt (Fresno No. 25) in '49 miner's costume and Roy Jeffrey (Fresno No. 25) in Indian regalia.

Following the parade the personnel of the division were luncheon guests of the local Parlors. The Pioneers who rode in the stagecoach and were special guests were selected through the medium of an old settlers' contest in which first and second prizes were offered to the earliest living residents of the territory now included in the seven southern counties of the great San Joaquin Valley. The first prize, a gold watch, went to Henry F. Akers, a native of Arkansas who came to California by the Southern route in 1852, at the age of 14 years; with him came his brother, Albertus Akers, and Mrs. James Burns, a member of the Lewis family, both of whom still live in Fresno County. The Akers and Lewis families were the pioneers of agriculture in the county, having engaged in stock raising from the beginning, and planted the first grape vines in the county — black mission cuttings which they brought from Los Angeles.

Anastacio Prothero, winner of the second prize, a desk clock, was born at the foot of Mokelumne Hill, December 2, 1852, and was taken to Visalia by his parents when two weeks old. Among the other representatives of notable pioneer families present were: Sebert S. Stevenson, born at Visalia, Tulare County, in 1854. Fred M. Hart, born at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, in 1857. Anna L. Burnett, daughter of Andrew D. Firebaugh, born at Watsonville, Santa Cruz County, in 1861; Firebaugh was a veteran of the Mexican War and a member of the Mariposa battalion which discovered the Yosemite Valley; he was the builder of the Pacheco Pass toll road which formed part of the Overland Stage route, and constructed the ferry across the San Joaquin River near the site of the town which now bears his name. Mrs. Mary Buckley, daughter of Senator John M. Montgomery, Pioneer of 1847, who built the hall of records at Monterey, this state, and laid out the streets of that city with an ox team; she was born in Nevada in 1854 and has lived in Merced County since 1855. William A. Smith, who came to Santa Clara County in 1852 and to Tulare County in 1875. Mrs. Sarah Gift-Brown, who came to Contra Costa County in 1856 and to Millerton, the old county-seat of Fresno County, in 1869. George W. Wood, who came to Tulare County in 1857; he has four brothers and two sisters still living in the valley. Mrs. Nancy A. Qualls, a resident of Stanislaus and Fresno Counties since 1856. Russell H. Fleming, the patriarch of the assemblage, born in Pennsylvania in 1832 and came to San Francisco, via Cape Horn, in 1854; he worked out of Mariposa for many years as a miner, guide, packer and stagedriver, and in 1872, when the railroad reached Fresno, made his home here, became the city's first postmaster and has been a resident of Fresno throughout the entire period of its existence.

President Frank M. Lane of No. 25 and these honored Pioneer guests were introduced by L. A. Winchell, himself a Pioneer of seventy-two years' standing. Past Grand President Cutler presented the prizes, and there were addresses by Past Grand Presidents Conley and Toomey and Grand Trustee Newell. The Raisin Day participation Committee of Fresno No. 25 consisted of C. B. Harkness (chairman), Lucius Powers Jr. (secretary), F. M. Lane, L. N. Barber, Geo. J. Overholt, E. E. Smith, D. L. Tupper, E. E. Burke, W. J. Mitchell, L. A. Winchell, M. R. Vierra. The old settlers' contest was in charge of L. N. Barber, assisted by Powers and Winchell, and E. E. Smith superintended the construction of the float. The committee from Fresno No. 187 consisted of Agnes Merrill (chairman), Dora W. McDonnell, Bess Freidman, Lena Vierra, Avis Burke, Maude Crosby, Mary Ward, Tillie Gibbs, Minnie Weldon.

The Fresno Parlors have determined to exemplify to the people of the San Joaquin Valley the true spirit and purpose of the native Orders by contributing each year, to the full extent of their ability, to the San Joaquin Valley's great public enterprise. The Raisin Day celebration is, year by year, losing its local character and becoming an affair of the whole State of California. This year all the principal cities of the state participated, and the Fresno Parlors feel that they are entiled to an ever-increasing measure of co-operation from the other Parlors of both Orders. It is hoped that next year many Parlors will follow the example of those that cooperated this year, and that the desire to learn the full measure of Fresno hospitality will become universal.—L.N.B.

gether in a co-operative marketing organization, the law requires the remaining 25 percent to come in. In the United States, three-fourths of the farmers merely hold the umbrella for the other fourth, who profit by the higher prices and better conditions obtained but who will not be tied down by any restrictions, however necessary they may be. In Canada this plan is gaining ground; and it is not all impossible that the success of the co-operative movement in California may some day be permanently assured, and relieved of the menace of the selfish, by a similar provision of law.

ROSE MILDEW HARD PROBLEM.

Rose mildew is a hard problem, particularly in climbing roses. In the first place, as a preventive, don't water the roses in the evening. Warm, moist conditions foster mildew. Sulphur dusting or spraying is about the only control. The Dorothy Perkins is a particularly bad variety in regard to mildew, although a high favorite otherwise because of its profusion of blossom. There are varieties, however, that are not subject to mildew, and these are worth investigating.

WATCH THE PULLETS.

Just now the pullets coming along in good shape may be in danger from round worms. Watch for any checking of growth, bedraggled and soiled plumage. If worms are found, use the capsule treatment, with the capsule filled with black leaf 40 and fuller's earth. Put the capsule well down the throat, and then rub it down into the crop. Birds over eight weeks may be safely treated in this manner.

RADICAL BUT NECESSARY.

The long-desired law for the cleaning up of tuberculosis among cattle in California is a reality. Its provisions are somewhat radical, but none too much so. Even milk fed to other animals must now be pasteurized; and no tubercular animal may henceforth be exhibited at a fair. These are but a few of the provisions, but they suffice to show the import and the importance of the others. A long step has been taken in the cleaning up of bovine tuberculosis in California.

Bertha Hitt, Grand Trustee Mae Edwards, Kate McFadyen, Bernice Rankin, Jennie Raymond, Alma Werner, Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts, Charlotte Bennett, Daisy Hansen, Julia Arborn, Fannie McPherson, Gertrude Riepe, Gussie Roddrick. Officers of Lugonia include:

Flores Hutchings Barnum, past president; Lois Aldridge Johnson, president; Nell Brown Wiggett, first vice-president; Laura Leuschen Linfesty, second vice-president; Laura Anderson, third vice-president; Gladys Case Baker, recording secretary; Edith Heap Kelty, financial secretary; Ruby Nish, treasurer; Frances Wixom, marshal; Bess B. Batchelor, Ruby Cleo Clark Jones, Lena F. Boren Weeks, trustees; Clara Barton, inside sentinel; Daisy Falice Davenport, outside sentinel; Olive Jeanette Easton, organist.

The new Parlor presented the grand officers with corsage bouquets. On behalf of Los Angeles No. 124, Jennie Raymond presented Lugonia with the president's flag; on Long Beach No. 154's behalf, Daisy Hansen presented the Holy Bible, and for Rudecinda No. 230 (San Pedro) President Gertrude Riepe presented the ballot-box. Addresses were made by Grand President Pearl Lamb, Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, Grand Trustee Mae L. Edwards, D.D.G.P. "Days of '49" Big Success.

The "Days of '49" celebration at Oroville, Butte County, May 6, 7 and 8, was a grand success. It was sponsored by Gold of Ophir No. 190 and Argonaut No. 8 N.S.G.W., and the directing head and chief inspirationist was Florence Danforth-Boyle of No. 190. The Grizzly Bear for May told of the various features. After the celebration, the "Oroville Register" had this to say, editorially:

"Oroville owes a vote of thanks to the Native Daughters of this city for staging the very successful pioneer celebration. And this thanks goes also to the Native Sons, who so ably assisted in the celebration. Oroville can never afford to forget that it was the stage upon which a great part of the drama of early California history was played, a drama so colorful and so spectacular that it attracted the attention of the whole world then and has kept it since that time.

"There is inspiration in the thought of what the past has accomplished. Therein lies the value of the study of history. There are few stories in history more inspiring than that of the Pioneer Fathers and Mothers who braved the dangers of plain and desert, of isthmus and ocean, that they might reach California.

FLORENCE DANFORTH-BOYLE,
As she appeared in "Days of '49" Celebration.

"The greatest work of the Native Sons and Native Daughters is, keeping alive in the memory of the people of California the great work that the founders of this state did. And no Parlors in California are more diligent in this work than Argonaut number 8 Native Sons of the Golden West and Gold of Ophir number 190 Native Daughters of the Golden West, both of this city. More strength and more power to their good right arms!

"Nor should the fact be forgotten that the celebration was largely a tribute to mining days and to mining industry. There is a tendency now to hold in disrepute the mining industry. And yet, without mining, agriculture, manufacturing and every industry would perish, and mankind would revert back to the most primitive barbarism."

"Bird Seeders" Again Please.

San Jose—Vendome No. 100's glee club (Bird Seed Warblers) broadcast over K.P.O. in San Francisco May 6 for the shut-ins. They went to the big city through the courtesy of W. C. Kady of Observatory No. 177 N.S.G.W. and broke all records of the station in regard to time and telegrams, messages, etc. The time limit was from 8 to 9, but when Grand President Pearl Lamb's message, also that of Judge Charles A. Thompson, now the Grand President of the Native Sons, arrived, the time was extended to 9:45. They put on a wonderful program of musical comedy hits, soothing lullabys and popular ballads. True to their name, they were up with the lark, and the ride to San Francisco was made before the inhabitants were about. Mrs. Clara Gairaud is the club's director and Miss Tillie Brohaska the pianist.

The club wishes to thank everybody for their cheery messages, and states that they will be on the air again soon. The club sang in the hospitals during national music week, recently held in every city in the United States. Mrs. Clara Gairaud directed a program over K.Q.W. May 20 for the American Legion auxiliary.

A big social event of the Parlor was that of the afternoon of May 25, when bridge was played. Mrs. Lotta Koppel was the general chairman. A very large crowd was in attendance, over fifty tables being reserved. A delegation attended the joint meeting of the Alameda County Parlors May 23. Mrs. Charles O. Dean was hostess for the sewing club during May, entertaining in her beautiful home on The Alameda. Mrs. Nonie Lake entertained the past presidents' club. Favorite authors and history was the study. Mrs. Mabel Sontheimer presided. Mrs. Elizabeth Hayes was the fortnightly whist chairman at the last meeting of the Thursday club.

Tenth Anniversary.

San Diego—San Diego No. 208 celebrated its tenth institution anniversary April 26, the committee in charge consisting of Misses Catherine Wood (chairman) and Virginia Jackson, Mms Mae Schaeffer, Florence Karner, Rosina Herzbrun, Sophie Finley-Sharp. Refreshments were served and a splendid entertainment was presented. The unavoidable absence of Charter President Dr. Louise C. Heilbron was regretted.

"The Fascinating Mr. Denby" was given by the senior high-school dramatic class under the direction of Miss Helen LaVauge Hunt, instructor, and violin selections were rendered by Helen Cozens Hill, with Gertrude Farwell at the piano. Two recent brides among the Parlor's membership, Mrs. Margaret Adams-Ullery and Mrs. Sophie Finley-Sharp, were showered with rice and congratulations. President Martha Klindt and Program Chairman Evangeline Kerr are making the meetings interesting.

Busy Aleli.

Salinas Aleli No. 102 entertained in honor of its members' mothers May 12. The hall and banquet room were cleverly decorated in red and green by Edna Martin, Adele Bramers and Lillian Brindero, and an entertaining program was presented by Mrs. Wilbur Larkin, assisted by Mrs. Percy Clark. Under the supervision of Susie Hunter a banquet was served. The reception committee included Mrs. Andrew Tarp, Nellie Sherwood, Rose Rhyner.

May 10 the Parlor's americanization committee—Clara Kalar, Julia Larkin, Rose Rhyner—entertained the americanization class of the night-school with a program, at the close of which a committee consisting of Edna Martin Gertrude Posz, Mrs. Willis Towne served refreshments.

April 28 Aleli featured a costume party at which many clever creations were displayed. A program was presented and refreshments were served. The committee in charge was: Rose Rhyner, Marie McKinnon, Nellie Sherwood, Mrs J. W. Crook.

Mothers Guests.

Grass Valley—Manzanita No. 29 celebrated Mother's Day May 3, having more than fifty mothers as guests. The lodgeroom was beautifully decorated with broom and poppies. President Coombs delivered the welcome address and an attractive program was presented.

A gold and white color scheme was employed in decorating the banquet table, at which a hundred sat down. Toasts were responded to by mothers and members and at a late hour the gathering dispersed after singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Auld Lang Syne." All declared they had had a wonderful time.

Petaluma—Petaluma No. 222 celebrated its fifth institution anniversary with a dinner May 17. A drill team was recently organized under the direction of Mrs. Maurice Dickson. To raise funds with which to purchase uniforms for the Thirty-third Anniversary.

Sutter Creek—The thirty-third installation anniversary of Amapola No. 50 was observed April 22 by the initiation of four candidates, bringing the membership to 102. After the ceremonies all gathered around the festive board decorated in yellow and white, and enjoyed a program of musical numbers. Among the number was a vocal selection composed for the occasion, by Kate Madden and dedicated to Amapola. May 1 the Parlor decorated the graves of its deceased members.

Doing Good Work.

Alturas—At the instigation of a committee from Alturas No. 159 headed by Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster the Modoc County Board of Supervisors has ordered the erection of a fence around the Rachel Dorris Pioneer Park, which the Parlor is beautifying. Gertrude P. French, managing editor of the "Alturas Plaindealer," will guide No. 159 through the July-December term.

At the Modoc County school meet May 6 the prize in the California history oratorical contest—a five-dollar goldpiece coined in California—was presented by the Parlor, through Past Grand President Gloster, to William Gooch of Cedarville grammar-school, whose topic was "The Russians in California." Memorial Day was observed in conjunction with the American Legion. "Grandma" Linville was remembered with a gift on her ninety-first birthday.

The Parlor has appointed a committee to work with the chamber of commerce in giving publicity to Modoc County's places of interest and resources. It is also interesting itself in a project to suitably mark the main auto entrances into the state, so tourists may be impressed with tangible evidence of the Spirit of California.

Fourteen Initiated.

Fairfax—On the occasion of Grand President Pearl Lamb's official visit to Fairfax No. 225 fourteen candidates were initiated and the officers were complimented for the very creditable manner in which the ritual was exemplified.

Speakers of the evening included Mrs. Lamb, Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley, D.D.G.P. Vida Vollers. The Parlor's annual jinx was featured May 24.

Seventeenth Anniversary.

Georgetown—El Dorado No. 186 May 14 celebrated its seventeenth institution anniversary and Mother's Day with a program of music and readings from an old scrapbook. California poppies, snowballs and sweetpeas were used in the beautiful decorations. Following the initiation of a candidate refreshments, including a birthday cake, were served.

Present Tableau.

Vallejo—At an entertainment sponsored by the Vallejo Women's League to raise funds with which to purchase the old Dr. Vallejo home for use as a clubhouse for women's organizations, a tableau, "The Donner Monument," was presented by Mrs. Rosalena Davis of Vallejo No. 195, George Weniger of Vallejo No. 77 N.S.G.W. and Miss Lois Hunter. The Parlors' aid in a worthy cause was greatly appreciated.

April 26, No. 77 entertained No. 195. Among the speakers of the evening were Grand Second Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, President Mrs. N. Dassonville of No. 195, President Leo Mallett of No. 77, Judge J. A. Browne, E. B. Hussey.

Native Sons Remember Grand President.

Napa—Grand President Pearl Lamb paid an official visit to Eschol No. 16 and delivered a most inspiring address on the Order's work. President George Flanagan of Napa No. 62 N.S.G.W. presented her with a set of candlesticks, and to match them Acting President Theresa Hein presented, on Eschol's behalf, a console dish.

Addresses were made by Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler and D.D.G.P. Juliet Bliss. Visitors were present from El Pescadero, Aloha and Vallejo Parlors. Dinner was served prior to the meeting.

Membership Increased.

Etna—Eschscholtzia No. 112 entertained the mothers. Under the supervision of Hazel Zappitini a varied and entertaining program was presented and games were played. Refreshments were served in the banquet room, decorated with a profusion of flowers. The tables were arranged

HISTORIC MARIN COUNTY SITE TO HAVE BIG BUILDING.

San Rafael—Upon a prominent corner of the main street—the site occupied before the coming of the Gringo by an adobe mansion, the home of Don Timateo Murphy, owner of a Spanish grant which comprised the greater portion of what is now the City of San Rafael—there is soon to rise a $100,000 business structure. The old adobe was used as Marin County's court house up to 1872, when the present court house was erected.

A portion of the adobe site was purchased by Oliver Irwin, who built a three-story brick structure in 1876. He, fifty years ago, advocated and predicted the bridging of the Golden Gate to connect San Francisco with Marin County. Irwin was one of the original "boosters" for that project.

LONG BEACH SKYLINE—SIGNAL HILL IN BACKGROUND

LONG BEACH
A CITY BY THE SEA

A. A. Miller
(SECRETARY PUBLICITY BUREAU, LONG BEACH CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

THE STORY HERE PRESENTED IS INtended to bring to you the chronicle of Long Beach as the all-year playground of Southern California, beautifully situated on the blue shore of the Pacific Ocean, with exhilarating climate and a velvety, sandy doorstep upon which the sea forever swirls.

Nowhere else abounds such beguilements to rest and play as in this great modern city, with a population of approximately 145,000. Due to an aggregation of Nature's bounties, of which the scenic charms and climatic conditions head the list, this great city-by-the-sea has had a growth unprecedented in the annals of city building. In consequence, it is rated the wonder of the world in its rapid development and municipal achievements, considering the brief quarter-of-a-century that has elapsed since it was but a diminutive seaside village, where the pleasure lovers and visitors from afar congregated to enjoy surf bathing and the warm waters of the Pacific, beneath the gentle beams of the semi-tropical sun, or participated in the entertainment features along the strand and the amusement zone that has grown into "The Pike," a municipality in itself dotted with amusement devices of every conceivable kind and character.

The speedy upbuilding and phenomenal growth of Long Beach, if accurately told in story, would read like a tale of the "Arabian Nights" and require volumes of space, lacking which it is only within the province of this message to present a prologue, as it were, of the narrative in extenso yet to come, that will properly present, statistically and chronologically, the facts regarding its many attributes.

Long Beach covers an area of over thirty square miles. Its health statistics are unequaled by those of any city of equal size. With a population of approximately 145,000, Long Beach is at once a metropolitan city and one of the best-known beach resorts of Southern California. There are more than 850 hotels and apartments overlooking the ocean, and as many as 100,000 people are entertained frequently over weekends. The wide beach, more than seven miles long, which slopes very gradually, is filled with joys and pleasure play.

Long Beach is a large commercial city with all the qualities of a huge summer resort and is California's most beautiful all-year city. The amusement zone is one of the finest and most complete amusement parks to be found anywhere. Here every kind of resort amusement, beautiful beaches and one of the largest heated swimming pools are located. Wonderful places to dine and dance. You can spend days and days sightseeing and enjoy every minute of the time. Add to all this the comfort of warm days and cool nights — nights sufficiently cool for sleep—surely Long Beach is a mecca for tourists. Always there awaits you that which is Long Beach's most valuable asset—the unfailing courtesy and hospitality of her citizens.

Sports of all kinds can be indulged in, including fishing (deep-sea and surf), boating, yachting, shooting, golf, swimming, etc.; in fact, every sort of outdoor and indoor pastime. Clubs of all classes—study clubs, art clubs, etc.—offer social contact for every taste. The municipal band of fifty pieces, under the leadership of Herbert L. Clark, famous band master, renders two free concerts daily on year-around schedule in an open-air pavilion.

Jutting out into the ocean are two large piers. One of them, the Silver Spray, ranks with the largest amusement piers in the country, abounding in high-class attractions. Palatial dancing pavilions, skating rinks, racing coasters, chutes, fun houses, rides, trained animals, acquarium, games, shows and various sports vie with each other in furnishing thrills and excitement. Fishing, too, may be enjoyed from either of these piers. Deep-sea fishing boats are on daily schedule for the deep-sea fishing beds off shore for the sportsman who is out after the big catch. The grass greens of the municipal links at Recreation Park are among the finest in the country. The fee is $1 per day or $5 per month.

Long Beach has fourteen public parks, comprising 500 acres, providing every form of outdoor recreation and sport. Within the city limits there are more than seven miles of smooth water in Alamitos Bay and Recreation Park channels and lagoons. Here, sailing, motorboating, acquaplaning, canoeing and still-water bathing are year-round attractions.

People who come here from the four corners of the earth can find nowhere a better place in which to rear their children, in which to enjoy all of the good things that God and man can provide for their health, comfort and happiness.

There are upwards of sixty-five churches in the city, of every denomination and creed, so that all classes of worshipers can find a ready welcome. We also boast of the largest Bible class in the world, and every Sunday morning a bright brotherly service is conducted in the Municipal Auditorium by the Taubman Bible Class, and every man and woman finds a warm welcome at these gatherings.

Our schools are one of the greatest features of the city. The greatest care is exercised by the authorities to secure the best possible masters and instructors, so that the children may be put through a proper course of both mental and physical training.

To the manufacturer, we offer the best prospects and facilities of any city in California. Situated on a natural harbor, it gives ready transport facilities by water to all parts of the Orient, and also (via Panama) to the Atlantic ports, and Europe and Africa. By rail, to all parts of the United States, Canada, Mexico and South America. Large freight boats are continually leaving the harbor for all parts of the world, thus giving the manufacturer easy foreign transport for his goods. Tracts of land are available for almost any class of industry. The huge oil fields in the immediate vicinity make both fuel and power cheap.

To the merchant, no other city can offer him more scope for salesmanship than Long Beach. With a steadily growing population of 55,000 in 1920 to 145,000 in 1927, it gives a fine scope to all classes of business, whether wholesale or retail. One only has to walk a few blocks and see the fine modern buildings and stores to be at once convinced that Long Beach as a business city is well in the running with the largest cities of the Pacific Coast. Huge department stores offering all the latest styles and fashions from Paris, London and New York, with their windows a kaleidoscope of taste and color, attract all classes of purchasers and sightseers from the surrounding district.

To the resident, Long Beach offers everything the heart can desire. Continual sunshine and even temperature throughout the year; it is never too hot, never too cold, but always a beautiful all-year climate. Flowers always in bloom, giving a spring cheer on every day of the year. The intending resident can either purchase or rent a house or apartment to suit his style or purse, and even a very modest purse can rent easily and well.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS HAVE ANNUAL REUNION FOR MOTHERS.

One of the most successful affairs ever given by Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. was the '49er dinner of May 11 under the drill-team's auspices. Among the big crowd in attendance were 132 visitors from San Pedro, many of them guests of the Native Sons of that city during the Grand Parlor there. The tables were set with red-checked tablecloths and wooden candlesticks, and the menu was served in '49 style. The reception room was decorated to represent a barn yard, and an appropriate program included a fashion show of days-of-old costumes.

Lillian Lasater, captain of the drill-team, was general chairman, Vivian Arborn-Burke had charge of the program, and Mrs. C. L. Young and Mrs. Julia Arborn were, respectively, the decorating and the supper chairmen. Bessie Brady conducted an old-time fish pond, and Nellie Whiting and Lena Hansen had charge of a candy booth. The reception committee included: D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, Daisy Hansen, Kate McFadyen, Bessie Brady, Mabel Emery.

Following the annual custom, Long Beach Parlor gave a dinner May 19 at the home of Mrs. Freda Oltman, which was decorated in poppies and baskets of sweetpeas and gladiolas. Mrs. Kate McFadyen assisted Mrs. Oltman as hostess. President Fannie McPherson, assisted by Mary Brittain, Nora Martin, Geneva Johnson and Clara Fay, served a delicious chicken dinner. The afternoon was passed in telling of early-day experiences in California.

Honor guests present included: Alpha Harper, Josephine Burns, Wilhelmina Curtis, Mary J. Field, May Young, Mrs. Vose, Genevieve West, Henrietta Coates, Adelina Pearce, Clara Porter, Mrs. O. W. Healey, Edna Burgen. Others in attendance were: Mms. Bertha Hitt, Lela Arborn, Nellie Whiting, Lucretia Coates, Mabel Thompson, Ernest Dolly, Julia Arborn, Winifred Young, Matilda Simmons, Kittie Dillon; Misses Maude Klasgye and Mary Young. The Native Daughters broadcast a program over K.G.E.R. May 19 in charge of Maude Klasgye.

A JOLLY GOOD TIME HAD BY SANTA ANA NATIVES.

Santa Ana (Orange County)—As a return compliment to Santa Ana Parlor No. 236 N.S.G.W., Santa Ana Parlor No. 235 N.D.G.W. entertained the Sons at a very enjoyable pot-luck dinner and card party April 27 which was well attended by a large number of members of both Parlors and their families. Two large tables, beautifully decorated in purple and gold blossoms, fairly groaned with the delectable home cooking to which every one did full justice. The Sons had entertained the Daughters April 20 at a dance and card party, a very enjoyable affair, the event being a housewarming, as it were, as they had just taken possession of the new Getty's Hall, which is occupied, jointly, by both Parlors.

A Spanish dinner is scheduled, in the near future, by No. 235, the affair being in the hands of a very able chairman, Mrs. Lucanna McFadden, assisted by Mrs. Nellie Cline, both of Placentia. The funds derived will go to help finish the quota of the San Juan Capistrano Mission baptistry fund. The Parlor has under way a drive for new members and plans a big initiation at the first meeting in July. A prize will be given the one bringing in the most candidates.

Members of Santa Ana Parlor of Native Daughters organized a thimble club January 6 under the leadership of the president, Mrs. Mamie Schonberg, the object being to sew for the homeless children. Officers elected for the club are: Mrs. Mae West, president; Mrs. Mary Moore, vice-president; Mrs. Fannie Stanley, secretary; Ana Young, treasurer.

LONG BEACH :: The Forward-Looking City

Regular monthly meetings are held and a goodly number of articles have been finished from donated material and turned over to Genevieve Hiskey, chairman of the committee in charge. At the last meeting twenty-two kitchen holders were cut and finished. They will be sold at a bazaar which the Parlor plans to hold during the fall holiday season.

Meetings of the club are held the first Tuesday of each month. At the one of June 7, at the home of Mrs. Genevieve Hiskey, a pot-luck dinner was served at noon and a quilt was quilted. This was also the occasion of a surprise shower for a member of the Parlor. At each meeting of the club a free-will monetary offering is received, and now the treasury has a neat little sum.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR)

A HOT WAVE DESCENDED UPON California June 8, 1877, and the 11th a maximum temperature prevailed. It was 99 degrees in San Francisco, the hottest day since the "days of '49"; two women were overcome by the heat and fell unconscious while shopping on Kearney street. In the Sacramento Valley, it was from 106 to 112 degrees, and in Southern California 116 degrees was registered. Strange to say, Yuma, Arizona State, was cooler than Los Angeles. Wm. Vaughn, a laborer in Vallejo, Solano County, died from sunstroke.

Showers fell in the northern part of the state June 27 and 28.

A Russian fleet of three vessels sailed from San Francisco for Siberia as a French frigate with 450 men came through the Golden Gate June 1.

June was a month of political excitement, with primary elections, conventions and the Pinney imbroglio. Both political parties were preparing tickets for the September election of members of the State Legislature and county offices. These held, at this time, two-year terms, so that one campaign was no sooner ended than another began.

George M. Pinney spent the month in jail in San Francisco, as he was unable to furnish bail on the embezzlement charges made against him. He kept up a continual bombardment, with newspaper articles, against his former political associates. It developed he owed one bank $225,000 and also had other liabilities.

Criminal libel suits were brought by Congressman H. F. Page in El Dorado County against DeYoung Brothers, publishers of the "San Francisco Chronicle," for publishing Pinney's statements. Senator Sargent sued Frank Pixley and his paper, "The Argonaut," for $25,000 for libelling him, and the DeYoungs for $25,000. Frank X. Cicotte, coiner of the U. S. Mint, filed a suit for $25,000 damages against the "Chronicle" for publishing an article stating he was a defaulter when employed as a bookkeeper by a local firm. Laura Whitmore, an employee of the U. S. Mint, also sued the "Chronicle" for $25,000 damages because of a statement it made concerning her.

Pinney made charges of misconduct by Gen. O. H. LaGrange, superintendent of the U. S. Mint, that caused the Federal Government to order an investigation. Pinney found unexpected aid in the irrepressible Frank Pixley, who claimed he represented The People, but whether collectively or individually he did not state.

"DANCE OF DEATH" A SENSATION.

A strike of longshoremen in San Francisco began June 5. They had been paid $3 for ten hours' labor and 50 cents an hour for less than six hours. Employers decided to pay but 30 cents an hour for less than a day. The strikers pelted stones at the men who took their places and the police had to protect the latter.

The San Pablo Rancho case, which cost $4,000 for its shorthand reporting, had occupied 112 days in its hearing and was taken under advisement by Judge Dwinelle for two years, was given a decision. It involved property valued at $3,000,000.

Colonel Boulder commenced suit to obtain possession of Mare Island. He claimed the Federal Government was in illegal possession and that he held the only valid title. Four prominent attorneys were prosecuting his claim.

The State Supreme Court decided the Spring Valley Co. suit against San Francisco by ruling the company could collect rates for water furnished prisons, hospitals, etc., but must supply water for fires, flushing sewers, sprinkling streets and parks. The decision was unsatisfactory to both litigants.

Wm. Herman published a book, "Dance of Death," which created a sensation. In it he attacked the prevailing round dances, such as the waltz and the polka, and predicted moral ruin to the rising generation participating in them. The grandfathers and grandmothers of today will now smile, for dancing still goes on and the fiddler gets his pay.

The Sespe Oil district in Ventura County had an area of thirty-two miles, with Cienuga as its center. It was sixty miles from Los Angeles and twenty-three miles from a railroad, and could only be reached upon horseback. There had been 110 locations made, covering about 3,000 acres. Oil was oozing from many springs in the canyons abounding in the region, and it was estimated 200 barrels of oil a day was oozing to waste from them. All that was now needed to develop this district was capital, but so little interest was taken there were not sufficient funds available to build a wagon road into it. Above the oil springs the streams abounded with trout, while quail and deer were plentiful in the woods.

In the San Fernando, Los Angeles County, oil district there were five producing wells, with an aggregate yield of fifty-five barrels per day. The deepest well was 430 feet. Two of the wells were flowing. Three boring rigs had been brought from Pennsylvania and a refining plant of 120 barrels a day capacity was being built.

The Southern California Horticultural Society was incorporated for the purpose of holding agricultural, horticultural and pomological exhibitions and to promote kindred industries. It elected J. De Barth Shorb president and adopted twenty-four by-laws regulating its affairs.

TUOLUMNEITES IN REUNION.

Rev. H. H. Messenger of Orange, Orange County, informed the society that he was successfully growing bananas. Banana bulbs from Central America and the South Sea Islands were killed by cold weather, but the Florida bananas, planted two years before, were now fifteen feet high and bananas were ripening each month of the year. Upon an acre 680 plants were grown and would produce $1,000 worth of fruit per annum.

J. Anderson of Orange was experimenting with sumac, used in tanning skins and in the making of "Morrocco" leather. It was grown successfully on the dry mesa and the bloom produced good bee food.

An apiarist reported that, owing to the drought and grass fires, martins were feeding upon bees, to the great decimation of the latter.

A practical rancher reported that the castor oil bean plant was a sure killer of grasshoppers and gophers. From the leaves thrown into the path of a swarm of grasshoppers 480 were killed in two minutes from nibbling at them. Gophers once nibbling a root never returned to get another.

It was estimated that the cost of producing an acre of grain was $9.65. At $2.20 a cental, the now-prevailing price of wheat, the profit, with an average of twelve centals, was $16.75 an acre. Therefore, farmers who had an average crop were figured to be in good financial shape.

Ground squirrels, as a grain field pest, were again attracting the attention of the farmers of Contra Costa and Alameda Counties. An organized effort to be rid of them was in formation. One squirrel in a grain field, on its way to its underground granary, was found to have 678 kernels in the pouches of its mouth.

A grand reunion of Tuolumne County old-timers now living in the San Francisco Bay region was held at Badger's Park June 16. A steamboat from Stockton brought 600 excursionists from that county. C. B. Rutherford was president of the day, Rev. L. Hamilton delivered the oration and Miss Eliza A. Pittenger was the poetess.

Two Tuolumne old-timers met at the reunion, after a decade of separation. One was suffering from a bad toothache. After commiserating with him, the other said he knew a certain remedy. "Once," said he, "when I was mining on the Tuolumne, I had a dreadful toothache and a barkeeper gave me a remedy. I took a glassful of whisky in my mouth, held it in there for half an hour, then when the pain vanished I spit it out." "You spit it out? You're a liar!" said the other.

BIG GOLD FINDS.

Eugene Campbell, a sheepman from Stanislaus County, met and wooed a fair damsel in San Francisco after a short acquaintance. After the marriage ceremony an arduous celebration with liquor galore was had, during which, on account of the racket, they were "fired out" of their apartment. They were found wandering about by a policeman, who escorted the bridal couple to the city jail, where they spent the rest of the night in separate cells. As an added expense to their honeymoon, each paid a $5 fine in court the next morning.

Three Sacramento nimrods went dove hunting a few miles from Sacramento and bagged 780 birds in their day's shooting.

In the county court of Los Angeles a personal encounter occurred June 19 between Colonel E. J. C. Kewen and Judge Thompson, leaders of the bar. Fistfights between them and their sons, Perry Kewen and Young Thompson, enlivened the proceedings emphatically. Colonel Kewen was fined $100 for being the aggressor.

A quartz boulder found in the Breece claim at Bath, Placer County, weighed about 800 pounds, of which one-quarter was gold. It was valued at $40,000.

It was reported at Iowa Hill, Placer County, that a Chinaman had washed out a boulder that was streaked with gold and was as big and heavy as he could carry.

The Bald Mountain claim, drifting at Forest City, Sierra County, unearthed a twenty-seven-pound nugget, valued at $6,000.

In the North Fork quartz mine near Downieville, Sierra County, a ledge was struck that was almost pure gold, so little quartz was attached to the nuggets and stringers. Thousands of dollars a day were being extracted.

A bricklayer in San Francisco was eating his lunch, part of which was a duck egg. Breaking it, he found within the shell a $5 gold-piece. The egg was a sound one and the coin could not Plymouth, Amador County, was burned June 12, with a $50,000 loss.

Williams, Colusa County, went the same way June 13, its business section being destroyed with a $60,000 loss.

The Sonora hotel at Sonora, Tuolumne County, was burned June 17, with a $15,000 loss.

A fire burned over the Norris Grant east of Sacramento City for several days and destroyed feed upon over 5,000 acres.

The publicschool building at Bakersfield, Kern County, was burned June 16, with a $10,000 loss.

FIRES OF DISASTROUS FREQUENCY.

A fire June 5 near Nicolaus, Sutter County, destroyed a grain stack containing 20,000 bushels of grain. It was incendiary and believed set because the owner employed Chinamen.

Vacaville, Solano County, was burned June 4, and that growing town had a $60,000 loss.

Commencement exercises of the University of California were held June 6 at Berkeley, Alameda County. Theodore Gray delivered the salutatory and Edward Booth the valedictory. There were twenty-six graduates.

Grain field and grass fires were of disastrous frequency. In Vaca Valley June 6 Wm. Butcher lost 250 acres and Mrs. Wilsey 50 acres of standing wheat valued at $15,000. In Solano County Ed. McCarthy had his grainfield of 250 acres burn; it was valued at $10 an acre. Wm. Hill had his outhouses and grain field burn near Chico, Butte County, June 9, with a $6,000 loss. The rancho of Don Jose Bochino, near Lompoc, Santa Barbara County, was burned over June 10, destroying 4,600 acres of feed, 300 cattle and several hundred sheep. J. H. Beaumont, a graingrower near Vina, lost his grain field of 100 acres June 16 by fire set by careless campers. A big grain field fire June 22 between Biggs and Nelson destroyed eleven stacks of harvested grain, causing a heavy loss.

A man named Usher reported June 11 seeing the eruption of a small volcano near Flowing Wells, San Diego County. Smoke was emitted and hot rocks were thrown out by it. Some people denied, while others confirmed the report.

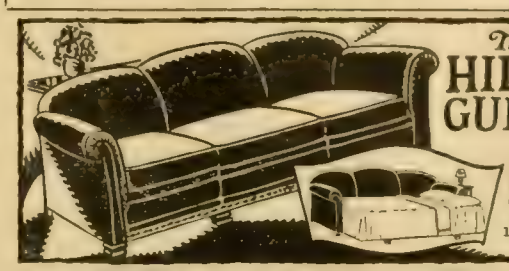
What was called the Indiana colony in Los Angeles County was reported prospering to a remarkable degree. It had purchased a 4,000-acre tract and settled upon its subdivisions 100 families from Indiana State.

Juan Ontivero received a patent to the Rancho San Juan Canon de Santa Ana in Los Angeles County June 4. It contained 315,023 acres.

One of the first consignments of oranges to reach New York from Southern California was passed on favorably by a New York publication, which declared the oranges were equal in quality and flavor to the best imported from Europe, Africa and Florida.

J. C. Flood, the mining magnate, announced a defi to Colonel Charles Crocker that he owned the fastest trotting double team in the world, and to prove it had his team trot over Hayward's private park track in San Mateo County June 30. The team made the mile in 2:25¾, which made a world record. Several hundred invited guests witnessed the trot and "champagned" the successful result.

"SHABBY GENTEELS" NUMEROUS.



In the mining stock industry, San Francisco and Virginia City were as closely linked as the Siamese twins. While Virginia City produced from the Comstock mines the gold and silver for the dividends paid, of which about 90 percent went to San Francisco shareholders, the forty or more non-dividend-paying mines depended on collection of assessments levied to keep operating, and 90 percent of that money was paid by the San Francisco optimists. The funds, so collected, kept several thousand miners and others employed. Now that dividends began to fade, so did the collecting of assessments. To such an extent had this condition gone that many of the non-dividend-paying mines had to close down and many men were thus made idle in Virginia City. As most of them had lost their surplus capital in the stock debacle the soup-houses had a bigger patronage than the restaurants.

San Francisco also began to feel the effects of the financial stringency. It was most emphatically felt by the men and women who had been living well as parasites; who neither spun nor saved while times were good and they could now find no remunerative occupation for their wits. "Shabby genteels" became numerous. It was evident upon California street that many investors had reached the conclusion that Mark Twain was right when he gave this definition of a mine: "A mine is a hole in the ground owned by a

NATURAL LIFE PRESERVATION INTERESTS NATIVE SONS.

Saint Helena (Napa County)—At the May 9 meeting of Saint Helena Parlor No. 53 N.S.G.W. the following resolution, concerning the protection of natural life of the Napa Valley, was adopted:

Whereas, The natural life of the State of California is one of the assets of the state; whereas, the natural flowers, trees, fish, birds and animals are a source of great pleasure to all; whereas, the existence of this natural life is due to the protection afforded by the laws of the state and the consideration shown by individuals; whereas, it is evident that many persons, having no regard for the laws of the state or the future of the various species, are bringing many of our natural plants and animals to the danger of extinction; whereas, the enforcement of these laws depends mainly upon the moral character, consideration and law-abiding qualities of all; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West, Saint Helena No. 53, lend its support, as a Parlor and each member as an individual, to aid the authorities in preserving natural life and do all in our power to encourage the aid of other persons, by precept and example, to proetct and conserve natural life in the following ways:

(1) That we will enjoy the beauty of the wild flowers and shrubs in their native haunts, and gather them only when good reason permits so to do.

(2) That we will encourage the use of California's native trees and shrubs for decorative purposes in our yards and parks.

(3) That we will individually respect and obey the laws concerning fish, game and plants of the state.

(4) That in the observance of these laws we will govern ourselves by the ethics of a true sportsman.

SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS WOULD ELIMINATE GREATEST ENEMY—FIRE.

California has millions of luxuriant acres of trees in its eighteen national forests and the major portion of the area is reached by good motoring highways. Motorists have a recreational empire in this state that should be given every possible protection.

Motoring sportsmen lose heavily whenever fire destroys a forest growth. Forest fires sweep across the nesting grounds of quail and other game birds, destroying eggs and young. Fire destroys the forage upon which big game animals live. When fires occur late in the fall, big game animals, especially deer, suffer during the following winter and often die of starvation. Stream fishing is spoiled by fire, for good fishing depends upon clear waters, and when the forest is destroyed by fire, the resulting erosion pollutes the streams and lakes and ends good sport. For their own sake, sportsmen should exercise the utmost care with camp fires, smokes and firearms when in the woods.

Not only is fire the greatest single enemy of the forests, but it is a startling fact that 90 percent of the forest fires are man-caused. The annual damage caused by forest fire runs up to $20,000,000, exclusive of damage to young growth, watersheds, recreational facilities and other damage, the monetary value of which cannot be estimated. The average area swept by fires each year stands at 15,000,000 acres, of which 11,800,000 acres is forest land.

If only a few simple precautions were taken by all forest visitors, forest fire damage would be practically eliminated.

Exports Increase—Merchandise exports from California last year had a total value of $287,601,684—$38,365,965 greater than the value of the preceding year's exports, $248,235,719.

Auto Industry First—On the basis of the wholesale value of production, the automobile industry ranks first among the nation's industries.

ar." Business became unusually dull, stocks ere unsalable with prices hardly quotable, and rokers were idle. The Nevada stock exchange spended sessions and its forty-five brokers ent upon the street to do what business they uld find. Despondency and doubt ruled the our. Hard times were frequently predicted. rank Pixley, in his "Argonaut," predicted min- g stock certificates would soon be of as much alue as a moonbeam reflected by a pond of ater.

A San Francisco inventor received a patent or a fireproof purse. This caused a newspaper an to query: "Where in hell will he sell it?"

The Hercules Powder Works located near olden Gate Park, San Francisco, blew up at oon June 8. Fortunately, the 25 employees ere dining some distance away and none were jured. The buildings were demolished, and here was a $25,000 loss.

George Perrie killed Wm. Hickok in San Ber- ardino June 1. Hickok had married Perrie's ivorced wife and came with her from Alvarado, lameda County, to get the four children that he court had awarded to Perrie. In the melee hat ensued the shooting occurred.

FRENCHMAN GOES WRONG.

A young man named Lockwood set fire to a ile of rubbish in his yard in Los Angeles. The noke and soot from it soiled the wash upon a ne of the Chinese laundry adjoining. The hinaman vigorously remonstrated and this re- ulted in a pistol battle in which Lockwood re- eived a shot in a leg and the Chinaman was be- eved to be fatally hit in the head.

A sheepherder known as Joe appeared at the anch of a sheepman named Eracs, near Stayton- ille and reported finding sixty head of stray heep in the hills belonging to Eracs, who was bsent. Mrs. Eracs sent her son and sister to et the stray sheep. While they were gone Joe ent crazy. He shot and killed Mrs. Eracs and er ten-year-old boy and fatally stabbed her lit- e four-year-old girl. He made his escape into he hills and at last accounts was being pursued y a posse.

F. Tomilt, a councilman in Los Angeles and a eader in the French colony and the publisher f a French newspaper there, created a sensation y being arrested for forging the name of Ar- aud Dalgaircanda, a fellow countryman and lose friend, to an $800 check. While the court xamination was being held Tomilt paid back he money. He then purchased a pistol and, oing to his sanctum, fired a bullet into his skull hat made a dangerous wound.

At Dutch Flat, Placer County, June 3 a blast f 270 kegs of powder was exploded in the Polar tar mine. Shortly afterward two miners, Cur- an and Tuckis, walked into a cut and were ov- rcome by the fumes. Tuckis expired and Cur- an was found unconscious.

Frank Wheeler, 16 years old, whose mother ied in Nevada in May and who, with four other hildren, was brought to Sacramento to be taken are of by their grandmother, went in bathing n the river June 19 and was drowned. The randmother died the next day and there was a ouble funeral.

George Tackett, 18 years old, shot and killed California lion, near Healdsburg, Sonoma ounty, July 19 that measured eight feet four nches from tip to tip.

An inebriated individual was amusing him- elf at the corner of Third and I streets, Sacra- ento City, by grabbing each passing Chinaman y his queue and giving it a yank that almost urned the wearer over in a back somersault. Finally he grabbed a Chinawoman and whizzed er around like a top. She trotted off and houted: "You look see!" In a few minutes he returned in the company of a stalwart China- an who, grasping the humorous Whiteman by is collar and the seat of his trousers, tossed im into the nearby slough and then left him to cramble out as best he could.

Schools Well Cared For—During the 1925-26 school-year, 31 percent of all tax monies collected by California's fifty-eight counties went to the support of the 3,300 elementary and the more than 400 high schools of the state, according to an announcement of the State Department of Education.

Heavy Contributors—During 1926 approximately a half-billion dollars was paid by auto owners in special taxes collected by states.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

THE PORT OF SAN FRANCISCO

Henry F. Grady

(MANAGER, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC TRADE DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

WE IN THE BAY DISTRICT OF SAN Francisco realize that we have a great port, but most of us probably are unaware of its exact ranking among the ports of the United States. San Francisco, according to official figures of the United States army engineers, is the second largest port in the United States. During the calendar year 1926, approximately thirty-nine million tons of a great variety of commodities were handled over the docks around this huge bay. This tonnage was greater than the combined tonnage of Los Angeles, Seattle and Portland for the same period.

In assembling data on the business of the ports of the United States, the government takes into consideration whole port areas. For example, figures for New York Harbor, which of course is the largest in the United States from the standpoint of commerce passing through the port, includes those from the whole metropolitan area along the Hudson and East Rivers, and not those for New York City alone. Likewise, the whole Bay of San Francisco is regarded as one great economic unit, and the tonnage of the whole bay is included in official figures.

The thirty-nine million tons of cargo which made up the commerce of this port for 1926, therefore, consisted of foreign, intercoastal, coastwise and inland waterways tonnage. The inland waterways tonnage, or that cargo which is carried down the Sacramento and the San Joaquin Rivers into the docks at San Francisco, amounts yearly to ten million tons. Coastwise shipping, however, is the largest item. In 1926 it amounted to twenty-one million tons, or more than half the total tonnage. Intercoastal, or commerce through the Panama Canal, was approximately 2,400,000 tons and foreign almost 4,000,000 tons.

The yearly total of all commerce had a value of not far from two and one-half billion dollars. The handling of merchandise valued at this stupendous figure is basic to the economic life of San Francisco and the whole bay district.

San Francisco is in the unique position of having one of the largest natural harbors in the world, situated at a central point on the western coast of the United States, with two great rivers draining some of the richest agricultural land in the country flowing into its bay. No other port on the Pacific Coast has all of these unusual natural advantages.

It is not strange, therefore, that we find the volume of tonnage through San Francisco Bay increasing with a rapidity measured by the remarkable growth of California as a whole. The greater part of California, namely, that area north of the Tehachepi Mountains, is naturally contiguous to the Port of San Francisco, and this port will continue to grow at the same rapid rate as the state is now developing.

Considering one particular item alone, namely, foreign trade, we see that an incredible increase has taken place in the last few years. Whereas in the immediate pre-war period the value of the total foreign trade of San Francisco was less than one hundred million dollars, in 1926 it was approximately four hundred million dollars. In other words, there has been an increase of 400 percent in a twelve-year period. Increases in the other items have been correspondingly rapid.

The great foreign commerce of San Francisco is with practically every country on the globe, and we have approximately eighty steamship services carrying goods back and forth to all parts of the great trade area of San Francisco. Our largest exports are to the United Kingdom, which in 1926 purchased $38,000,000 worth of our goods. Japan was second, with purchases aggregating $28,000,000. Then came China, with $27,000,000, Australia was fourth, then New Zealand, and, finally, the Philippines. Japan sold us a greater value of goods than any other foreign country, because of large imports of silk. China was second, the Philippines third, Colombia fourth, India fifth, Brazil sixth and British Malaya seventh.

Silk was the largest item in our import trade, coffee was second, copra third, sugar fourth, cocoanut oil fifth and newsprint paper sixth. Among our exports, the mineral oils were first, gasoline being the largest in this group. Dried fruits were second, canned fruits third, unmanufactured cotton fourth, barley fifth, cigarettes sixth and canned milk seventh.

The silk that is imported passes through the port to the great consuming centers of the East, so that coffee is our largest real import, and amounted in 1926 to almost thirty-two million dollars. Copra is consumed in industries around the bay, where it is crushed into oil. The burlap, which comes from India, is used in the bag-making industry. This commodity is in demand because of its use in sacking grain, beans and other agricultural products.

It will be noted that our canned and dried fruits, taken together, are second only to mineral oils in the export list. The exports of these products, aggregating thirty-five million dollars, represent a large percentage of our production of fruits, and so the sale of these commodities abroad has a very direct bearing on the prosperity of the whole state. This is likewise true of cotton and barley.

Our export trade is therefore not a matter which affects only the prosperity of the bay region, but also the well-being and agricultural prosperity of the whole State of California. Our foreign trade, consequently, both imports and exports, is of tremendously vital importance to the economic life not only of our principal cities, but also of the agricultural districts throughout the state. We should endeavor in every way possible to foster and develop this foreign trade, because without it we would find a great curtailment of agricultural activity and also of those manufacturing industries which depend for their existence on imported raw materials.

WANT 1928 N.D. GRAND PARLOR.

April 22 representatives of the twenty-nine Native Daughter Parlors in San Francisco met to ascertain the sentiment regarding Portola Parlor No. 172's proposal to have the 1928 Grand Parlor meeting of the Order in San Francisco. Portola is particularly interested because one of its members, Mae Himes-Noonan, will in all probability be elected Grand President at Modesto in June and wants the Grand Parlor over which she will preside to be held in her home-city.

It was the unanimous opinion of the eighty-one representatives in attendance that the 1928 Grand Parlor should be held in San Francisco, and Agnes M. Curry, chairman of Portola's committee, was authorized to extend the invitation at this year's session.

O'Donnell, senior past president; Mrs. Jennie Greene, secretary for thirty-five years; Mms. Gertrude Bury, Nellie Rader, Ella Wehe-Wilson, Josie Parker. The main feature of the program was a playlet, "A Bachelor's Reverie."

The Parlor's annual memorial service for departed members was held May 19, Past Grand President Baker giving a memorial reading. The following week the monthly whist, directed by Gertrude Bury, succeeded the business meeting. Buena Vista has been actively affiliated with the large Native Daughter projects, such as the redwood memorial grove, the Grove of Memory and the proposed new Native Daughters' home.

MONTHLY SOCIAL DANCES.

Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. and Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W. feature enjoyable social dances the third Wednesday of each month at Redmen's Hall, 3053 Sixteenth street.

Lester Costello of Olympus is the proud daddy of a bouncing native daughter. D. I. Kenny, an old-time member of the Parlor, died recently.

ENJOYABLE PARTY.

Las Lomas Parlor No. 72 N.D.G.W. social club had a very enjoyable party April 26, the Misses Eda, Freda and Minnie Kugel being hostesses. Those in attendance were gowned as children. Games were indulged in, Katherine Whelan receiving the prize for the best-sustained character. A sumptuous supper was served, the table decorations being pink and white.

GRAND PRESIDENT N.D. VISITS.

La Estrella Parlor No. 89 and Bret Harte Parlor No. 232 N.D.G.W. had an official visit from Grand President Pearl Lamb May 9. Visitors included representatives from twelve Parlors and the following grand officers: Grand Trustees Sallie R. Thaler and Anna C. Thuesen, D.D.G.P. Alice Lane, Past Grand Presidents May C. Boldemann and Mary E. Bell. All were very much impressed with the inspiring talk of the Grand President.

A delightful repast helped to make the occasion one long to be remembered. The banquet tables were beautifully decorated with seasonal flowers and favors. As mementoes of the occasion gifts were presented Grand President Lamb, D.D.G.P. Lane and Past Grand President Boldemann.

May 9 Las Estrella's members and friends were entertained by Miss Clair Harrington and pupils with a delightful musical program. The Parlor's thirty-first institution anniversary was celebrated with a banquet and cards May 16. D.D.G.P.s Alice Lane and Helen Mann were guests of honor.

ANNUAL DANCE.

Members of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. are busy making plans for the annual dance, June 3. Past President Kathryn Gillies is chairwoman of the arrangements committee. The Parlor has purchased a tree for the redwood memorial grove.

MOTHERS ENTERTAINED.

The officers and members of James Lick Parlor No. 220 N.D.G.W. entertained the mothers of members May 18 with a reception, followed by a sumptuous repast.

The hall was elaborately decorated with greens, and the American and State (Bear) Flags were entwined in the foliage. The affair was in charge of Recording Secretary Etienne Schier and Vice-president Gertrude Carrillo. Baskets decorated in pink and green, filled with candies, and a novelty wax candle were the favors. During the repast an enjoyable musical program was rendered, with Organist Mary Guerrero Flood presiding. Many out-of-town guests were present at this affair, which is an annual event with the Parlor.

STORING EGGS.

Spring eggs are the best for storing, and it is at this season that the price is likely to make the operation of putting them down most economical. Eggs stored in waterglass or limewater will be preserved so as to be palatable, and when the high prices come with scant production the saving will be considerable. A three-gallon jar and six quarts of preserving liquid should be used for every ten dozen eggs.

THE FATHER OF CHICO

Anna K. Bidwell Parlor No. 168 N.D.G.W. of Chico, Butte County, recently conducted an essay contest on early Chico history. The winning essay submitted by Miss Alice Cummings, a Chico high school student, at the Parlor's request, presented. The accompanying verse, "To Hooker Oak," is by Mrs. Frances Studer, a member of the Parlor.—Editor.

CALIFORNIA THROUGH THE AGES—Spanish rule, padres, Mexican rule, fiestas, flash of white teeth, mantillas, war, American rule, gold—Eureka! California, a challenge to red-blooded men, stretching out her golden fingers in mute yet eloquent appeal—such was she in the days of '49, the roaring forties. Onward, ever onward, come the wagon trains, driven by one master, Greed, taking all, giving nothing. Onward in the face of starvation; onward in the face of every danger—Indians, mountains, and desert—ever onward. Where? El Dorado is calling; Greed is master; onward, ever onward, to the goden promise, California!

California—fields of oats and wheat, cattle, fruit trees, farmers, orchardists—of such is she now. Gone is the gold rush, so disastrous to many, so rejuventaing to a few. James Marshall is dead; the sluices are dry; the cradle and the rocker are forever idle; the gold rush is over forever. Eureka! California has found herself.

We may well rejoice that gold was not always the reason for which many came to California. Back in Kingsville, Ohio, there lived John Bidwell, a very young schoolteacher. Bidwell was only eighteen years of age; consequently he was bubbling over with the spirit of youth, the desire to visit other lands, to see, to conquer if need be. His education had come mainly through his own efforts, so he was more able to appreciate his learning, and, even as Lincoln, craved more. For this purpose he proposed to travel.

California at that time existed in a mythical way. Thousands of miles lay between it and the rest of the United States. Men did not care to take their families over those miles so beset by dangers of every description. An Indian attack was an almost weekly occurrence; chances of starvation were many; mountains loomed high, challenging the already wearied travelers to climb over their snowy crests.

John Bidwell, feeling the urge of youth, resolved, in spite of all the dangers, to go to California. At once he set about to interest others in his venture. By the end of spring five hundred members agreed to go with him, but when they actually started only thirty-five answered the roll call. Nothing daunted, the little party set out. No need to tell of the hardships that followed. The privations of the early Pioneers have been the subject of many a story, song and poem. To add even a word were like gilding the lily. Suffice to say that the party arrived with no little loss in California in the autumn of the year 1841.

Now Bidwell was free to go where he pleased, and he chose to go to Sutter's Fort, which is the site of the present Capital of California, Sacramento. As travelers from the East were rarities in those days, Bidwell was assured of a hearty welcome from General Sutter, and the possibility of some kind of work. During the ensuing months he went up to Fort Ross to accomplish some work to which General Sutter was not able to attend. When he returned from Fort Ross, an incident occurred which changed Bidwell's life forever.

One night, when he and several companions were sleeping around their campfire, a slight disturbance in the direction where the horses were tethered attracted their attention. Upon investigation they found that several of the animals had either been stolen or had strayed away. Certain that they had been stolen, Bidwell and his companions borrowed horses and set out to find the thieves. The search led them due north up through what is now called the Sacramento Valley. Those were the days when bear and antelope were as plentiful as sheep and cattle are now. Encounters with grizzly bears were daily, almost hourly, occurrences, and Bidwell seems to have extracted a great deal of dangerous amusement from chasing them! Bidwell recovered his horses, for it was one of his charac-istics that he never gave up what once he had started.

It was the country, however, that attracted his attention. In his autobiography he describes it as being a veritable paradise. The long, level plains were covered with tall, waving grasses, dotted here and there with spreading oak trees. Many of these trees still exist, the largest of which is Hooker oak. This tree, because of its gigantic proportions, has attracted from all over the world visitors who have gone away feeling that they have seen one of Nature's special gifts to man. To return:

The soil was amazingly fertile, and the waters of the creeks were pure and uncontaminated. Flowers of marvelous hues were everywhere, forming a Persian royal carpet upon which to walk. Over all, and in sharp but beautiful contrast, lay the Sierra Nevada Mountains, covered with snow. Can one blame Bidwell for his desire to live always in this garden? Was it Fate that guided the footsteps of the thieves who stole his horses? Might they not as easily have gone south, or east, or west?

On returning to Sutter's Fort he resolved to buy the Rancho Chico, but it was not until 1849 that the purchase was finally effected. The intervening years saw many changes in California.

The war with Mexico had been fought, and in this Bidwell played a notable part. Of the many versions submitted for the Bear State platform, only Bidwell's was accepted. It reads, in part: "The undersigned hereby agree to organize for the purpose of gaining and maintaining the independence of California."

But when the battalions had been organized, they marched from Sonoma to San Diego without seeing an enemy and without firing a single shot! It was an undisputed victory for the Californians, and the American Flag was soon raised. The Bear State at last belonged to the union.

Then, too, gold had been discovered. The population of California seemed to have grown over night. Hordes of settlers came in every day, and the problem of keeping law and order became a difficult one. Bidwell caught the gold fever and tried his luck, with little success. Fortunately, his inherent love for the soil reasserted itself; he gave up mining and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. Now he was able to carry out his desire of former years, that

Oak tree, oak tree, tall, stately oak tree,
Tell me a story as I sit at your knee.
Tell me of the things you've seen,
Things of which I never dream.
Tell me how the Pioneers came,
Sore of foot, through sun and rain,
To sound of gun, and tramp of sod,
With empty hands and trust in God.
How they met the savage bold,
And fought for life of young and old;
How they built their homes, forlorn,
Cleared their land and sowed their corn;
How they found real gold at last,
With ships and wagons coming fast.
Gold for all who cared to stay,
Enriching each from day to day.
At last they found another gem,
To take the place of sluice and pan:
The waving grain, the wheat of gold,
Across the land began to roll,
And orchards green, with blossoms sweet,
And cottage gay, and gardens neat.
O'er the land the church bells ring,
And voices brave the sweet hymns sing,
And there, a schoolhouse in vale and hill,
With knowledge there for "Jack and Jill."
Trains of steam and electric pass,
The ox and stagecoach gone, at last.
The motor car, the airship, too,
All, and more, have passed by you.
Adown the years these things you've seen,
Things of which I never dream.

of buying Rancho Chico. This he bought in 1849, and at once began to develop the soil.

The rancho extended from the banks of the Sacramento River eastward fifteen miles to the Sierra foothills. Throughout this region different varieties of soil were found, and Bidwell set out to find the plants best suited for each kind of soil. To do this he spared himself no expense, sending even to foreign countries to find trees and plants best suited to the climate and the soil. As a result, such a variety of fruit trees, plants, grains and flowers were to be found in no other place. It is interesting to note that some of the more hardy plants still thrive today, even though they are uncared for. Back of the mansion grounds there still grows each year a large patch of asparagus. It has not been cultivated for many years, yet it grows with a dogged determination. The grounds surrounding General Bidwell's home reflect the love and the care which he and his wife held for all growing things. Lilies, roses, shrubs, trees—all are there to remind the visitor of the spirit of the Bidwells.

Politics kept Bidwell away from his rancho a large part of the time, but he invariably hastened back to introduce some new improvement. In 1860 he conceived the idea of founding a town. In a few years Chico was a thriving little village, carrying on many industries, and happy under the kindnesses of its benefactor. He gave funds for the Presbyterian church and for several others. He donated the land for the Chico State Normal School and for the forestry station. He gave trees and plants with which to beautify the city parks. In short, there was nothing he did not do, within his means, to further the interests of Chico.

When Bidwell went to Washington in 1865, he met Miss Annie Kennedy, with whom he immediately fell in love. She returned his affection and they were soon married. With her coming to Chico, the town was blessed tenfold. Kind, sympathetic, loving and patient, she was loved wherever she went and by whomsoever she met. Her work among the Indians is particularly commendable. Every Sunday she would conduct services in their church and to her credit lies the salvation of many an Indian. She cared for their material comfort in many ways, giving them food and clothing when they were in need, caring for them when they were ill. Among other things, she and General Bidwell developed musical talent among the Indians, and now there are several fine singers who have received no little attention.

But "the old order changeth, yielding place to new." General Bidwell lived to see his only child, the town of Chico, grow into a thriving city, well able to go on by itself. One day, while cutting down a tree he was the victim of a severe heart attack. True to his usual spirit he rallied, but early in the afternoon he quietly passed into the great beyond. Bells tolled the sad news, and friends mourned the passing of the father of Chico, benefactor of Northern California, benefactor of the Bear State. The widow, whom he left, bravely continued her work until she, too, should be called. Her summons came in 1918, eighteen years after the death of her husband.

A sound of merry laughter floats out from the mansion—a tinkle of the radio is heard. Three college girls come laughing down the arbor from a girl's dormitory, for such is the old mansion now. An old Indian walks slowly through the park, looking back at the windows of the grand old home, as if remembering those who are no longer here. He passes from view, old, bent, the end of the old order. Over all, reigns a dignified peace. The birds sing in the hushed quiet as they never seem to sing anywhere else. The Bidwells are gone, but their spirit still hovers near—forever.

ORDER NATIVE SONS HAS TAKEN DEEP ROOT IN HEART OF CALIFORNIA

Charles A. Thompson

(GRAND PRESIDENT OF THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST.)

THE ORDER OF THE NATIVE SONS OF the Golden West has just passed one more milestone in its history; its members have just rounded out one more year of glorious achievement. They may look back with pride at their accomplishments during the term that has just ended; they may survey, if they desire, the entire field of the Order's activities from its very inception down to the present day, and truly be grateful for having had the privilege of being affiliated with such an organization. Reviewing the glorious past, at the dawn of the new era, we cannot but be filled with the greatest encouragement, and with the highest ambition to achieve success in the years that are to come.

Perhaps the greatest contributing factors to the success of this Order have been the principles upon which it is founded, and the unselfishness, energy and perseverance of its membership.

One of the fundamentals of the science of ethics and sociology, and one that no true philosopher disputes, is that "All men are dependent beings, that is to say, that no man can exist by himself and within himself in a state of true happiness, or be of the greatest amount of good in this world, either to himself or others, unless he associates himself in different capacities with his fellow man." And one of the best methods for improving himself and assisting his fellows, is affiliation with and activity in a group which is a child of modern civilization—the fraternal society.

A certain amount of selfishness is inborn in all human beings. And if this quality is cultivated, nurtured and accelerated by a proper environment, it will gradually develop until it reaches its ultimate perfection; which we find, perhaps, best exemplified in the miser, who hoards his goods, denies himself the pleasure of associating with his fellows, deprives himself of the self-satisfaction of doing any good to others, and finds his only pleasure in secretly counting the wealth that can never buy him any true happiness.

If unselfishness be cultivated it, too, will develop. It will flourish as vigorously as selfishness. If the seeds of unselfishness be implanted in the rich soil of fraternity, if they be nurtured with loving kindness and watered with the gentle rains of genial interest, then will they grow into a sturdy plant, then will they flower into glorious blossom, and bear at last the treasured fruitage of friendship, loyalty and charity.

This Order, devoid as it is of all selfish principles, is a fraternal society that calls into action all the best qualities existant in man. It is founded upon the sweet sentiment that attaches to place of birth. The love and pride of one for his birthplace is a sentiment that has existed in the heart of man ever since the world began. It has been the inspiration for artists, musicians and poets. It has encouraged the scholar, guided the statesman and led the soldier. It is the mother of patriotism, the great foundation-stone upon which all the nations of the earth are builded.

How natural is it, then, that men born within the confines of California, bound together by this common bond of sweetest and deepest sentiment, should bind themselves together in a fraternal society dedicated to the perpetuation of the state's traditions, to the constant care of its present welfare and to the careful guidance of its future course. And how ungrateful would we, who have by a kind providence and benevolence been given the privilege of being born upon the soil of so rich, so bountiful and so beautiful a land as that in which we enjoy life, be, if we did not affiliate ourselves with such an organization and, as true men, take our places beside our brothers in carrying on the great work for which the Order was created.

CHARLES A. THOMPSON OF SANTA CLARA CITY, NEWLY ELECTED GRAND PRESIDENT ORDER NATIVE SONS GOLDEN WEST.

It is true that, just because we were fortunate in being born in California, we have no right to believe ourselves superior to anyone else who dwells upon our soil, or entitled to any more consideration at the state's hands. The adopted child merits the same consideration, the same right of maintenance and support, the same guidance, the same right of inheritance and the same love as the natural child. We should be the last to belittle any of the efforts of adopted Californians in behalf of our state. They should be welcomed by us with open arms, as fellow Americans and fellow Californians upon arrival here, and assisted and encouraged by us in their work of upbuilding the land of our birth. Anyone who does otherwise, does not truly love California. But, regardless of this, we, as Natives, are afforded the advantage of associating ourselves with others of a kindred birthplace in a great work, and are given the opportunity o joining and assisting in the work of a mo unique fraternal society. The best qualities th exist in our nature are challenged to meet t issue that confronts us, and it is our sacred du to do so as men.

Owing to the energy, self sacrifice and loyal of the Natives of California, our fraternity h done magnificent work during the time of its e istence. So much so, in fact, that it has becom as it were, a very part and parcel of the State California. Indeed, no one can say that he tru knows California unless he knows of the Ord of the Native Sons of the Golden West and of t accomplishments. It h taken deep root in the ve heart of the state, and h grown to be such an impo tant part of its life that, ju so long as California exis just so long will the Ord of the Native Sons of t Golden West exist.

Many historic spo throughout the state wou have gradually been blott into oblivion, had they n been sought out and suitab marked by the historic lan marks committee of the C der. And the places whe history was made in t state of our birth would, a few short years, have be entirely forgotten. What crying shame it would ha been for this condition have been allowed to co to pass! How would tr Californians have explain such a deplorable situatio How men born upon our so with any sentiment or pri in their hearts, would ha hung their heads in sham We have also assisted in storing landmarks arou which cluster so many bea tiful traditions of the stat colorful past, and they n stand as monuments to t pioneer builders who fi erected them. Notwit standing all that has be done by our Order in this gard, however, there yet r mains a great amount to done; enough, in fact, to a ford ample opportunity f our membership, and othe that might care to assist, an undertaking that shou surely impel any real Ca fornian to help to do h share.

It is fit and proper th we revere the memory of t Pioneers — those noble m and women who left th Eastern homes and blaz the trail; who stood t trials and tribulations traveling the sun-baked deserts, the wild a untraveled valleys, the deep rock-ribbed ca yons and the frigid frozen mountain tops, covered wagon and ox team, on a journey six long and weary months, if they traveled land, or the dangers and perils of a long s voyage in the poor craft of the time, if th came by water, and laid the foundation of t state. They were men and women with pu minds and stout hearts, whose character w shown in the molding of the state and the sha ing of its destiny at its birth. Their charact was surely a great credit to American manho and American womanhood!

But the grim reaper has gradually thinn the ranks of the Pioneers, until there are b few left, and the tale of "the days of old, t days of gold, the days of forty-nine" will so have to be told by their sons. Following t passing of this generation, who will be left tell coming generations of those wonderful m and women, and their sterling character a work? The far-removed next generation will aught through the efforts of the Native Sons of he Golden West. This Order will ever pay homge to the Pioneer, this Order for all time will eep alive in the hearts and minds of the people f this state the deep debt of gratitude we owe o the Pioneer!

It is but natural that the inhabitants of a parcular state should want to know its history, nd particularly is this true of those who are atives of that state. But were it not for the ellowships in California history established and aintained at the University of California by the enerosity of this Order, there would be no data t hand from which a true history of California ay be written. Although the beautiful, romanc story of the state's past teems with interestng events, it was necessary that many of these acts be gathered from foreign lands, where the iaries and logs of explorers and navigators of arly time evidenced events of that period, as ell as searches made among the archives of the tate, in order to learn the truth. And it is for s, as Natives of California, to see that a true istory of California is written, that adequate extbooks on California history are supplied our chools and that, as a part of the curriculum, ach child be taught the true narrative of this reat state.

Our Order is an extremely patriotic society. t is founded upon the principles of loyalty to tate and loyalty to country. We realize that he schoolhouse is the fountain of knowledge, he bulwark of civilization, and the great welder f patriotic thought. We know, also, that the hildren of today will be the future citizens of he country and state, and as they are taught in chool in tender years, so shall they be, to a reat extent, in after years. We are, therefore, aking a great interest in the school systems of he state, and in order to exemplify our interest n education and in the future generations of he land, we have, during the last few years, een engaged in dedicating schoolhouses, preenting flags of nation and of state to schools, nd endeavoring to instill into the minds and earts of the youth a deep reverence and love or country and commonwealth.

Of a similar nature, in that it deals with the rowing youth, is the homeless children endeavr of the Order. In the scope of this work, we erhaps reach our ultimate perfection in charity nd unselfishness. For were we to provide homes only for homeless children of our own members we might be charged with having been actuated through selfish motives, to a certain extent. But, providing homes for all homeless children of the state, regardless of place of birth, race, color, sex, parentage or religious affiliation, and not concerned with whether they are or are not the children of members, there must be imputed to us, even by the most hostile critics, only the most altruistic and charitable of motives. In this benevolent enterprise we are, through the kindliest of motives, bringing happiness and sunshine into homes without a child, and gladdening the hearts of poor innocent waifs, by the fairest and greatest of bargains, that of love for love. We are also safeguarding and mapping the destiny of the state, by improving its future citizenry, into whose hands its future will be placed.

In this brief resumé of some of the accomplishments of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, in behalf of California, must be included the contribution of thousands of manly, loyal and patriotic citizens. Loyalty and patriotism have ever been the watchwords of this Order and have always been instilled into the hearts of its members. The principal factors in molding the character of a man are the home, the church, the schoolhouse and the fraternal society. This Order has been a leader in this regard. We may sound the depths of the ocean, we may measure the distance of the different planets from the earth and from each other, but we cannot calculate, with any degree of accuracy, what has been the amount of our success in this regard. It would take the testimony of each individual that has ever been affiliated with, or learned the precepts and tenets of our Order, indeed the testimony of even those whose lips have been sealed by death, to evidence its extent and magnitude. But suffice to say that it has been one of the greatest contributing factors in making the people of the State of California so patriotic and so loyal, both to country and to state.

One of the favorite themes of theorists, preachers, teachers and writers of this age, is the dangers that beset the youth of the land. Magazines and the daily press teem with articles on the subjects of the growing youth, the jazz age and the so-called crime wave. It is the consensus of opinion among most of them that the home is losing its influence over young people; that the church, as a whole, has lost some of its control, and that the power of the overtaxed schoolmaster is deterred to some extent by the loss of home discipline. But none can gainsay the influence of the fraternal society, nor dispute the immense amount of good accomplished in this regard by the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Our Order is unique, in that it is composed mostly of young men, and it has made itself famous as a molder of character.

Many a man owes his success today to the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, and the precepts which he was taught within its folds. For if we search the annals of the state for successful men, we will find that many of them have been made successful, that their characters have been molded and their destiny shaped, by the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Let it be our purpose to continue to gather into our folds the young men of the state. And if, perchance, we be retarded by impetuous youth in this regard, let us be guided by this thought:

> He drew a circle that shut me out
> Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
> But Love and I had the wit to win
> We drew a circle that took him in!

In all our accomplishments we have always been led by deep-seated love for our fellow-man, for our glorious nation, and for our beautiful state—

> 'Twixt the seas and the deserts,
> 'Twixt the wastes and the waves,
> Between the sands of buried lands
> And ocean's coral caves,
> It lies not East nor West,
> But like a scroll unfurled,
> Where the hand of God hath hung it
> Down the middle of the world.

"BLUNDER"?

SENATOR JAMES D. PHELAN OF SAN Francisco, affiliated with Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W. of that city, expresses the belief, in a letter to the editor dated June 9, that the Grand Parlor of the Order, in session at San Pedro during May, made a mistake in adopting the resolution endorsing Thomas Starr King as one of California's representatives for the National Fame Hall at Washington, D. C.

When the resolution was before the Grand Parlor for consideration, everyone who so desired was given an opportunity to be heard, and the following telegram from Senator Phelan was read:

"As a loyal member of the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, I desire to protest against the action of the Legislature in picking out Reverend Thomas Starr King as one of the two representatives of this state in the Statuary Hall of the Capitol at Washington. The elimination of an American Pioneer I believe to be a serious mistake. The glorious memories of the days of forty-nine—the discovery of gold and the admission of California—are very dear to the Native Sons, and the society, as stated in its constitution and in its ritual, was organized for the very purpose of perpetuating and revering the memory of the Pioneers. Governor Young is holding up the legislation on this subject and he asks for an expression of opinion from the Native Sons with a view of having a fuller discussion and postponing action until the next Legislature meets. I believe the Native Sons cannot afford to refuse further consideration of the subject and to seek meantime to have the California Pioneers represented. Lest we forget!"

The resolution was adopted almost unanimously by the Grand Parlor and shortly thereafter Governor C. C. Young signed the bill naming Junipero Serra and Thomas Starr King for the honors.

Charles A. Thompson, Grand President N.S.G.W., has been appealed to by Senator Phelan to have righted what he believes to be a "blunder." In the course of a letter to the Grand President, dated June 9, he wrote:

"I am sure you are aware that the Grand Parlor eliminated the Pioneer, without any adequate reason and wantonly, from the National Hall of Fame at Washington. . . . The blunder then made should be corrected, if possible, by your administration.

"There is only five thousand dollars available for the statues, and two full-sized statues will cost at least forty or fifty thousand dollars; therefore the work cannot be accomplished without further appropriation, and possibly the next Legislature, even in the absence of a referendum, can be better advised.

"It is a clear-cut issue of honoring or not honoring the Pioneers."

"There is no yellow peril of which the prophets of discord cry," Dr. A. B. Scherer, director of the Southwest Museum of Los Angeles, is quoted in press dispatches as stating in a recent Riverside address.

He must be thoroughly and hopelessly inoculated with propaganda of the paid prophets of Japan, if unable to detect the yellow peril, which still thrives, and grows more menacing day by day in every way.

The bill passed by the last Legislature placing the burden of proving citizenship on the alien and not on the state, is now a law. It was written into the statutes for the purpose of closing one of the loopholes through which Japs have successfully evaded the California Alien Land Law.

As remarked many, many times, what California most needs is not more anti-Jap legislation, but just one official who will rigidly enforce the law. Having not one, the purpose of this new "tooth" is, like all anti-Jap legislation, nullified. And the Japs continue, and will continue to con-

PROCEEDINGS
FORTY-FIRST N. D. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE FORTY FIRST GRAND PARLOR OF the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, with Grand President Pearl Lamb presiding, was in session at Modesto, Stanislaus County, June 20, 21, 22 and 24. Florence Giovanetti, general chairman of the Grand Parlor entertainment committee of the hostess Parlor, Morada No. 199, extended a most cordial welcome to the Grand Parlor members and expressed the wish of Morada that their stay in Modesto be a pleasant one—and it was.

El Pescadero No. 82 of Tracy, the home-Parlor of the Grand President, through Claire Ludwig presented Mrs. Lamb with a basket of flowers and expressed in a clever original poem the good wishes of that Parlor. On behalf of the grand officers and district deputy grand presidents, Florence Danforth-Boyle of Gold of Ophir No. 190 (Oroville), presented her with a diamond-studded wrist-watch.

Grand President Lamb's report was a complete account of her stewardship as the Order's head and a resume of the accomplishments of the 1926-27 Grand Parlor year. "Another cycle of time has overtaken us," she said, "and we are again assembled, in the Forty-first annual meeting of the Grand Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West. We have come from all parts of our glorious state to deliberate on matters of importance to the Order as well as to each and every individual who goes to make up our organization, forming links in a golden chain of fraternalism in a golden era of a golden state.

"The keys of the City of Modesto have been handed to us. We marvel at the progress of this city, so peacefully nestled in the bosom of Stanislaus County. To describe its charms would be equivalent to attempting to paint the lily. In this event, I shall save the paint—Modesto speaks for herself. Her inspiration will lead us on to greater achievements.

"It has been truly said that the greatest science we can study is that of living with other people. We seek to control the forces of Nature, but the forces of human-nature are more important. It is easy to criticize; fault-finding becomes second-nature, but forbearance is the great art. The faculty of getting the best out of one's associates, by encouragement and commendation, is what we are trying to do in our organization, and I am confident we are succeeding."

The Grand President reported the net gain in membership for the year as 1,156, and the institution of five new Parlors, referred briefly to the Order's several projects, and closed with a tribute to the deceased members and with thanks to the Supreme Ruler and to all those who assisted in bringing the Grand Parlor year to a happy and successful close.

Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts' report referred to the numerous transactions of that important office. Ninety-nine members passed away during the year, and to the beneficiaries of eighty-four a total of $6,300 was paid from the Grand Parlor death benefit fund. The receipts of her office for the year were $20,114.49, and the disbursements $22,663.62.

Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ reported the financial worth of the Grand Parlor June 1, 1927, as $60,588.55. This amount is credited to the several funds as follows: general, $15,396.97; home, $31,915.46 (not including the value of the property); death benefit, $1,584.57; Mills College scholarship, $5,409.09; redwood memorial grove, $1,282.46; new scholarship, $5,000.

Numerous other reports dealt largely with matters heretofore given publicity in The Grizzly Bear. Following is a summary of the important business transacted, no reference being made to messages of greetings received from and those of sympathy ordered sent to various individuals, or to matters of minor import:

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' HOME.

Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola, speaking for the Native Daughters' Home committee, gave a brief history of the home and presented plans for the proposed new structure for the San Francisco Baker-street property.

"Today is the age of progress," declared Dr. Bertola. "People look to women for leadership and California women are second to none in the United States which means second to none in the world. Service is the motive power of the Native Daughters Home, and I am thank-ful no better way to express the aim and object of our Home than by quoting the words of a famous American woman. 'Service is the rent you pay for being here.'"

On motion, the Grand Parlor delegated full powers in regard to financing the proposed new home structure to the Native Daughters' Home committee and the Board of Grand Trustees. After an inspiring address by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, pledges of thousands of dollars were then and there made by Subordinate Parlors and individuals. The estimated cost of the new home building is $80,000.

LEGISLATION ENACTED.

The Grand Parlor Constitution was amended to provide that a Subordinate Parlor delegate must be at least 18 years of age, and must file credentials with the Grand Secretary "not later than five days after election of delegates."

The Grand Parlor Constitution was amended to provide for the appointment of supervising district deputy grand presidents, and to make it possible for such deputies to act for the Grand President at the institution of new parlors.

The Grand Parlor Constitution was amended to give all the powers of a supervising district deputy grand president to the Grand Vice-president.

Portola Parlor No. 172, San Francisco
NEW GRAND PRESIDENT N.D.G.W.

The Grand Parlor Constitution was amended to provide that, upon the death of a member thereof a Subordinate Parlor must drape the altar and furl The Flag.

Article II, section 4, Subordinate Parlors' Constitution was amended by adding these words at the end of the section: "except under extenuating circumstances."

BUSINESS TRANSACTED.

Hazeldell Werner was again awarded the Order's Mills College scholarship.

San Francisco was selected as the place of meeting for the Forty-second (1928) Grand Parlor.

A letter was ordered sent the Golden Gate Park Museum, San Francisco, asking for a permanent place for the golden key presented to the Eleventh (1897) Grand Parlor in session at Sonora, Tuolumne County, by Dardanelle Parlor No. 66 of that place.

The granting of charters by Grand President Lamb to the following Parlors was ratified: Verdugo No. 240, Glendale, Los Angeles County, instituted December 14, 1926. Lugonia No. 241, San Bernardino City, instituted May 14, 1927. Coyote No. 242, Fullerton, Orange County, instituted June 2, 1927. Granada No. 243, South Gate, Los Angeles County, instituted June 14, 1927. Westmont No. 244, West Pico, Los Angeles County, instituted June 14, 1927.

The Grizzly Bear Magazine was reinstated as the official organ of the Order, and financial provision was made for the publication thereof at the discretion of the Grand Parlor.

Toward the restoration of Santa Barbara Mission, $50 was contributed.

The per capita tax for the 1927-28 Grand Parlor year was fixed at $1.00, same as added 50 cents for support of the Native Daughters' Home.

One thousand dollars was contributed toward the purchase price of the Order's proposed Humboldt County redwood memorial park.

A letter of love and sympathy was ordered sent Anna G. Anderson of Alta Parlor No. 102 (Salinas), who is ill. For many years she was most active in affairs of the Order.

A resolution prevailed "that all other works except what is contained in the ritual be eliminated."

On motion a new system of books was ordered installed in the office of the Grand Secretary.

A letter of commendation was ordered sent to the San Diego builders of the "Spirit of St. Louis," the air boat in which Lindbergh made his memorable flight across the Atlantic to Paris, France.

Resolutions were adopted, increasing the Grand President's contingent fund to $1,000, increasing the Grand Treasurer's salary to $75 per month, and increasing the allowance for the official emblematic ring to $150.

A resolution was adopted, extending the thanks of the Forty-first Grand Parlor to Modesto's citizens, to Morada No. 199 the hostess-Parlor, to the Modesto Chamber of Commerce, to the Native Daughters and Native Sons of Tuolumne County, and to the press.

For the benefit of the Mississippi flood sufferers, $50 was donated to the American Red Cross.

A recommendation of the Grand President, "That all members of the Order remove their hats during the session of a Parlor," was concurred in.

It was ordered, "That members must have a continuous membership of five years in the Order of N.D.G.W. to grant admission to the Home as a non-paying member."

It was ordered, "That a complete file of the records of our Order be sent to the State Capitol library (at Sacramento), and also to the libraries of San Francisco and Los Angeles."

A rising vote of thanks was given to Pearl Lamb, retiring Grand President, to Hattie E. Roberts, retiring grand secretary, and to the transportation committee.

The Forty-first Grand Parlor adjourned out of respect to the memory of the deceased members.

NOTES OF THE SESSION.

Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham, who has attended every session of the Grand Parlor, was again the chairman of the credentials committee.

Grand President Charles A. Thompson sent a message of greetings from the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. He was represented at the gathering June 22 by Grand Trustees Richard M. Hamb, Frank I. Gonzalez and Harmon D. Skillin who, in addressing the Native Daughters, urged co-operation by the two Orders.

Mary E. Brusie, secretary of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Homeless Children Committee, gave a wonderful illustrated talk on that great charity and had an exhibit that attracted much attention.

Florence Dodson-Schoneman, chairman of the history and landmarks committee, supplemented a report on that work with an exhibit of many news articles of historic interest.

Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe reported $2,605.16 in the fund being accumulated by the Grand Parlor for the purchase of a redwood memorial grove in Humboldt County. She appealed to the Subordinate Parlors to continue making contributions until the quota is completed. Several additional pledges were made.

Father Ryan, state vicepresident of restoration of California missions, addressed the Grand Parlor, asking assistance for Santa Clara, founded in 1777.

Past Grand President Dr. Victory A. Derrick, reporting for the finance committee, urged all members to work for a larger membership and to call personally on delinquents.

State division was referred to by several speakers, all of whom condemned the idea and

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR)

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIRST ANNIversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence of the United States was celebrated throughout California, Wednesday, July 4, 1877, with patriotic salutes, parades, literary exercises, regattas, horse races, fireworks, grand balls and the usual amount of hilarious inebriation. Citizens from every nation of the world, except China, joined in the festivities, making a cosmopolitan showing not equaled in any other state.

Robert G. Ingersoll delivered the oration at the Alameda County celebration, Miss Yda Addis was the poetess of the day at Los Angeles City, and at San Francisco a visiting squad of Piutes from Nevada State participated in the parade.

While Professor Rogers was delivering a Fourth of July oration at Saint Helena, Napa County, his home near Calistoga was destroyed by a fire started by a small boy exploding firecrackers.

A trot at the Oakland track July 4 between "Brushy John," "Dirigo," "Sweetbriar," "Gov. Stanford" and "Nellie Patchen" was a big betting affair. Six heats had to be trotted to produce the winner. "Nellie Patchen," a field horse almost without backers in the beginning, annexed the last three heats and won the race.

George M. Pinney remained in jail at San Francisco as he could not give the $77,000 bail required on the many charges filed against him during the previous month. He continued issuing his denunciatory articles against his former friends, but disclosed nothing new.

An estimate of California's wheat crop for the season, made July 1, showed but 200,000 tons available for export.

A school census taken in Los Angeles City July 1 showed 2,727 children under 17 years of age—1,460 girls and 1,267 boys. There were 1,081 children with foreign parents. But seven Negro children were listed.

Tiopola Vaca, who came with his father to Putah Creek in 1840 and after whom the town of Vacaville, Solano County, was named, died July 5 at his Putah Creek ranch.

The stage going north from Redding, Shasta County, was stopped July 17 near Soda Springs by two masked highwaymen, who took the express-box, containing about $300.

The Downieville, Sierra County, stage was robbed near Marysville, Yuba County, July 3. Eph. White and George Rugg, the latter driver of the Colusa stage, were arrested on suspicion in Marysville a few days later.

Thomas W. Temple of Los Angeles obtained a patent for an oyster opener, said to fill a long-felt want in that town.

ANTI-CHINESE RIOTS.

A great strike of railroad men, resulting from a reduction of pay, was prevailing with riotous disturbances and mob violence in a number of Eastern cities. The Central Pacific had also reduced the pay of its employees 10 percent but, owing to the disturbed conditions arising in the East, restored the rates of pay and announced its intention to pay off in silver, which was now at about 10 percent discount with gold. This caused no dissatisfaction, as the employees spent their wages anyway, whether received in gold or silver. An open-air meeting was called of workingmen at the new city hall courtyard in San Francisco July 23 to express sympathy with the striking railroad men in the East. It soon developed into a riotous anti-Chinese demonstration, with fistfights, pistol shooting, and discordant yells of "the Chinese must go!"

A mob of hoodlums and boys moved from the scene on its way to Chinatown and made raids on every Chinese washhouse passed. Fifteen laundries were demolished and one was set on fire and burned by the upsetting of a coal oil lamp. Damage amounting to thousands of dollars was done before the police dispersed the mob as it entered Bush street. The next day a call, headed by ex-Governor F. F. Low and General John McComb, brought a large attendance of prominent citizens to the chamber of commerce assembly-room. W. T. Coleman was selected to preside and after a review and discussion of the situation a committee of safety, consisting of twenty-four members, was named to organize for the suppression of any further disturbances.

The evening of July 25 the committee assembled in horticultural hall with several hundred other prominent citizens in attendance. At the same time a mass meeting of workingmen was in progress at the new city hall site. Simultaneously news was received at both meetings that the Pacific Mail dock at Beale street was burning. Several hundred citizens, armed with clubs and pistols, marched to the fire, while crowds rushed from the workingmen's meeting to the dock. While the flames destroyed lumber yards and warehouses for six hours the citizens, police and firemen were assailed with stones thrown from nearby heights by the hoodlums there gathered. They were repeatedly charged and driven off, only to return again. The mob was finally dispersed from the vicinity of the dock, only to spread panic elsewhere. Being without a leader, the rowdies divided into gangs whose carryings-on kept the police, the fire department and the citizens on the go all night. A virtual night of terror was spent by many. Five million feet of lumber, 5,000 tons of coal and several large warehouses with valuable contents were burned at the dock, with an estimated loss of $600,000.

The militia was now summoned to its armories and placed under arms, while a detachment of marines was brought from Mare Island to be available to preserve order and protect Chinatown. While the workingmen were evidently in a restless mood and the hospitals and jails were filled with battered, obstreperous disturbers, the excitement gradually subsided and soon normalcy returned. To add to the complication, the steamer "City of Tokio" arrived with a thousand and more Coolies from China, but the anticipated disturbance did not materialize. The Chinks were landed, huddled into express wagons and passed through a cordon of police from the steamer into Chinatown.

WORKINGMAN'S PARTY IS BORN.

Oakland's workingmen held a mass meeting July 25 and passed a resolution demanding that the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific discharge their Chinese laborers within seven days or suffer the consequences. Citizens of the city immediately organized a safety committee and raised, by subscription, $5,000 to defray expenses. A Chinese washhouse was set on fire at San Pablo and, along with nine other buildings, went up in smoke.

Out of this anti-Chinese feeling was born the Workingman's party, a political organization headed by P. J. Healy. While but a sprouting acorn at this time, it soon became a sturdy oak. Beneath its branches many politicians sought and found, welcoming shade. The party's first action was to condemn the lawlessness of infuriated, irresponsible mobs. During the month Chinese merchants in California shipped $1,400,000 in silver to China.

The Southern Pacific contracted for 250,000 eucalyptus trees to be planted along its right-of-way in California South. It had the mistaken idea that they would eventually supply railroad ties.

The California fruit shipping season was opening auspiciously, with frequent carload shipments by passenger train to the East. During the previous season 334 carloads had been sent East from California North fruit shipping points and the output was expected to be doubled in the Eastern market was not glutted.

Adams, Thayer & Co., oil developers near Santa Paula, Ventura County, struck a flowing well that was yielding 100 barrels of oil per day.

A ship loaded with turtles from Lower California arrived at Wilmington, Los Angeles County, July 24. It was intended to distribute the cargo for turtle soup in the cities of the Pacific Coast.

Wm. Spencer of Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, burned a kiln of clay pipes made from a deposit of clay found near that place that was creating much attention.

An Italian scissors and knife grinder in Los Angeles City provided himself with a bell as large as a Liberty bell to announce, with its ringing, his coming. The clanging could be heard a mile away. It caused three runaways during forenoon, and roused many people from comfortable daytime siestas. He was arrested for being a public nuisance and disturber of the peace. The judge fined him $5 and ordered him to replace the bell with a tinkling substitute.

Chinatown in Colusa City was burned July 1 with a $20,000 loss.

Pomona, Orange County, was swept by flames July 18 and a $25,000 loss resulted.

JULY 17 BLOODY DAY.

A fire that burned for three hours July 22 in the Lick House, San Francisco, destroyed the magnificent dining-room.

The Central Pacific lost a half-mile of snow sheds east of Emigrant Gap, Placer County, July 17, and the next day another fire east of Cisco destroyed a half-mile more.

At Marysville, Yuba County, July 16 fire destroyed the railroad depot and spread to a number of business houses. A $90,000 loss resulted.

July 2 a fire in San Jose, Santa Clara County, burned the two-story lodging house of Mrs. Martin Ruffleson. John Gough and Jerry Lynch, who had retired intoxicated, were cremated.

At Petrolia, Mendocino County, Mrs. Dennis McAuliffe went insane July 3 and took her three children, one by one, out of bed to the barn where she cut their throats with a razor. The two younger ones died instantly but the eldest, a lad of 10, struggled and shouted so vigorously he was not fatally injured. She then cut her own throat and set fire to an outbuilding. She was not fatally injured and was taken into custody.

At Anaheim, Orange County, July 17 F. M. Cahill and Thomas S. Haggerty, neighbors, quarreled about a broken pump handle at a well used

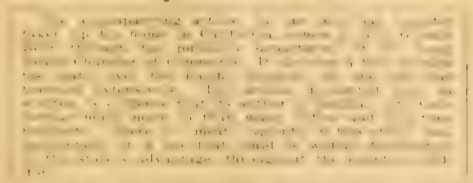
DESCRIBED BY A NEWCOMER

Dr. G. P. Hitchcock

ARRIVING AT THE OREGON-California state line from the north, over the Pacific highway, the first view of California is impressive, with snow-capped Mount Shasta in the far distant background. This noted landmark is the highest mountain in Northern California and was first seen from a point in Oregon when it was about one hundred miles away. Farther south, it is seen about fifteen miles to the east of the highway, which we call a close up view in this western country of magnificent distances. Mount Whitney is the highest mountain in Southern California and is also the highest in the United States.

Below Sisson the Sacramento River is crossed the first time, not many miles from its source on the southern slope of Shasta, yet it has become a dashing mountain stream of considerable size. The next seventy-five miles is over a scenic, winding mountain road, the river below is often in view and the road later descends into the broad valley of the Sacramento River at Redding. Here the first palms are seen and at Red Bluff the first oranges on trees about the homes and one is reminded of California's semi-tropical climate.

At Red Bluff, Mount Lassen, California's only volcano, located in Mount Lassen National Park, to the east, can be seen on a clear day.



California is rapidly unfolding itself. Most growing things are new to Easterners and the task of learning what all the new things are at once becomes bewildering. In the East we speak of evergreen as the ornamental evergreen tree of the coniferous family, so universally used to ornament the home grounds. Here in California we use the word in a broader and different sense. Almost every tree, plant, shrub and vine is evergreen here, because it carries its green foliage throughout the year. Exceptions are the deciduous fruits, nut trees and grape vines, which shed their leaves in the fall and have periods of rest the same as in colder countries.

The first olive grove was a puzzle. On investigation I thought the fruit might be one of Burbank's new-fangled cherries, but after tasting one it was found the olive had been "discovered." The nut trees had a few scattering nuts left on them, so the almond and the English walnut were easily learned. One learns the new things gradually. A common sight is to see orange trees carrying ripe oranges, green ones of various sizes and orange blossoms all at the same time.

The Sacramento Valley, in Northern California, is one of the three great valleys of the state. At Red Bluff we cross the Sacramento River and go down the east side of the valley, through Chico and Marysville to Sacramento, the capital of the state. The route to San Francisco is via Napa, Sonoma, Santa Rosa, Petaluma, San Quentin, where we visited the state prison, and San Rafael, a beautiful suburban city of San Francisco situated in the Marin County hills. Back in early history, before California was ceded to the United States, Sonoma was famous as the birthplace of the Bear Flag and the headquarters of General Fremont, commanding a detachment of cavalry, United States Army.

Santa Rosa was the home of Luther Burbank during the last forty years of his life. He is best known as the plant wizard. He was living when we visited there and on the door of his office was a printed notice stating that, owing to the nature of his work, seeing visitors had to be discontinued; and the notice stated that the fences were built low so visitors could see the grounds. In the grounds there was a fine group of cacti of different varieties, full of fruit of various colors. Burbank did much experimental work in an effort to produce an edible fruit on the cactus. I do not know how successful he was, but the fruit can be seen in the market. Luther Burbank was widely known and created many new things in plant life and improved many others. He developed the logan berry, very popular out here.

Petaluma claims the distinction of being the egg basket of the world. It is a prosperous city and the marketing place for a large district given up almost entirely to poultry farms, large and small. I have seen a few chickens in my travels, but the Petaluma district, for numbers, wins easily. The city has several hatcheries, the largest one having a capacity of half a million eggs at one time. Some days as high as twenty five cars of eggs and dressed poultry go to New York and other markets. It is said the banks handle more money than any other city of the same size in the state.

At Sausalito the ferryboat was taken to San Francisco just in time to see the sun set on the Pacific Ocean as we crossed the Golden Gate. The Golden Gate is no more than the channel, two miles wide, connecting the Pacific Ocean and San Francisco Bay.

San Francisco is today a much larger and better built city than it was before its destruction by earthquake and fire in 1906. I lived there during the winter of 1890-1891 and it was interesting to note the change. People there are reluctant to admit that the earthquake did much damage. However, the earth shock was severe enough to break the water mains and the water system was put out of commission. The city burned for lack of water to fight the fire. The older buildings that were saved do not seem to have been seriously damaged by the shock. San Francisco had the distinction for a great many years of being the metropolis of the Pacific Coast, but yielded to Los Angeles in 1920, and the latter city is now far in the lead in population.

Stanford University at Palo Alto, is one of California's large educational institutions. It has eight hundred acres of land and a large number of fine buildings. The university was founded and endowed by former Governor Leland Stanford of California. California Redwood Park is a state reservation not far from Santa Cruz. There are many fine specimens of the redwood tree. Some are very large and have special names, such as "Father" tree, "Mother" tree, etc. Short stops were made at Santa Cruz, Monterey and the old Carmel Mission.

San Jose is one of California's well-known cities and is situated in a productive part of the state. From here a side trip was made to Mount Hamilton, to see the Lick Observatory. The observatory is a part of the University of California and is equipped with one of the largest telescopes in the world and has a very perfect lens. While the great instrument weighs many tons, it is so perfectly mounted and finely adjusted that it can be pushed along with one finger. Visitors are not permitted to look into it. The attendant told us the road to the summit of Mount Hamilton has 350 turns in it, so the road must be some crook.

Continuing northward, visited Alameda, Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond, all of them cities on the opposite side of San Francisco Bay from San Francisco. The combined population of the four cities above mentioned will soon equal that of San Francisco. Oakland is a rapidly growing and prosperous city. Berkeley is the home of the University of California. This state institution has the largest student body of any university in this country.

Yosemite National Park, the next place of interest visited, was reached via Stockton, Modesto and the Big Oak Flat road. Yosemite is one of the large national parks in the West. The most accessible part of it and the place where ninety percent of the visitors go is the floor of Yosemite Valley. Here are located the village of Yosemite, the government headquarters, the motor tourist camps and hotels, and many of the scenic wonders of the park are close at hand. On reaching the rim of the canyon via the Big Oak Flat road the floor of the valley is first seen, more than three thousand feet below. The scene is wonderfully impressive. Many deer run at large on the floor of the valley and are very tame and interesting to visitors. Many foot and horseback trails lead to the parts of the park inaccessible to the motorist. On leaving the park via the Wawona road the Mariposa grove of big trees can be visited. These trees are said to be the largest in the state. Old "Grizzly," thirty-five feet in diameter, is the largest. It is not tall nor beautiful as a tree specimen. It has the appearance of having been broken off about a hundred feet up, may be a century or two ago. Many of the large fine looking trees have special names, as "General Grant," "General Sherman," "New York," "California," etc. The road is cut through the body of the California tree.

The remainder of the way out of the park was through the Sierra Nevada foothills, and at Merced we were in the San Joaquin Valley. Fresno is the largest city in the valley and the central point of the largest grape growing district in the world. From Fresno the route is through the Lindsay citrus fruit belt, Bakersfield, Mojave, along the edge of the Mojave Desert, then through to the coast at Ventura.

A long side trip was made up the coast through Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo and to San Simeon, a small port town on the Hearst ranch. The Hearst ranch was the property of former United States Senator Hearst of California. It is now owned by a son, William Randolph Hearst, owner and publisher of a string of magazines and daily newspapers scattered from Boston to San Francisco. The ranch extends about twenty miles along the Pacific Ocean and contains more than twenty thousand acres running back into the Coast Range foothills. The old family mansion is still standing. The attraction now is the new one being constructed for the younger Hearst. It is said it will cost, when completed, from eight to ten millions of dollars, including the landscaping of the gardens and surrounding hills. It will be the most elaborate country estate in the United States. Instead of one large building it will have a group of smaller buildings surrounding a large central structure, somewhat resembling a cathedral in architecture. As we saw it, the large structure was about under roof. Two of the smaller ones, very beautiful in design and finish, were completed. Much of the interior finish is in gold leaf. Hearst has ransacked the earth for antiques and old pieces of various kinds, including statuary, and an old ornamental bronze well curb, with pulley, bucket and all complete is mounted in the beautiful gardens. The stair cases and walks in the hillside gardens are of the finest marbles, tiles and mosaics. The place is six miles from the village and about a thousand feet above the ocean and fifty miles from a railroad.

The return trip was over the same route to Ventura, and on to Los Angeles via Santa Susana Pass. A sign at Chatsworth read "Los Angeles City limits, Los Angeles 28 miles." Much of the territory in the twenty-eight miles is unoccupied, but a great deal of it is in the hands of real estate sub-dividers and is being sold in acre tracts and city lots. After a stay of one week in Los Angeles I was impressed with its growth to a city of over one million. On my first visit, in 1890, it had only fifty thousand.

On arrival at Long Beach it was decided to make our future home there, although the tour was planned from Gary, Indiana, to Miami, Florida, via California. Before settling down, however, a trip was made through Southern California and to Yuma, Arizona, and to San Luis, State of Sonora, Mexico. This trip was down the coast route to San Diego. Most tourists visiting San Diego go on down to the Mexican border, about twenty miles south, and see Tia Juana, Mexico, a typical Mexican town. Its chief distinction is the track for horse racing, gambling houses, saloons, bullpen, etc. American citizens are back of the businesses largely, as operators, in a financial way and in keeping up the attendance necessary to success, whether it be any credit to them or not. We drove across and saw a little of Mexican life in their own country. San Diego is associated with California's earliest history. It is the home of the first mission, founded in 1769. The city has many attractions and a fine equable climate all the year.

From San Diego it is about a hundred miles across the mountains to El Centro, the county-seat of Imperial County and the chief city of the Imperial Valley in Southeastern California. Only a few years ago Imperial Valley was a worthless desert. Water was brought to it through a system of canals fed by the Colorado River and an extensive irrigation project was developed. The desert has been made to blossom like the rose. In 1924 fifty thousand carloads of agricultural products were grown and shipped out, including alfalfa, cotton, cantaloupes, watermelons, lettuce, asparagus, grapefruit, strawberries, dates, etc. A number of prosperous cities have grown up with this development. Between this development and the Colorado River on the east there is still a wide expanse of desert waste, through the center of which runs a low range of shifting sandhills, eight or ten miles across. Over the sandhills there is a narrow plank road and every thousand feet or so it is widened for a turnout, where cars can meet and pass each other.

Years ago Yuma, on the Arizona side of the Colorado River, had the reputation of being the hottest town in the United States. Development of irrigation in the Colorado and Gila River valleys in Arizona has made Yuma prosperous and it has grown to a city of about eight thousand. From Yuma to San Luis, State of Sonora, Mexico, is through a good cotton country and they were still harvesting cotton in January. Returning to the Imperial Valley, a side trip was made to Calexico, California, and Mexicali, Mexico. These two cities are practically one; just the international boundary line separates them. Mexicali is the best looking Mexican town we had seen.

From El Centro to Long Beach the route is through Southern California's wonderful citrus and deciduous fruit belt. A stop was made at Indio to see one of the large date groves, get some samples and go through the packing house. In passing through the citrus belt we visited Redlands, San Bernardino, Colton, Riverside, Corona, Chino, Pomona, Ontario and Upland. From Upland, over the foothill boulevard, through Glendora, Monrovia, Pasadena, Glendale, San Fernando and Los Angeles to Long Beach.

This ends a motor tour beginning July 1 and ending January 23, including, of course, many stopovers. The trip covered about fifteen thousand miles of travel, through twenty-seven states and provinces in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

CALIFORNIA IN GENERAL.

After so long a tour in California, covering it from Oregon to Mexico and from the Sierra to the sea, one is impressed with the fact that it is a great and wonderful state. Physically, California is one of the most remarkable, econombally, one of the more independent or self-sustaining and, in history, one of the most interesting of the union.

California is mountainous and has along the eastern border the Sierra Nevada and contiguous ranges. Along the ocean is the Coast Range. There are three great valleys—the Sacramento, in Northern California, the San Joaquin, in Central California, and the Imperial, in Southern California. There are a great many smaller valleys and large areas of hill country capable of agricultural development. In area, California is the second state. One hundred and twenty-five states the size of Rhode Island could be placed upon its surface and all have elbow room. Little "Rhody" could become completely lost in San Bernardino County. Indiana, Illinois and Iowa could all be accommodated upon California's surface and have a wide margin between them.

Just a word of history will be instructive. California was discovered by Cabrillo, a Spanish navigator, in 1542. The first colonization was by Serra, in 1769. During the two and a quarter centuries between Cabrillo and Serra, California remained practically undisturbed. Early in the sixteenth century the Aztecs occupied Mexico. The Spaniards took the country from them by conquest and ruled it for three centuries. During Spanish rule of Mexico, California became a territorial possession of Spain.

In 1821 independence was declared in Mexico. In 1822 it was proclaimed a republic and California became a possession of the Republic of Mexico. Following our war with Mexico in 1847, California, with other territory, was ceded to the United States by Mexico, under the treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo, concluded in February 1848. After the discovery of gold, the influx of gold-seekers in 1849 caused a rapid increase in population and California became the thirty-first state in 1850.

THE MISSION PERIOD.

Though the missions had their rise and fall and only existed about sixty years, California has a great deal of reverence for them as an important factor in its early history and development. To understand what the missions were, or are today, a bit of history will again be appropriate.

In 1768 Don Jose Galvez, visitador-general of Mexico, under the direction of the Spanish government fitted out an expedition of three ships for a military and religious conquest of Upper California, now California. Junipero Serra, a Franciscan father, was the leader and head of the company of priests. He is mentioned as a very pious and able man. The military was only for protection. The expedition arrived in San Diego Harbor in 1769 and the first mission was established there.

NATIVE SONS AFTER MEMBERS.

Charles E. Crowell was elected president of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. June 1 and plans many social activities during his term. At the June 15 meeting plans were outlined for a drive to double the Parlor's membership. The committee in charge is composed of: Frank B. Hart, Charles E. Crowell, William F. Kroeger. Headquarters for the drive are at 256 Locust avenue, phone 636128, and a thorough canvass is promised. Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell was among the speakers of the evening.

Edgar C. Crowell entertained members of the Parlor and their friends at his home June 18. Mrs. Elise Von Schlemmer, mother of Past President J. A. M. Schlemmer, was killed in an auto accident at Van Nuys May 29; she was a native of Germany, aged 72. Past President Edgar McFadyen and his wife (Long Beach N.D.) have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. Marie Monroe (Long Beach N.D.) at Hilgard, Oregon, the past month.

Long Beach Parlor, through Dr. S. T. Luce, recording secretary, is looking after the details for the joint Los Angeles and Orange Counties' installation at Moose Hall, 1314 Elm avenue, Long Beach, July 19. This being Saturday, it is expected a large number of Natives will take advantage of the occasion to visit the beach in the afternoon and attend the installation ceremonies in the evening. The affair will be open to the public, and eligible native sons and daughters are especially invited.

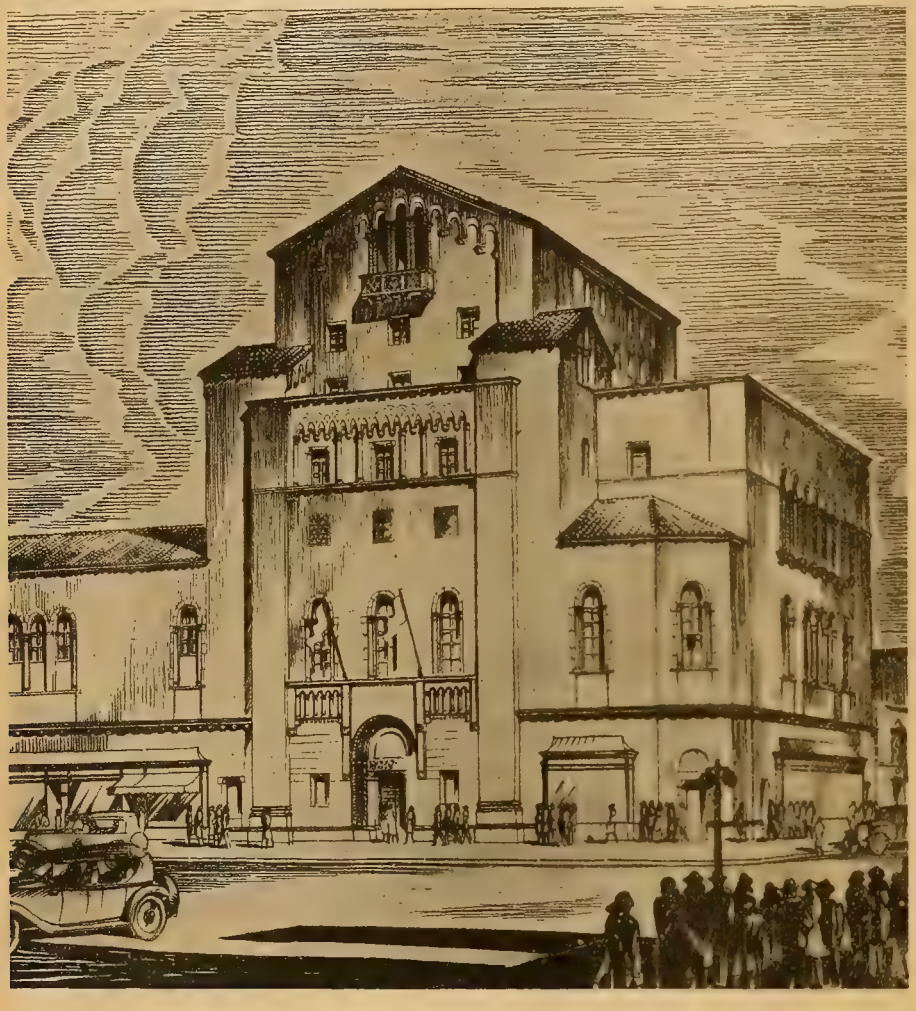
PASADENA ATHLETES ADVERTISE STATE AROUND WORLD

Carlos M. Mishler



(EDITOR "PASADENA SPORTLAND," PASADENA ATHLETIC AND COUNTRY CLUB.)

THE NUMEROUS ATHLETIC CHAMPIONS who are constantly entering sectional, national and world meets, wearing the familiar winged emblem of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club, are always keeping the name of California before the public.

Many Eastern newspapers, notably the "New York Times," in both their regular editions and mid-week pictorial, continually use pictures of athletes from the Pasadena club. A Chinese newspaper recently ran an account of the women's athletic department of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club, and with it was a photograph of a group of girl athletes from the club. The "Pesti Naplo," a daily newspaper of Budapest, ran a story on the track girls of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club, and showed a line-up of the girls awaiting events in a meet at Los Angeles.

Invitations have been extended to ten athletes of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club to participate in national meets this summer. This is in recognition of awards made at recent sectional and coast meets.

Stan Kistler is Southern Pacific Association champion diver, on the ten-foot springboard. At the recent meet at the Hotel Huntington he won over four of the best divers in the United States. By reason of this event, he is entitled to participate in the national outdoor swimming championship meet to be held in Honolulu in August, in the new natatorium which is to be opened at that time.

Bela Kendall is Pacific Coast 220-yard champion, and Southern California 500-yard champion. He is invited to enter the 220-yard and the 440-yard free-style dashes at the Honolulu national meet.

Miss Carol Fletcher is Pacific Coast champion diver, and is invited to go to New York in July or August to the national ten-foot and high platform diving contest.

Miss Lillian Copeland is national discus, shot and javelin champion. She will go East to the national women's track and field meet to enter the discus, shot and javelin events. This meet will probably be in New Jersey.

Miss Maybelle Reichardt is another girl from the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club invited to attend the national women's track and field meet. She is holder of second place in national discus and shot events.

Miss Elvira Peterson is invited to enter the hurdles and broad jump at the same meet.

The Pasadena Athletic girls' relay team, consisting of Kate Moore, Elizabeth Grassie, Ethel Nichols and Nellie Doerschlag, will also participate in the national track meet in the East.

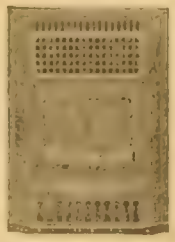
The clubhouse of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club was opened in the fall of 1926. It is a beautiful building, eight stories in height, of a very unique but simple design. The influence of the early Christian, Byzantine and Northern Italian style of architecture is felt in the style employed in the clubhouse. This is also true of the treatment of the interior designing.

The huge main lounge, with its attractive blue vaulted ceiling, is especially notable. There is a large main dining-room, also a grill-room, and four private dining-rooms. A women's lounge, a billiard-room and a card-room are features of the clubhouse. The gymnasium and the plunge are, of course, two of the most prominent departments of the building.

Sam T. Bailey is director of athletics. He is assisted by Ad Garlock, instructor in boxing and wrestling. Mrs. Aileen Allen is in charge of women's athletics, and also the swimming and diving department.

During the first winter season of the club, there were guests from far and near and many people of national and international fame were entertained under its roof. One of the most distinguished guests was the great pianist and Polish statesman, Ignace Paderewski. William Allen White, the nationally-known editor of Kansas, was another guest. In fact, the names of many of Pasadena's winter colony of famous personages are found on the guest register of the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club.

Although the club has not yet completed its first year of activity, it has become firmly established as the center of social life in Pasadena and the community. It stands for the best in athletics and promotes clean sport. It sponsors athletes who are going forth to meets all over the country, and across the Atlantic and Pacific as well, and carrying the fame of Pasadena and California.



BIG REDWOOD GROVE IS ADDED TO STATE HOLDINGS.

Eureka (Humboldt County).—The Charles N. Felton Memorial Redwood Grove in this county was added to California's state park system at dedicatory ceremonies June 12.

The 100-acre tract, said to be one of the grandest redwood groves in the state, is a gift from Mrs. Kate Felton-Neilson of San Francisco, as a memorial to her father.

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

NATIVE SONS PLACE CORNERSTONE

WITH IMPRESSIVE SERVICES CONducted by officials of the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, the cornerstone of Los Angeles' magnificent new $5,000,000 twenty-eight-story city hall was laid June 22. Thousands witnessed the ceremonies, which were participated in by Grand President Charles A. Thompson, Grand First Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Second Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Secretary John T. Regan and Senior Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger.

Edward J. Delorey, commissioner of public works, presided and introduced the speakers, and the program was broadcast.

"Although we have given you the largest and finest city hall that money was available for," said Mayor George E. Cryer, "a city hall that ranks with the finest in the world, there is no doubt in my mind but what this great structure, commodious as it is, will some day be inadequate to meet the needs of the far-greater Los Angeles of the future.

"In a century or more, Los Angeles will be far beyond the bounds of our present imagination. All that we see now is an approach to what the future holds. The board of public works and everyone who had a part in building this magnificent city hall may well feel proud of their work, and may the building be an inspiration to every public official who places public service above self."

"The stupendous growth of Los Angeles staggers even the imagination," declared Governor C. C. Young. "We must have a building here to fittingly represent the State of California—something which will adequately recognize the importance of Los Angeles and California South. Let me deliver this message to you from the State of California: We recognize Los Angeles as the most rapidly growing city in the world. The State of California is proud of you, and you have only to command us for anything which lies close to your hearts."

"This is the dawn of a new era for Los Angeles," said Daniel F. McGarry, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. "It indicates the doffing of the apparel of a hamlet and the putting on of the raiment of a metropolis. Ever since 1920 our commercial progress has been such as to astound even ourselves. And we are only starting."

Speaking for the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, Grand President Charles A. Thompson said: "The grand officers of the Native Sons are here to exemplify by their presence their great interest in this all-important event. We would consider ourselves derelict in our duty if we did not take due recognition of this great event in the state's history. The honor of laying the cornerstone has been dear to us."

Preceding the ceremonies was a parade, from the present city hall to the new edifice. It was escorted by the fire department band and a detail of police, and included state, city and county officials, grand officers of the Native Sons and representatives of all the Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters in Los Angeles County.

The new city hall, which will be ready for occupancy about January 1, is 250 feet wide at the base and 450 feet long. Its tower, rising twenty-eight stories above the first floor, is 425 feet above the street pavement. It stands upon historic ground, the site of the first city hall, an adobe building.

"7TH HEAVEN" ENTHRALLS.

Carthay Circle Theatre, in the western Wilshire district and just off Wilshire boulevard, is now showing "7th Heaven" and enjoying a remarkable matinee patronage, owing to its appeal to the feminine population of the southland through an ideal location at Carthay Center away from the traffic congestion and heat of the downtown district, its quaint tearoom where elaborate luncheons or simple refreshments may be enjoyed, its beautiful park and broad promenades, and its exclusive system of free paved parking stalls directly accessible to the theatre entrance from four different directions, according to the management, which has watched with interest the popularity of this sensational motion picture and the theatre in which it is being presented.

Those who wish to see "7th Heaven," the $1,000,000 William Fox production based on the famous stage play which ran for three years in New York City, will be enthralled with its presentation at the Carthay Circle Theatre with Carli Elinor's famous concert orchestra and Jack Laughlin's sensational prologue, "Paris." For the convenience of hostesses planning matinee parties, the management each day sets aside a block of the Circle Theatre's best seats and these may be obtained by phoning the box office direct

The N S G W Interparlor Committee, southern district, presented to the Frank Wiggins trade school at the closing ceremonies June 16 a large California State (Bear) Flag, to grace the school building along with the Flag of the United States. Burrel D Neighbours made the presentation address and in the course of his remarks gave a brief history of the flag.

The committee was active during the past month in arranging for the cornerstone laying at Los Angeles' new city hall, and is now sponsoring a joint installation of officers of the Los Angeles and Orange Counties' Parlors at Moose Hall, Long Beach, July 16. Following the ceremonies dancing will be in order. A good time is assured and a large attendance of southland Natives is urged.

NEW MEN'S DORMITORY AT U.S.C.

A new men's dormitory is being built upon the campus of the University of Southern California, to be completed and ready for occupancy by September, in time for the opening of the fall semester.

Planned to house 150 out-of-town Trojans, the men's residence hall, comprising three stories and a basement, is to have a huge dining hall and a large drawing room, besides sleeping quarters.

DAY DREAMS.

(Mary Elizabeth Houston.)

Out in the woods there's a babbling brook,
Where I love to sit and read a book—
Both of fairy tales and history too,
Of the old, old witch with the magic shoe,
Of the kings and princes, great were they,
And the wonderful things they had to say
"Be true to your country, pure in mind,
Be thoughtful and loving and always kind."
I dreamed as I read 'twould be fun for me
A king or a prince or a lord to be.
I woke from my dream and began to shout:
"Oh, I'd much rather be a good girl scout!"

(These lines were composed by 8-year-old Mary Elizabeth Houston, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Houston, a pupil in the fourth grade of the Wilton Place public-school.—Editor.)

NATIVE SON PIANIST IN RECITAL.

Keith Corelli, pianist, gave a recital of modern music June 20, at his residence studio, 2954 West Eighth street. A feature of the program was the first performance on the coast of "Scarlattiana," by Alfredo Casella, for piano and chamber orchestra, based on themes of Scarlatti. In this number he had the assistance of the Ton-Kunstler quartet, a well-known radio organization composed of Josef Karl, violinist, Lionel Melchior, violist, Otto Merklein, cellist and George Von Strimple, bass. Corelli also played two of his own compositions: "Involution" and concert paraphrases on "La Derniere Valse," by Oscar Strauss.

Corelli, a member of Ramona Parlor N.S.G.W., recently returned from a successful concert tour of the Pacific Coast, among his engagements being one recital in Seattle and three appearances in San Francisco.

N.D. CARD PARTY AND DANCE.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated two candidates June 15, and a member of the Los Angeles fire department gave an interesting and instructive address on the use of the fire-alarm box. The card party of June 8, Doris Willis chairman, was much enjoyed.

The Parlor's program for July includes: 13th, card party; 20th, initiation; 27th, dance. During the month, too, the newly elected officers will be installed, Jennie D. Raymond becoming the president.

RELIC ADDED TO PIONEER MONUMENT.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

WELL TO TAKE STOCK WATER SUPPLY NOW AT HAND

FURTHER DEVELOPMENT OF AGRICULtural lands in California depends without question upon an amplification of the water supply of the state. Millions of acres of fertile lands await only the touch of irrigation to bring them into abundant production. There is, of course, a question as to whether this is desirable. But taking for granted that more water will mean greater production and increased wealth for the state, the means of securing this water becomes the problem first of all to be solved. And while we are discussing the possibilities of bringing the tremendous overflow of the winter's rains in the Sacramento Valley to relieve the parched acres of the San Joaquin in the summer; while we talk of running rivers upstream, of pumping almost inconceivable quantities of water up what must be great heights; while we reckon the feasibility of high-line canals along the foothills, perhaps it would be well to take stock of the supply now at hand and its proper use, so that it may reach more farms.

A look at barren wastes in the San Joaquin Valley and other parts of the state, where overirrigation has brought the water table to the surface with its attendant alkali, emphasizes only too well the dangers of using too much water. There are hundreds of thousands of acres in California this summer where too much water is being used—where it is actually being wasted. Perhaps it will not result in laying waste the soil, but it is a real danger to the condition of the land, and it is poor and wasteful farm practice. Use the soil auger to determine if water is needed, and use the water only when it is needed. Thousands of acres of trees are suffering because they are receiving too much water. Irrigate thoroughly when the water is used, but not carelessly. Cement-lined ditches, more water tenders and, above all, care by the farmers, would make the present irrigation water supply of California go at least fifty percent further than it does today. More water eventually will be needed, as demands upon agriculture increase; but today there is enough water for all that part of the state that can produce profitably, if that water be carefully used.

KILL THE WEEDS.

Watch the weeds. There's where the moisture goes. Only a negligible portion of the soil moisture is taken direct from the ground by evaporation; it goes into the air by transpiration through the leaves of plants. This cannot be avoided, of course, in the case of crops produced; but there is no excuse for losing valuable moisture from the soil through weeds. Don't worry about the dust mulch, that won't help or hinder very much; but see that cultivation is sufficient and thorough enough to get the weeds.

The soil need not be disturbed deeply in cultivation, leave that for the chisel or subsoiler in a special operation; but get the weeds. The weeds removed, further cultivation is not only useless, but expensive. That farmer is a poor businessman who does not get the weeds that rob the fertility and moisture of his soil; but he is just as poor a businessman when he goes ahead cultivating after the weeds are gone.

BREAKING UP SUBSOIL.

The dry months are upon us. With more rain than usual this year, and the precipitation coming further into the summer than usual, soil moisture conditions have been good in California this season. In this year, however, as in others not so well favored, that soil which is capable of holding the greatest amount of the winter's rains is the most economical in irrigating. Shallow soils, underlaid with hardpan through which the water cannot penetrate, dry easily and demand early and frequent irrigation. Hence the farmer who has kept his eye on progress has long ago broken up the hard pan, the plow pan and the irrigation pan.

Heavy subsoiling machinery is available now which breaks up this underground formation, lets roots and water through, permits of moisture storage and insures bigger and better crops. The time to subsoil is when the ground is dry and in a condition to shatter easily. Money spent in subsoiling, even in friable soils, is well spent. Plan now to add to your moisture storage for next winter by deepening your soil reservoir.

IT PAYS TO THIN.

The farmer who hates to thin his fruit, should try at least one tree next year; or he should watch the trees of his neighbor who did thin this year. He will find, for one thing, that the properly thinned tree will yield a greater tonnage of fruit than will the tree upon which all the fruit was permitted to remain. He will find, too, that the fruit from the thinned tree will be larger in size and better in quality, hence will bring better prices.

One two-and-a-half-inch peach is worth more than two two-inch peaches. Another thing it is well to remember, is that the unthinned tr gives more of its vitality to its crop, suffers heavier drain, than does the thinned tree; that the following year the results may be ev more clearly shown. It pays to thin, if profi are figured as meaning anything to the farme

PINCH BACK IN SUMMER.

Watch the young trees this summer; aid the growth and save yourself work this winter judicious summer pruning. In the spring, it all right to remove all the surplus sprouts th appear. At this time of the year, however, it wise to retain all the foliage possible, so mere pinch the tips of the secondary shoots to ho them back. The tree can be shaped during t summer, and if the work is well done, the tr will gain in vigor and vitality through havi less to support during the months of July a August.

GREENS FOR POULTRY.

There are substitutes for green feed for pou try, but be sure you have the right ones befo you depend on them entirely. Nutritional di orders from lack of green feed are many amo chickens at this time of the year. Blindness not the least of them, and if your chickens a pear to be in need of glasses, the real need more likely to be something green to supply t necessary vitamines.

MINERALS FOR COWS.

Cattle need minerals, just as they need oth elements in their diet. Lime, phosphate, a and iodine are among the most essential th may be lacking among dairy cattle; and t farmer should be sure he is feeding so that h stock gets the necessary amounts of the mine als. If he finds his feed is not adequate in th particular, a special mineral mixture should used to supplement the regular rations.

BEWARE FAKE REMEDIES.

The United States Department of Agricultu estimates that stockmen in the United Stat spend five hundred millions of dollars for fal remedies and untried cure-alls for their liv stock. This money is not merely wasted, b much of it goes for materials that actually damage to the stock. If the stock owner fee his animals are not in the proper condition, will do well to consult a veterinarian. He w be sure he knows what is wrong when he gets report, and will be able to combat the troub intelligently. If he buys something from t itinerant peddler or as a result of an adverti ment which promises too much, he may get in real trouble. Spend money to protect the herd but spend it wisely.

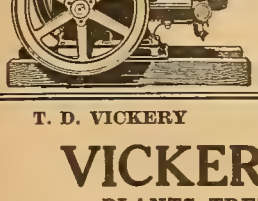
SULPHUR IN GRAPE CARS.

Pumping sulphur fumes into cars loaded wi grapes has been found to be advantageous checking mold while the cars are on their way the Eastern markets. Ten cars were treat three years ago, and last year about a thousa were sulphured. The treatment is for jul grapes, it being taken for granted that tab grapes are of such quality and in such conditi that treatment of this kind is not necessary.

SUMMER SORES HEREDITARY.

Summer sores upon horses are not caused the larvae of a fly, but are an inheritance fro sire or dam, according to investigations conduc ed at the College of Agriculture of the Unive sity of California by Dr. G. H. Hart and C. Howell of the Animal Husbandry Division. T larvae of the habronema always was thought be the cause, but it has been found in Californ that the sores exist while the flies do not; a that the horses troubled with the disease are families in which the disease is common. Sur mer sores appear without apparent reason du ing the hot weather, refuse to yield to any trea ment, and heal up with the advent of low te peratures in the fall. A bare scar is left, and many instances the horses are destroyed, so s vere do the infestations become.

THE BOARDER FRUIT TREE.



Much has been said of methods to make fru trees pay for their keep. by spraying, prunin fertilizing, etc. But there are many instanc when the tree will not yield to the best of trea ment, when it is a variety simply not adapted to the locality. If a tree or trees of any variety do not do well, look about a bit before spending too much money. See if that variety does well anywhere else in the vicinity, and get the opinion of someone who knows, such as your farm advisor. You may save a lot of money by getting information on this subject, and if you find the tree is wrong in its setting you can work it over next winter to a profitable variety.

PREVENT FOREST FIRES.

Now comes the dry season and forest fires. Agriculture is interested in forest fires, or should be. Every forest fire means less watershed protection, hence less water storage in the mountains and a smaller irrigation supply the next year. Let the vacationist do his share in prevention, by precept and by practice, in preventing the annual disaster that visits the California forests.

AGRICULTURAL CLUB CAMPS.

Boys and girls who are members of agricultural clubs in thirty three California counties will enjoy outings in the mountains surrounding the agricultural valleys this summer. These camps run from three days to a week, and are conducted by the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California. Five counties of the upper San Joaquin Valley will camp in Whitaker's Forest, where the university has donated a club campsite.

NEW APPLE LAW.

The new apple law goes into effect the last of this month, and its provisions are of interest to orchardists. Two additional grades, "Fancy Loose" and "C Loose," are provided. Cooking varieties may be shipped in an immature condition. A half-box is added as a standard container. An entire shipment must average within the tolerances prescribed, and not more than one-fourth may exceed the tolerances by not more than one-half of the amount allowed. Internal browning which cannot be determined by external examination is permitted in the unclassified grade.

CAN WHAT YOU CAN.

Any surplus of vegetables or meat may be held for winter consumption by canning, as is the common practice for fruit. Chicken is easily canned; and root vegetables may be dried as well as canned. The canned fruits, vegetables and meats save grocery bills in the winter.

VACCINATION OF PIGS.

Vaccinate pigs against hog cholera at the age of about eight weeks, or when they weigh around forty pounds. Get a veterinarian to do the work, if possible; but be sure always to have someone who knows how the operation is performed. Get fresh serum always, and see that the sanitary conditions are the best possible. Nurse the pig along on a light diet until he has recovered, keeping him as comfortable as possible. At the first sign of the disease anywhere in the vicinity, vaccinate the pigs; they are becoming too valuable now to neglect.

CLEVIS PIN SUBSTITUTES.

A lost clevis pin is a source of annoyance. If a bolt is used as a substitute, it usually bends and becomes useless. But the development of the automobile wrecking yard has brought one boon to the user of horses, for there he finds old spindle pins which cost little and which make splendid clevis pins. They stand all the strains put upon them, and do not bend or break.

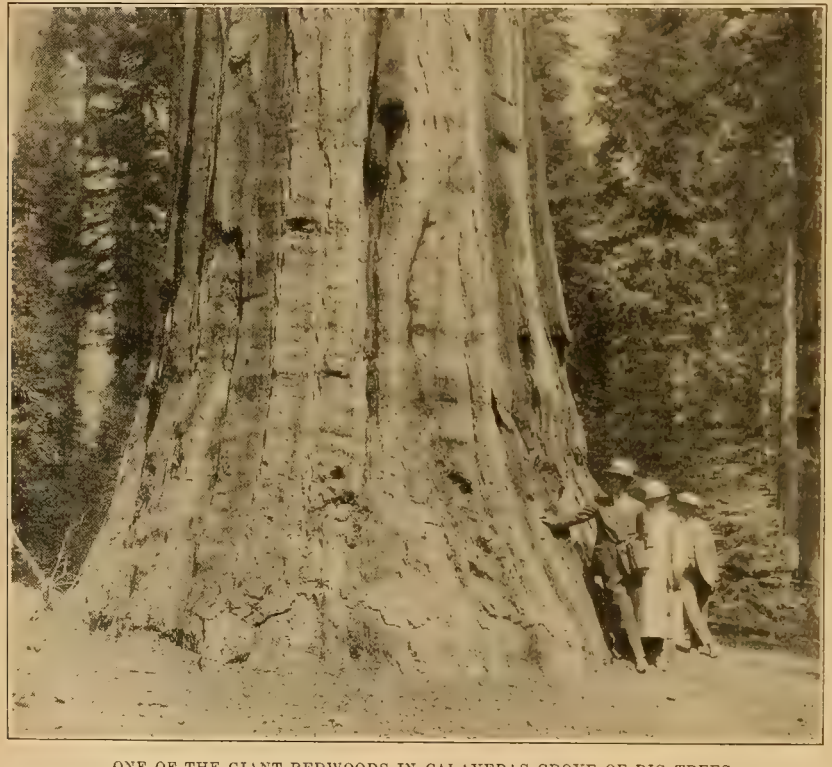
STOCKTON—PORTAL TO CALIFORNIA'S VACATION LAND

A. M. Robertson

(MANAGER, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, STOCKTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)



HISTORIC STOCKTON, IN THE CENTER of California's great amphitheatre, made up of the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, bounded by the Sierra Nevadas on the east and the Coast Range on the west, joining at the northern and southern ends, is the portal to a region of natural attractions and charm where every recreational resort and outdoor diversion may be enjoyed.

Extending from the Tehachapi Range on the south to the northernmost Siskiyous, and from the lake region at the Sierra's crest to the Golden Gate, is a gorgeous land of indefinable splendor—a land of beautiful forests of giant trees; towering domes and pinnacles of rock; sheer mountain precipices overlooking majestic canyons, traversed by winding rivers; cataracts and lacey waterfalls which plunge over formidable cliffs; crystal-clear lakes nestling in exquisite settings of valley and mountain; and the whole land of plumed valleys and uplifted mountain, beribboned with a multiplicity of highways which radiate from the City of Stockton to every nook and corner of this outing paradise. In this region every form of outdoor recreation may be enjoyed: camping in all its forms and allurement, hiking, horseback riding, fishing, boating and surf bathing, all within a stone's throw of this dominant interior industrial and agricultural center of California—the City of Stockton.

Transportation of every description serves the throng of recreation seekers who annually join the caravan to enjoy the scenic delights and grandeur of this colorful playground.

The forests, mountains, beaches, lakes, streams, giant sequoias and historic mining towns of the early gold mining districts made famous in history and by the writings of Bret Harte and Mark Twain, are all but a short distance from Stockton. Rest, rejuvenation and every outdoor recreation await the lover of the great outofdoors, from the venerable forest monarchs of the sequoia and the minarets and towers of Yosemite to the indigo waters of Lake Tahoe; from the jagged canyons and savage beauty of the Feather River to Nature's curiosity shop in the Lassen Volcanic National Park region; on past the sculptured rock formations of the Mount Shasta country and traversing the northwestern tier of California counties through stately forests of redwoods to Mount Tamalpais —"Guardian of the Golden Gate"; thence on past sparkling beaches and through the Santa Cruz Mountains to historic old Monterey and Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Earth nowhere else possesses the amazing forests of giant sequoias, pines and fir and fantastic shattered rock to be found in the greatest of national parks—Sequoia, General Grant and Yosemite. Here is sanctuary for those who would rest and recreate midst awe-inspiring surroundings. The wilderness of natural beauty is within easy reach, and the charm of its [illegible] mountain peaks, roaring streams and [illegible] entrancing valleys will hold a lasting fascination for the visitor who beholds it. The [illegible] of this setting. Indeed, a visit to Yosemite, [illegible] of a million sequoia trees and the [illegible] heights of the Sierras which [illegible] such in Nature that is majestic and sublime will make the affection of the visitor more nearly for these sections of California.

And for those who would travel a region of romance and enjoy the varied scenic settings of the Mother Lode, or old gold mining district, the Bret Harte country will take the visitor through "ghost cities" of long ago, one time hectic mining towns whose hell roaring life of the early fifties has been made famous in the works of Bret Harte and Mark Twain. On through the Southern Mother Lode from "Jimtown" and Sonora to Angels Camp and northward, are evidences of the "days of old, the days of gold, the days of '49."

From Angels Camp the Big Trees highway penetrates the forest to reach the famous Calaveras Big Trees group, where hundreds of giant sequoias more than twenty feet in diameter offer the sanctuary of a venerable temple that is one of the show places of California. These trees are the oldest of living things. Here one can enjoy the beauties of Nature and feel the insignificance of man compared to the grandeur of Nature, and reflect on what these giant age-old trees might tell of history could they but speak our language. Calaveras Grove of Big Trees is perhaps the first of these giant sequoias to be discovered in California, because of its close proximity to the early-day mining district, which was the first part of the Sierra Nevada Range to be inhabited by White men. For the painter, photographer and poet there is no greater allurement or fascination to satisfy the paint-brush or camera, than in this grove of big trees.

Further on to the north is the lake region of the high Sierras where the world-famous Lake Tahoe nestles at an elevation of 6,225 feet in a sculptured bowl at the crest of the range, dominated on every side by lofty peaks which tower from 9,000 to 11,000 feet above the floor of the valley. The startling beauty and immensity of Tahoe's water stretch can only be appreciated by cruising the course that follows the deeply indented shore line. Here are mountain resorts, flower-bedecked meadows, streams and a multitude of smaller lakes and rare animal and bird life not found in the lower land. Boating and fishing are Lake Tahoe's greatest attractions, although the lover of art finds like enchantment and opportunity to satisfy his imagination and craving for the beauties of Nature.

The Feather River Canyon is a rugged and picturesque region of virgin forests, rock-bound canyons and turbulent streams. In the setting adjacent to the canyon country proper, is a region dominated by Mount Elwell, where is found a chain of smaller "Tahoes" which stretches for nearly a hundred miles. Blairsden is the gateway to this region, and to this rugged section come the thousands who wish to recreate in a primeval environment where there is an abundance of fish and game.

And further to the north is Lassen Volcanic National Park—a region of weird volcanic formations and natural earth freaks that are worth a considerable journey. The Lassen region is one of contradictory miracles. There are mud pots which have been boiling for ages; crystal-clear icy streams of spring water follow alongside of boiling rivulets; boiling lakes alongside of ice caves which never melt; areas heavily mantled with forest adjoining bare lava fields and cinder cones. The whole region can be reached over good roads and traversed by trails laid out for the convenience of the visitor by the Federal Government.

And continuing the journey northward, is the outing country adjacent to California's grand old snow mountain—Mount Shasta. Good trails lead to the timber line and the ascent to the summit may be made and return during the same day during the months of July and August with the least hazard.

From Stinson Beach on the Pacific Ocean, under the shelter of Mount Tamalpais, on through Sonoma, Napa and Lake Counties, are a wealth of scenic charm and an artistic arrangement of landscapes that will enthuse the visitor. Scattered all through this great recreational district are more mineral springs with medicinal value than can be found in all of Europe. These springs in their various combinations are beneficial in combating all the ills of the human race.

On to the north is a fascinating country of mad rivers, redwood forests, uplifted hills, ocean

SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

SAN FRANCISCO PRODUCTS HAVE WORLD WIDE DISTRIBUTION

Capen A. Fleming

(MANAGER, INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

PERHAPS YOU DINED AT A CAFETEria. If you did, San Francisco's industry made it possible for you to be served. From the time you started in the serving line until you passed the tall nickel-plated coffee urns, San Francisco-made products were at your service. Or if you dined at your favorite hotel, you were nonetheless eating food prepared by means of kitchen equipment made here, even though it was not so much in evidence as some of the equipment was at the cafeteria.

San Francisco, in short, with its half-dozen corporations which completely outfit the hotel kitchen, is the Western center for the manufacture of hotel supplies and equipment. One of these concerns, which completely equips the hotel dining-room also, is the largest hotel supply house west of Chicago.

Since we are dealing with hotels as buyers of San Francisco's industrial output, it is well to stop and take cognizance of what makes hotels possible. Hotels and restaurants are found only where there is spending power, and spending power is present only where things are produced. Perhaps the proprietor of one of our large department stores, or some of the salesmen, were dinner patrons at a hotel. Just what is it that makes possible the income of the store which gives them a livelihood? Is it the bank president or the bank teller who patronizes the store? Their purchases are helpful, but what, in turn, makes the prosperity of the bank? The bank may have among its depositors the accounts of dozens of municipal employees and of two or three theaters. These are very welcome and valuable; but, again, what makes them possible?

Picture, for a moment, a store that deals entirely in goods which are made elsewhere, and you picture the general store in the crossroads village. Let us imagine for a moment that such a general store were at Second and Market streets, San Francisco, and that there were no city here at all. The store would handle flour and general food products. It would stock a small supply of kitchen utensils, some candy, some piece goods, some men's and women's clothing, etc., all made in the East. Who, now, would buy from our little crossroads store? Naturally, only the few settlers, the people driving in from the farms around Twin Peaks and down the peninsula, and the seamen coming ashore from some chance ship which might anchor in the bay.

But let us suppose that some one of the ingenious inhabitants were to start in a small way to manufacture certain kitchen utensils, and some other citizen were to begin preserving and canning fruit because of an apparent opportunity to sell these products to the few ships finding their way into the harbor. To do this, however, each of the manufacturers would be forced to send back East for other members of his family and for acquaintances to come and work in the new factories. Upon arrival they would begin buying their supplies at the general store. The ships, finding it convenient to buy from the local factories, would make heavy demands upon the two enterprising manufacturers who, in turn, would have to place additional employees on their payrolls. A little restaurant and hotel might now begin business to serve the factory employees, and also the several additional clerks which have been found necessary because of the increased number of customers at the general store.

It would, of course, only be a short time until several other factories would be started, because success in making one article always leads to a venture in the manufacture of others. More ships would begin to arrive to bring raw materials for the growing factories as well as to carry to other ports much of their output. The employees in the factories, the growing number of employees in the general store, as well as those in the hotel and restaurant, would make it possible for a small theater and a bank to be started.

And so it is that our hotels, our restaurants, banks, theaters, department stores, our port, and even the city government itself, have grown up during the years just in proportion as the industrial foundation upon which San Francisco is built has grown outward. And so it will always be.

The reason, then, that we have a hotel supply industry is that we have a great community of industry which supports all the payroll activities behind the spending power of the hotel and restaurant clientele. For the city to grow, our industry must increase, both through the increment of the plants we already have and by acquiring logical new ones.

Our street-car window posters recently told us that we have 1,600 hotels in San Francisco. To tell of the articles we make here to supply those hotels, as well as the ones throughout the West, would mean practically an enumeration of the articles found in the kitchen.

Already we have mentioned the tall nickel-plated coffee urns. These are made here in four plants, one of which specializes in their manufacture and turns out between ninety and one hundred per month, along with a patented aluminum percolator. The coffee urn stands are made in these shops, as well. Besides being shipped up and down the coast, these San Francisco-made coffee urns can be found in Hawaii, Australia and China.

Cafeteria steam tables are fabricated in San Francisco in the six hotel supply plants, although one or two make a specialty of them. In the kitchen of the hotel, restaurant or cafeteria we find, among the articles made in San Francisco, the large French range and overhanging hood, the heavy-duty bake oven, potato steamers, room service heaters—a closed metal portable cabinet, heated by electricity or charcoal, in which food is kept when served in one's room—dish tables, charcoal broilers, gas fry plates, rotisseries—the grill before which the fowl or steak slowly revolves while cooking — sinks, steam pressure cookers, tray trucks, cooks' tables, pan racks, roast pans, steam jacket kettles for making soup, etc., plate warmers, food storage cabinets, chop suey ranges, scrap blocks and garbage cans.

Perhaps the term "scrap block" may mean nothing. In fact, it is not a block at all, but rather a hollow cylinder which acts as a funnel for scraps on the way to the garbage can. The interesting thing about this is that one of our San Francisco supply houses has a patent on a scrap block that is made practically of solid rubber and is considered so useful that it finds distribution all over the United States, in the islands, and even in England. This same concern ships its heavy-duty bake ovens all over the country, and into Canada, each one weighing from a ton and a quarter to a ton and a half. Another of these San Francisco factories has shipped its make of ranges to Panama, South Africa, Guam, Manila, Japan, China and the islands, as well as to the home market.

From what has been said, it should not be understood that all the supplies sold by our half-dozen supply houses are made here, but at least all those which have been mentioned are. There are many specialties, and some of these are made locally. Take, for instance, waffle irons. We have two concerns here which make these. They are not the old-fashioned ones, but automatic irons which are heated top and bottom and do not have to be turned to brown the waffle on both sides. Then there are our refrigerator plants which make installations for hotels and restaurants. One company makes small unit steam-pressure cookers for homes. And so it goes. Our hotel supply houses serve the West, much of the equipment which they sell is made here in San Francisco, and of the locally manufactured equipment, some lines, as stated, find their way into the various countries of the world.

Perhaps the white-enamel trimmed gas stove in your kitchen was made here in San Francisco. In any event, just such modern stoves as we find among the new installations these days are made here, including practically every part except the porcelain handles on the gas controls. San Francisco has one of these large stove plants, the headquarters for a second, whose plant is at Newark, California, and Oakland has the third. This activity easily entitles the San Francisco Bay area to be, as it is, the stove manufacturing center of the West.

A few of the steps which take place in our San Francisco plant may well be reviewed. Take, for instance, the mixing pipe and burner on your gas stove. You will note that this is made in one piece from the front of the stove to and including the gas flame portion. It is made of cast iron on the same principle as explained when we were considering electric fixtures which are manufactured in San Francisco, i. e., we have two level-full boxes of casting sand, one of which contains the full length impression of the long mixing pipe and burner, this impression being only one-half the diameter of the pipe in depth. The other half is impressed in the second half of the box of sand. Then a core, made of sand mixed with linseed oil and a little flour, is molded into the same shape as the burner, except smaller in diameter, and this, after being baked, is suspended in the impression in one-half of the sand box. As the two halves of the box are placed face to face, the core remains suspended in the cavity, and when the metal is poured the sand core is completely surrounded with it. This core is easily pulverized after the casting has cooled, leaving a hollow burner shaft. A special machine, with as many drills as there are holes to be made in the burner through which the gas flows, now drills all these holes at one time.

If the stove is to be one with a lid top, six of these tops, after being cast, are placed on a platform which moves back, forth and sidewise under a revolving emery wheel, with the result that the surface is ground down until all parts are level, and the entire top, including the lids, is smooth and even. This plant casts nine tons of pig iron a day.

The long stove legs of the modern gas stove are sometimes cast, but in the San Francisco plant they are stamped from thirteen-gauge sheet steel. First, a die under a very heavy press cuts the proper design for the leg. Other machinery then shapes it. The stove parts that are to be nickel-plated are first ground smooth on an emery-covered felt wheel. They are then copper-plated and buffed, and afterward, nickel-plated and buffed.

But we have to go to San Francisco's only porcelain enamel factory to see how the parts of the stove to be enameled are covered. In the porcelain enamel plant we find that glass, specially prepared, but nevertheless glass, is ground to a fine powder in revolving pebble mills and then mixed with water to form a thick paste. The sheet metal tray or panel of the stove is first annealed by being run into the high temperature oven for about two minutes. This removes stresses and strains in the metal. It then goes successively through acid, water, alkaline and borax baths, to prepare the surface to receive the enamel. The sheet metal is now dipped into this ground-glass paste, drained and placed in a drying oven for the purpose of evaporating all the moisture. It comes from the drying oven with nothing but a coat of white powder which could be easily rubbed off. To fix the coating, the whole thing is placed in the high-temperature oven, in which a temperature of 1,700 degrees is maintained, and kept there for about three minutes. This extreme heat fuses the glass powder into a cohesive mass which adheres tightly to the metal. A second coat is sprayed on, and the other operations are repeated.

This porcelain plant makes large and small enamel advertising signs. When lettering is to be used, the background is prepared as just stated, and after it is fused, a ground glass mixture, which has been colored, is stenciled on, and this is also fused by again running the sign into the oven. Such small enamel signs as "Tradesmen's Entrance," "Telephone," "Push," "Private," etc., are also made here.

When the enameled parts are returned to the San Francisco stove manufacturer, and the stoves have been assembled, they are shipped from here all up and down the coast, as far east as Utah, and to the islands. The plant whose headquarters and warehouse are in San Francisco, with works at Newark, is the largest stove plant in the West. This corporation also maintains a branch factory in Los Angeles.

We not only make stoves in San Francisco, but furnaces as well,—furnaces from the smallest to the largest, that is, from the small sheet metal gas furnaces to steam boilers used to heat our great office buildings, hotels and industrial plants.

San Francisco-made gas furnaces are of several types. There is the kind which is installed in the basement, the warm air radiating to all parts of the house by means of pipes. Then there is the pipeless furnace from which all the warm air rises through one register, and further, the small gas furnace to be installed on the back porches of houses without basements, or of flats. This type has a fan attachment to force the warm air through the pipes into the house. One factory here produces gas furnaces on a large scale, shipping them all over the country, even into the East, and more than a half-dozen concerns fabricate large steam boilers, both the type that is fired internally and the one fired externally.

But under these great industrial boilers, there must be either coal heat or oil. The fact that in so many cases oil burners are installed and provide heat for steam production is a matter of which San Franciscans can well be proud, since it is here in San Francisco that a popular type of oil burner found its beginning, and San Francisco is today the national center for the production of large oil burners for industrial installations, including such major ones as hotels, office buildings, steamships, factories and the like. The city is also the Western center for the production of all types, large and small.

It was here that the rotary principle was developed, and the manufacturers who perfected it sold a million and a quarter dollars' worth of San Francisco-made oil burners last year. Two weeks ago burners made here amounting in value to $11,000 were shipped to Shanghai, China. The principle of the oil burner is fairly simple to state. Oil must be atomized, or converted from a liquid to a mist or fog before it can properly function as a producer of heat. To make this possible, in case of a rotary burner, a copper cup with slightly flaring walls, set with open end pointing toward the furnace, is made to revolve very rapidly. On the flaring inside surface of this cup oil is fed continuously, but as it hits the surface it is instantly spun to the edge of the cup. Centrifugal force would send it against the sides of the furnace as it leaves the spinning cup, but this is provided against by a heavy draft of air produced by a motor-driven fan, the air rushing out of a small concentric opening around the revolving cup, and between it and the casing. As the air rushes forward it intercepts and mixes with the vaporized oil which is being spun from the cup. The mixture having been ignited, shoots forward like a shot from a gun while combustion takes place.

A second type is known as the mechanical oil burner. In this case the oil, under pressure, spurts into a cone-shaped tube through two holes so cut as to direct it against the walls of the cone. This starts a whirling motion which is exaggerated as the swirling oil is crowded toward the point of the cone where it leaves, as through a nozzle. The centrifugal force attained causes the oil which rushes from the small orifice to burst into a mist as it strikes the air.

San Francisco, the oil burner manufacturing center, has at least eight concerns producing burners, while there are two others in Oakland. One of San Francisco's manufacturers has installed his product at the Fleishhacker playfield pool to heat water for swimming. Incidentally, this San Francisco swimming pool is the largest one in the world.

In other articles we have referred to the fact that San Francisco manufacturers are finding it more and more possible to manufacture here and ship East, and we have another example of this, for one of our oil burner plants ships fully eighty percent of its product out of the immediate San Francisco market, the most of these shipments being made to the Atlantic seaboard.

FUNDS WANTED FOR GOOD CAUSE.

"Editor Grizzly Bear — Dear Sir: Several months ago you were good enough to print a request for Native Sons and Native Daughters to urge the passage of a bill through the State Legislature creating the Tamalpais State Park. The bill was passed and signed by the governor in due course, and the park will soon be a realization. The bill carries an appropriation of $20,000, but before this becomes available the sum of $40,000 must be raised by public subscription; that is, for each $2 that we raise the state will contribute $1, up to the sum of $20,000.

"The Tamalpais Conservation Club, with its affiliated clubs, has undertaken the task of raising the sum of $40,000 and subscriptions are being received from all parts of the state, our Native Sons and Daughters particularly feeling that this is a most worthy project which will protect practically the whole Mount Tamalpais district for future generations.

"There are 554 acres to be purchased, and when added to the Muir Woods National Monument and the Marin municipal water district will make a continuous park area of 12,264 acres.

"Subscriptions from Parlors of the Native Sons and Native Daughters, as well as from individuals, should be sent to Wm. P. Halliday, treas-

CALIFORNIA NOW BOASTS LARGEST HIGHWAY BRIDGE IN WORLD.

Regardless of the fact that the Carquinez bridge, opened to the public May 21, is a private enterprise, the California State Highway Commission is taking more than a passing interest in it owing to the fact that the Pacific highway and many other state road routes will direct traffic to the new bridge, says "California Highways," publication of the California Highway Commission. The amount of traffic the bridge is called upon to accommodate will have a direct bearing on future state highway construction in that region. The new bridge is the largest highway bridge in the world and provides a continuous overland highway from Canada to Mexico and unites Northern California and portions of Central California with the bay district metropolitan area. It bridges Carquinez Straits from Vallejo, Solano County, to Crockett, Contra Costa County.

Hidden in the cold figures of the giant span are some unusual facts. It is 4,482 feet long, of cantilever type, with four cantilever arms and two suspended spans. The two cantilever spans, including the suspended spans, are 1,100 feet long. More than 45,000 cubic yards of concrete and 12,600 tons of steel were used. It is 135 feet from the water and 460 feet from bedrock. Ten of the largest anchors ever used west of the Rockies, each weighing eight and a half tons, hold the structure. Two miles of two-inch chains were used to sink the caissons.

BE CAREFUL WITH MILK.

Care should be taken with the milk from cows that are known to have tuberculosis, or that are suspected of having it. Fed to hogs or poultry, the disease may be transmitted; and if used in the family, the danger is great, especially among children. Pasteurization may be used, and if the work is thoroughly done the danger is practically all removed. Bottle the milk, to pasteurize it, and set it in a pail or similar container.

The bottles should rest upon a false bottom, which could be an inverted pie plate full of holes. Cap the bottles, punching a hole in one to take the bulb of a thermometer. Keep the temperature of the milk between 145 and 155 degrees for thirty minutes, remove the bottles and let them cool for fifteen minutes or a half-hour, and then cool down to 50 degrees and hold that temperature as nearly as possible.

COMPLETION STATE'S SPLENDID HIGHWAY SYSTEM NOW ASSURED.

"Greater California, Straight Ahead!" With a stroke of his pen, Governor C. C. Young has posted this sign at the portals of California in his approval of the two highway measures, passed by the last Legislature, which assure for the state the greatest road development in its history.

The one cent additional gasoline tax bill and the highway fund allocation bill provide for completion of California's splendid highway system on a sound business basis.

In giving his executive approval to the companion measures, Governor Young officially expressed his appreciation of the joint efforts of the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California in support of this legislation. He particularly commended the activities of the two big motoring organizations in uniting the opposing viewpoints of the different sections of the state in support of an acceptable plan of financing future highway construction.

As official spokesmen for 200,000 organized motorists in California, directors and executives of the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California sponsored the two state highway bills, of which Senator Breed was standard-bearer. It was at a series of conferences with him that representatives of the two big motoring clubs brought together the various interests on a common ground behind the highway legislation.

The gasoline tax bill, Senate Bill No. 3, provides for an additional one-cent levy per gallon which is to be used solely by the state for new highway construction. It is estimated that $120,000,000 will be produced by this means over a twelve-year period. The present two-cent tax is to be divided half for state maintenance—widening and reconstruction work—and the other half for allotment to counties.

The companion measure, Senate Bill No. 518, allocates and directs the expenditure of highway funds, dividing the state's road system into primary and secondary highways and allotting seventy-five percent of the revenues from the additional cent tax to the former and the balance to the latter classification.

MILLIONS IN GAS TAXES DIVIDED AMONG STATE AND COUNTIES.

Apportionment of the gasoline tax collected by the state from October 1, 1926, to April 1, 1927, was made by the state controller May 31. Among the fifty-eight counties, $4,116,496.66 was divided, and an equal sum went to the State Highway Commission. The apportionment for the period is 11.5 percent in excess of that made for the same period a year ago. All the money from this source must be used for maintenance and construction of highways.

Los Angeles County received the lion's share of the apportionment among the counties, $1,630,568. These counties received a six-figure "divvy": San Francisco $319,490, Alameda $301,712, San Diego $154,317, Fresno $137,200, Santa Clara $117,106, Sacramento $101,945, Orange $101,810.

Interesting Trip—Motorists seeking an interesting side trip off the Redwood Highway will find it well worth while to visit the Bull Creek redwoods, one of the largest virgin groves in the redwood empire, according to the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association. The trip can be made out of Eureka to Petrolia via Bull Creek to Dyerville.

River Regatta—Sacramento City is to stage its first river regatta July 15, 16 and 17.

OUTSTANDING CHANGES IN STATE MOTOR VEHICLE ACT.

Important new regulations will govern motorists in California as the result of the approval by Governor C. C. Young of the bill, passed by the Legislature, amending the State Motor Vehicle Act. Outstanding changes in the motorists' revised code are:

Increase of speed limit from thirty-five to forty miles an hour; revocation of operator's license automatically on three convictions for reckless driving instead of speeding; examination of new operators, heretofore optional, made mandatory; state may cancel all operators' cards outstanding three years or more and require renewal subject to possible examination; provision made for complete compilation of statistics on accidents resulting in deaths or injuries; centralization of automobile theft reports in state motor vehicle division; elimination of muffler cut-outs after January 1, 1929; juries authorized to recommend punishment for convictions of driving while intoxicated; used car dealers to report sales; parking stations to report cars stored longer than twelve hours and garages longer than thirty days when owner is unknown.

SAFETY WORK PROGRAM OUTLINED AT STATE CONFERENCE.

Every town in California is expected to adopt, eventually, the plan of street and highway safety work being done in the public-schools of Southern California, according to action taken by the California Public Safety Conference which held its annual session recently in Berkeley.

Reports at this conference indicated that the plans under way in Southern California are so comprehensive and sound that the 169 delegates present favored using them as a basis all over the state. A permanent plan for juvenile and adult education in safety matters following closely the lines of that inaugurated by the Automobile Club of Southern California was recommended by the conference and a committee of ten will be placed in charge of the campaign.

In the matter of the uniform traffic law for the entire state it was indicated that cities in the southern counties were acting more rapidly than in the northern part of the state. The ordinance has been adopted by forty southern cities, while in the north but fifteen cities have joined in the movement.

Reports of the educational work being done in the schools also show that the southern part of the state is taking the lead in this valuable work. Reports on the methods used and the territory covered were regarded as so convincing that similar methods of operation were urged for every town in the state.

AUTOS GOING INTO FORESTS MUST HAVE FIRE FIGHTING TOOLS.

Effective June 15, all camping parties entering the national forests must carry at least one shovel and one axe per automobile, such equipment to be the size and character suitable for fire fighting purposes. The ruling is made under the authority of the Federal Secretary of Agriculture.

It is pointed out that California, with its tremendous motoring population and nearly 20,000,000 acres of national forests, probably is affected more than any other state by this condition imposed on campers. The order is regarded as a further step by friends of the forest to conserve these national treasures, which are enjoyed by and are profitable to all citizens.

OFFICIAL HIGHWAYS EXPOSITION MAP ISSUED BY AUTOMOBILE CLUB.

All roads lead to Reno, for Nevada's Transcontinental Highways Exposition, which opened June 25 and will continue through July 31. This is the theme of a special highway map prepared by the California State Automobile Association for the exposition in Reno which celebrates the completion of main motor routes across the nation through Nevada to California.

The map has been designated the official exposition map. It was prepared by the automobile association at the request of the Nevada exposition officials.

The territory from Los Angeles to Portland and from San Francisco east to Salt Lake City is covered by the map, which shows all motor routes leading to Reno. It not only provides a comprehensive picture of routes to the exposition city but graphically portrays the motive of the exposition, completed transcontinental highways.

Cross Crossings Cautiously—Drive cautiously approaching railroad crossings, particularly if your view in either direction is obstructed.

NATIONAL FORESTS' SMOKING BAN EFFECTIVE UNTIL FALL RAINS.

As a fire prevention measure, the United States Forest Service announces that on and after June 15 smoking will be prohibited in all national forests in California, except at improved camps and places of habitation.

In the El Dorado, Stanislaus, Sierra, Sequoia, Inyo and Mono National Forests, the "no-smoking" order will apply only to areas around 7,500 feet or less in elevation and not to the high Sierra region.

In California South, the Angeles, Cleveland, San Bernardino and Santa Barbara National Forests are already closed to smoking.

This regulation will remain in effect until the fall rains eliminate the fire hazard.

"The protection of our forests and watershed brush fields from fire during the dry summer months is at best a most difficult problem," says the California district forester, "and we look to people who enter these federal areas for business or pleasure to consider seriously the fire prevention regulations in force and conduct themselves accordingly."

SEVEN MILLIONS TO BE SPENT ON CALIFORNIA HIGHWAYS THIS YEAR.

After July 1, when state budget funds become available, the $7,000,000 1927 highway reconstruction and oiling program will be inaugurated. For oiling unpaved highways, $400,000 will be spent.

The construction program includes many major projects, and large sums will be expended on smaller projects and minor improvements. The program calls for the expenditure of the following sums in the ten districts into which the state is divided by the highway commission:

Division one, $255,000; division two, $534,000; division three, $498,000; division four, $943,000; division five, $875,000; division six, $791,000; division seven, $1,227,500; division eight, $1,130,000; division ten, $651,000.

HAVE CONSIDERATION FOR THE NEW DRIVERS OF AUTOS.

Automobile buying increases with the summer season, and this is the time of the year when many recruits are added to the ranks of the great army of motor-car drivers. All over the country these new drivers are getting their baptism of fire in traffic.

"Is the veteran driver making it harder or easier for these thousands of novitiates?" asks D. E. Watkins, secretary and general manager of the California State Automobile Association, who points out that safety demands that the experienced motorist show consideration for the weaknesses that mark the car operation of the man who is behind the wheel for the first time.

JULY RODEO MONTH.

The cry of "Ride 'em, Cowboy!" calls the motorist this month to a series of rodeos in California that graphically portray the color and the glamour of the West. Glorifying the horse and demonstrating horsemanship, these events are attractions that provide delightful week-ends for thousands of motorists. The larger events include:

Covelo, Mendocino County, July 1 to 4, both inclusive.

Alturas, Modoc County, July 2 to 4, both inclusive.

Livermore, Alameda County, July 4.

Salinas, Monterey County, July 20 to 24, both inclusive.

These annual gatherings carry with them a flavor of romance, color and a glamour, as well as possessing great dramatic appeal.

Observe Quarantine Regulations—Before carrying fruits, vegetables or flowers into other states while on a tour, be sure to learn the quarantine regulations, as many states require inspection at state lines.

beaches and hot springs, where highways interlace the whole section.

The visitor may swim or boat in river or sea; fish or hunt where there is an abundance of fish and game, or just rest in the "outer's" paradise made perfect by the blending of mountain, forest, river and ocean. To the south and west one finds the glorious silver strands of the Pacific, bordering on mountain slopes; deep forests; cool canyons, and redwood groves all combined to provide exceptional opportunities for every form of recreation in the outing region from San Francisco Bay to historic old Monterey and Carmel. El Camino Real traverses this enchanting region and contributes the intense interest of missions reminiscent of the old days of Spanish occupation and California's early history.

Sparkling beaches, cliff drives and the forests of the Coast Range all combine to make summer time a continual joy for the lover of the outof-doors. The modern sports of golf, polo and tennis may be engaged in midst ideal surroundings. Every sort of accommodation is available, from the wilderness camp of the forest to the thoroughly modern resort institutions where every comfort has been carefully considered and arranged for.

In short, within a few hours' ride of Stockton one may motor, swim in pool, stream or the surf; boat, fish, hike, camp or enjoy the comforts of modern up-to-date hotels in either the broad beaches of the Pacific or in the mountain regions of the Sierra Nevadas. Or one may enjoy the recreational attractions adjacent to Stockton by boating and fishing on the 400 miles of natural waterways, camping in the groves of natural timber on these streams, enjoy swimming either in the streams or the artificial places provided for that purpose, play golf or tennis, or motor upon the hundreds of miles of excellent highways radiating from this city.

The Stockton Chamber of Commerce, through its Resort and Travel Department in both the main office at Stockton and the branch office in Los Angeles, is prepared to render every service to vacationists contemplating trips. CARQUINEZ BRIDGE

(DELMAR H. WILLIAMS.)

Where fertile hills below Vallejo lie
And there a margin for the Bay supply—
With sheltered Crockett just across the way,
Whose furnace fires burn on by night and day
And vie with Selby's streams of molten ore
To pierce the night along the Southern shore—
The stress of future storms and tides awaits
The lordly bridge that spans Carquinez Straits.

Since those primeval days when Earth was young
And scarcely from the solar center flung,
The rivers here have met San Pablo Bay
And mixed with it the lowland's ruddy clay;
For years untold this mongrel, turbid tide
Has lapped and foamed and growled and man defied;
And many, caught within its seaward sweep,
Have joined the hosts that lie beneath the deep.

But as the silent bird of time has flown
This channel's power has neither shrunk nor grown,
While man, in mind increasing more and more,
Has quelled its force and bound it shore to shore;
A matchless bridge he slowly reared in thought
Before its spans and towers in steel were wrought,
And millions rise to call him doubly blest
Who planned the grandest structure in the West.

f Stockton, which includes those in Central and Northern California, will be furnished on request. None of the vacation places mentioned in this article are more than five hours ride rom Stockton, over excellent roads and highways.

Stockton is the center, or capital, of California's greatest natural attractions and is therefore in a natural and logical position to render authentic service and serve as the starting point for one's vacation. Stockton does not claim any one particular natural attraction, as all are within close proximity and easily and quickly reached by auto, stage, railroad and, in some cases, by water.

Without question, no other city in the West is in such close proximity to such varied recreational attractions, or offers more inducements from a commercial, industrial or agricultural standpoint than the City of Stockton, California's outstanding and dominant inland harbor city.

STOCKTON WILL BE AT SANTA CRUZ.

A. J. Carey will head the official family of Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. for the balance of 1927, being elected president June 6. June 13 R. B. Teefy, recently returned from a world tour, gave an interesting sketch of his travels.

Stockton will participate in the Admission Day, September 9, celebration at Santa Cruz. The following committee is making the arrangements: Law T. Freitas (chairman), W. A. Strong, Lon M. Walker, M. O. Woods, D. F. Gallagher, Ray Friedberger, Raymond D. Dorcey, A. J. Carey.

RICE GIVES GOOD PORK GAINS.

Rice and rice by-products, if fed properly, will give good gains in pork and will not produce soft pork, as claimed by packers in former years. Tests just concluded by the College of Agriculture show that rice bran alone produces soft pork; and that rough rice or rice polish fed to swine gives as good a finish as could be desired. Fed with barley, even rice bran does not give a soft pork. Rough rice, however, gives the hogs trouble at the self feeder, and they will turn to barley if both are available. In the tests, tankage was fed with all the grains.

CAPONS GOOD "MOTHERS."

On small farms, in the farm poultry flock or in the suburban yards, there is more and more a tendency to use capons to mother baby chicks. They make ideal "mothers" for the chicks secured from hatcheries, and usually will take the chicks without protest, guard them carefully and rear them better than the hens. The chicks should be given the capons at night, and the roster "mothers" should be watched the next morning to see that they have accepted the brood. If they should not take kindly to the chicks, remove them until evening, and at night repeat the trial, which will be successful. The capon will take the chicks as day olds, or at the age of a week; and the season is the only limit to the number of flocks he will raise.

DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

Nematodes in the garden are a problem difficult to solve. Vegetables do not grow well, and upon examination their roots will be found to be covered with little balls or enlargements. In large fields, cropping to grain often starves the nematodes into control so that they do not bother seriously for two or three years; but in a small garden, their presence indicates that the whole district is infested and that control is next to impossible. Fruit trees, with the exception of apricots and avocados, are attacked by the pest. The soil might be drenched with formaldehyde, but the cost is great, and with infestation all around the relief would be but temporary.

VIGILANCE NECESSARY.

Vigilance in the choice of potato seed will be well repaid. Fields planted with their own seed year after year will "run out," from diseases which appear and which are carried from plant to plant by insects. Be sure the seed is clean, rough out weak or diseased plants early before the aphids become active, and stop trouble as soon as it starts. A small plot for the propagation of seed will aid in building up production of potatoes, just as surely as breeding up will increase yields of milk in dairy herds.

ORANGE COUNTY HAS NEW PARLOR

FULLERTON (ORANGE COUNTY)—Grace Parlor No. 242, the outcome of a recent address made before a woman's club by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer and named in her honor, was instituted June 2 with twenty-five charter members by Grand President Pearl Lamb, assisted by Assistant Grand Secretary Dorothy Derrick and D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, who organized the Parlor. Previous to the ceremonies they were entertained at dinner and were presented, by the Fullerton Chamber of Commerce, with a huge basket of gladiolas and ferns.

The ritual was exemplified by the following, all of whom, with the exception of Mrs. Adair and Miss Derrick, are past presidents of Long Beach No. 154: Annie L. Adair, junior past president; Kate McFadyen, past president; Rose Ford, president; Mabel Thompson, first vice-president; Charlotte Wharton, second vice-president; Geneva Johnson, third vice-president; Jessie Newhan, marshal; Dorothy Derrick, recording secretary; Lillian Lasater, financial secretary; Lucretia Coates, Kitty Dillon, Mary Brittain, trustees; Lois McDougal, inside sentinel; Maud Klasgye, outside sentinel; Fannie McPherson, organist.

Officers of Grace Parlor were installed as follows by Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, assisted by Past Grand President Stoermer, Bernice Rankin as acting grand marshal, Fannie McPherson as acting grand organist, and other visiting members: Mary Rothaermel, past president; Nellie Cline, president; Lucana McFadden, first vice-president; Helen Anderson, second vice-president; Mary Annin, third vice-president; Jane McLellan, recording secretary; Marie Holland, financial secretary; Carrie Ford, treasurer; Callie Sparks, marshal; Matilda Enfield, inside sentinel; Alberta Rothaermel, outside sentinel; Mattie Edwards, Lydia Oswald, Minnie Hirigoyen, trustees.

Presentations to the new Parlor were made as follows: Flag of the United States for the president's station by Hattie Martin, for Los Angeles No. 124, in a very impressive flag address; altar flags by D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt, for Long Beach No. 154; check for ten dollars by President Mamie Schonberg, for Santa Ana No. 235. And Grace Parlor, in turn, made presentations to Grand President Lamb, Assistant Grand Secretary Derrick, Grand Trustee Thomas, Past Grand President Stoermer, the respective speakers being Christine McFarland, Marjorie Annin, Gladys Perkins, Mary Rothaermel.

Grand President Pearl Lamb, loved throughout the Order, gave one of her characteristic wonderful and instructive addresses. She told the members of the new Parlor that they could not possibly go wrong if they would study the Order's laws and live up to its obligations. Other speakers included: President Calista de Soto of Los Angeles No. 124, President Fannie McPherson of Long Beach No. 154, President Clytelle Hewitt of Verdugo No. 240 (Glendale), who extended the good wishes of those Parlors; Assistant Grand Secretary Derrick, the daughter of Past Grand President Dr. Victory A. Derrick, who said this was her first institution, and Past Grand President Stoermer, who pledged co-operation at all times.—B.H.

Grace Parlor, at its first meeting June 16 received nineteen applications for membership. D.D.G.P. Bertha Hitt and a large delegation from Santa Ana No. 235 were in attendance. President Nellie Cline was elected the Parlor's delegate to the Modesto Grand Parlor. Letters of congratulations and good wishes from Florence Dodson-Schonemann, Rudecinda No. 230 (San Pedro) and Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer were received.

Mothers Entertained.

Weaverville—Eltapome No. 55 and Mount Bally No. 87 N.S.G.W. entertained the mothers of the members at an affair which proved such a success that it was decided to make it an annual event.

With one exception, the program was entirely by members of the Parlor. The exception, a song, "Backward, Turn Backward," was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Jennie Flagg, 77-year-old mother of Mrs. Clara Weinheimer, president of Eltapome. At prettily decorated tables, where dainty refreshments were served, each mother was presented with a white carnation.

Grand President's Final Visit.

Oakland—The last official visit of Grand President Pearl Lamb to Subordinate Parlors was made May 31 to Aloha No. 106. Delegations from twenty-four Parlors were in attendance. Numerous presentations were made.

Speakers of the evening included Grand President Lamb, Grand Vice-president Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts, Grand Trustees Sallie R. Thaler, Mae L. Edwards and Estelle Evans, District Deputies Gertrude Morrison and Maud Wagner, Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Past Grand Presidents Ema Gett, Sue J. Irwin, Dr. Victory A. Derrick, May C. Boldemann and Addie L. Mosher.

Bride-To-Be Showered.

Hollister—Miss Dorothy Leonard, whose marriage will be celebrated in the near future, was the guest of honor June 9 at a pleasing kitchen shower given by Copa de Oro No. 105. The wedding party was impersonated by Mildred Waters as the groom and Charlotte Bates as the shy and blushing bride, with flower girls and attendants.

Miss Leonard was the recipient of many useful articles for the new kitchen, each gift accompanied by congratulatory sentiments in rhyme. After the gifts were inspected games of "hearts" were enjoyed; Clara L. Black was the prize-winner. Dainty refreshments were served at artistically decorated tables. From the bride's cake Mathilda Wright secured the thimble, Helen Leonard the dime and Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs the ring.

At the business session preceding the social hour new officers were elected for the ensuing term. The Parlor donated $10 to the Mississippi flood relief fund.

Attend Church to Honor Pioneers.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell No. 168's members attended memorial services at the First Baptist church in honor of the Pioneers who laid California's foundation. Music and decorations were in keeping with the occasion, and the young women ushers were attired in early-day costumes. "Perpetuating Worthy Ideals" was the sermon topic.

Benefit for Homeless Children.

San Diego San Diego No. 208 sponsored a bridge party for the benefit of the homeless children which proved a great success. The California poppy was everywhere in evidence and small grizzly bears were used as table markers. During the evening an enjoyable program was presented and refreshments were served. Miss Martha Klindt was chairman of the large committee of arrangements.

Showers Featured.

Manteca—Phoebe A. Hearst No. 214 gave a shower May 25 to Mrs. Evelyn Prouty-Cannon, a recent bride. At the whist party and dance May 29, $73.80 was raised for the Mississippi flood relief fund. In charge of the affair were: Eva Patterson (chairman), Nan Napier, Virginia Salmon, Angela Perry, Roxie O'Leary, Virginia Paul. A "stork" shower for Mrs. Amelia Lamberty was given June 8.

Benefit Nets Goodly Sum.

Grand President Banquet Guest.

Oakland—Grand President Pearl Lamb was the guest May 23 of the East Bay Parlors at a banquet attended by 350. Victoria Hartman rendered several violin numbers during the evening, and a picked team from the Parlors exemplified the ritual.

Grand President Lamb was the recipient of a beautiful gift of silver from the Parlors, and in her acceptance address thanked the East Bay Daughters for the wonderful reception and for the whole-hearted support given her as the Order's head.

Anniversary Observed.

Watsonville—El Pajaro No. 25 celebrated the thirty ninth anniversary of its institution at an affair June 8 which was also in honor of the Parlor's seven brides and brides to be. The meeting hall was profusely decorated with baskets of yellow flowers, and in the banquet room, where delicious refreshments were served, a color scheme of pink and white was carried out.

The dramatic section of the Parlor presented a four act drama, "Love's Young Dream," which was much enjoyed, and on behalf of El Pajaro Mrs. James G. Piratsky presented each bride with a silver cake knife. Mrs. Viola Clough was chairman of the evening's entertainment committee.

90-Year-Old Native Guest.

Santa Barbara—The evening of June 14 a reception was given in the woman's club rooms at Recreation Center by Reina del Mar No. 126 to the mothers of the membership. Special arrangements were made by Adela Voorhees, in celebration of the ninetieth birthday of her mother, Mrs. Maria Antonia Jimeno Arata. She is a native of Santa Barbara, being a member of the De la Guerra family, whose people were prominent in the official history of the city in the earliest days.

The evening's entertainment included music by a Spanish orchestra, intermitted by several old hymns and folk songs sung by Mrs. Arata, songs, piano solos and Spanish dances by her grandchildren and personal friends. Following the program the guests marched to the strains of "I Love You, California," to an adjoining room, where tables were set with refreshments. Upon the center table were ninety small birthday cakes, each with a lighted candle.

Third Vice-president Vera Pacheco, accompanied by Organist Irene Quinn, sang to the mothers while old-fashion bouquets and sacred pictures were being presented to them. Senior Past President Mae Sprietz and Past President Mamie Harrison poured the coffee and tea, and others of the membership saw to it that all were served and made happy.

Dinner Well Patronized.

Santa Ana—A Spanish dinner served by Santa Ana No. 235 June 6 was well patronized. The proceeds will be devoted to work at San Juan Capistrano Mission. Mms. Lucane Forster-McFadden and Fred Cline had charge of the dinner.

Mrs. Mary Moore has been elected president of the Parlor for the July-December term.

In Memoriam

IDA JONES-FARRAND.

To the Officers and Members of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Ida Jones-Farrand, submit the following:

Whereas, It has pleased God, in His wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Ida Jones-Farrand, and in the death of Sister Farrand the Parlor has lost one of its honored members;

Resolved, That her family have our heartfelt sympathy, may the memory of her cheerful presence remain with us all; be it further resolved, that the charter of our Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, that a copy be sent the bereaved family, and one to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

DORIA JONES PHILLIPS,
ELLA MAY MADDEN,
MARTHA HAWKINSON Committee.

Glendale, June 10, 1927.

MAY FRASER.

"Once again the Father calleth
A loved one to endless rest,
And our hearts tho' filled with anguish
Can but cry, He knoweth best."

The Angel of Death has again entered the sacred portal of Manzanita Parlor No. 29 N.D.G.W. and removed from our midst our beloved sister, May Fraser.

Whereas, In the death of this gentle loving woman the husband has lost a devoted companion, the daughter a loving mother and in the family there is a void that can never be filled, and Manzanita Parlor has lost a valued sister who was ever a true and loyal Native Daughter of the Golden West, therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow in reverent respect to the will of the Almighty Father we mourn what seems to be the untimely death of our beloved sister and extend our deepest sympathy to the beloved husband, to the daughter and to the loved ones; and be it further resolved that these resolutions be spread in full upon the minutes, a copy sent to the bereaved family and to the Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

"May the California winds blow lightly,
May the California sun shine brightly,
May the California rain fall lightly,
Where sleeps our sister dear."

Respectfully submitted in P.D.E.A.,
LOUISE L. WATTS,
ELIZABETH E. FREEMAN,
CLARA V. HANSEN

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS"

FASHION EXPERTS INSIST THAT THE lengthening of skirts by ragged hemlines indicates a serious movement toward longer skirts, at least for evening wear. There are many such movements in this direction, in addition to the gypsy raggedness of outline, and there is no use to ignore them.

Hems of tulle and chiffon attached to the underslip of the evening frocks lengthen the skirts they cover, but do not hide the legs. The idea behind these vagrant hemlines may be nothing more than a diversion—just another way of making clothes more alluring.

The shallow, square opening at the neck has made its appearance in frocks for day and for evening. It is a fashion change from the deep "V" which, however, shows no intention of being eclipsed. Upon sweaters, this square opening is edged with a colorful fabric, and often there is a sizeable cravat at the shoulder or the lower right-hand corner of the square. These accessories are carried out also on the rolling collar and the "V" shape.

The new wool sweaters are still dominant in street costumery, sometimes so expensive and ornate that other clothes follow their lead. A tweed or crepe skirt carries a figured silk jumper, or a fine flannel sweater carries a closely-pleated figured-silk skirt which repeats itself at neck and wrist of the sweater. Shetland wool, the most transparent of filmy wools, is used for these sweaters. They are in white, with hem, neck facings and turnover cuffs of black chiffon. These go about everywhere accompanied by white or black crepe pleated skirts.

Belts are indispensible. They are of suede, leather and silvered or gilded kid, but rarely of fabric. Often what is added to a gown becomes the cornerstone of the costume. Belts are accessories of importance and are even used on dance frocks. These are narrow, sometimes a mere thread of color around the hips, where fashion places the dividing line. These belts have a moderate buckle of metal, suede, patent-leather or gilded kid. Embroidered silks, in a diversity of colors, are worn with belts and they must not be a totally unrelated thing to the costume unless the belt is the only color applied. In that case, your desires can run riot. Metal belts are not so smart.

The choice of the purse one carries is significant. It is the most important accessory. As warm weather suggests cool coloration, the red bag gives way to cucumber green and that fashionable blue called "ciel." Both colors, green and blue, are to be extensively worn. Both soft and gentle in tone, they are therefore delectable.

Raffia handbags, roughly embroidered with brilliant flowers, are very smart. So are plain silk bags with silver initials. Needlework bags of cross-stitch or petit point, especially when worked on beige canvas, are desirable. They are gayer companions to light summer clothes than leather or suede.

"Say it with flowers" is an old phrase with a new meaning. This petition of the florist has become the cry of the modiste, and the demand of every fashionably costumed woman. There was never a time when a flower was so important or necessary to good style as it is today. To lend artistry to a gown, the flat, formal flower has had its day and the ragged, careless one is this season's choice. The bigger the better. Wine red is the popular color, but any of the prevalent shades will do.

Contrasting brims or tiny, matching brims are two favored notes in millinery. "They" are wearing the tiny, crocheted viscas of the close-fitting type, and the large hat which one sees with surprising frequency. Feather flowers are used for trimming upon a hat where it touches the neck at the side.

If one does not accept the huge feather flower, there are stickpins and jeweled ornaments to be added to the plain surface. The matched and joined stickpins of immense pearls are still beloved by the best-dressed women. They are worn at side or front. Rhinestones harden the eyes; pearls never.

One of the most interesting developments of the season is the attention accorded the blouse, in more formal aspect, developed in such feminine mediums as lace, or lace and chiffon, or lace and crepe.

Both the tunic and overblouse are given consideration, with the former frequently attaining such a length that the wearing of a skirt is necessary. Tunic blouses are developed in silk or net lace, in flower shades and in ecru. While it is significant that blouses of the types mentioned are receiving favor, it is no indication that the tailored blouse is losing out.

The average woman today, though better dressed than formerly, has carefully eliminated useless articles from her wardrobe. The complete wardrobe for country club and summer resort wear needs includes but two types of garments—sports attire for daytime, and soft, graceful frocks for evening. The ensemble presents a well-groomed appearance for sports or the strenuous activities, while the simple, straight-line dress is most essential.

Sleeveless, one-piece sports dresses are reported to be most important styles and are varied in detail, but alike in stressing the tailored sports effect. Seaming, machine stitching, tucking, pleating, buttons and belts are the chief means of ornamentation. Some are typical tennis frocks, while others follow the styles popular for the past season, except that they are sleeveless.

Necklines, with or without collars, seem to be equally in demand. Pleating is generally confined to the front of the skirt, whether it is fine side pleating or narrow box. Monotone flat crepe or crepe-de-chine, in white, pastel tints and the new street shades, make these models.

Among the pastel, the importance of pink is emphasized.

Printed silks, in sheer or heavy crepes, are used for summer coats. Tailored and dressy types are said to be about even in popularity, with a slight preference given to the more feminine, fluffy versions.

Tailored underwear, such as combinations of bandeaux and trunks, and tailored slips are wanted to go with sports clothes. The costume slip is a year-round necessity that becomes much more important in summer, when light frocks are worn. If you make your own you can be sure of a garment that is right at the bust and at the hem. If you follow directions you can cut two slips from three lengths of material- a very economical way.

If a good portion of your summer time is spent upon the beach you will plan your bathing costume carefully. Either a one- or two-piece jersey suit, with cardigan of jersey or flannel and tailored coat of flannel or terry cloth, has a boyish swagger.

If you take swimming seriously, the hat offers no problem. The plain rubber cap, with or without a chin strap, is the only one that keeps the hair dry and out of the way.

Of course, the knee-length coolie coats are the smartest bathing wrap. Some are made of printed terry cloth, which has the absorbent quality of turkish toweling.

LOS ANGELES HOSIERY MILLS KEEPS ABREAST OF THE TIMES.

"That the trend of fashions is effected by the dance world is very evident," writes Joseph McGuigan, president of the Beverly Hosiery Mills of Los Angeles to B. J. Trimborn, vice-president and secretary. McGuigan is on a three months' trip to the large Eastern cities studying hosiery conditions and problems.

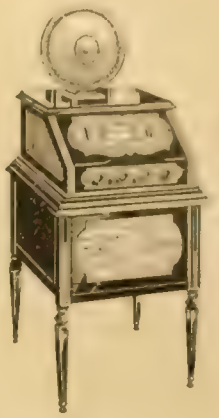
"The black bottom silk hose are taking Eastern cities by storm, because of the slenderizing effect to the ankles of this style of silk hosiery," he said, and continued: "It is the policy of the Beverly Hosiery Mills to keep in close touch with Eastern hosiery marts that it may be able to give its patrons the best and newest in silk hosiery, which plays so important a role in the fashions of today."

PIONEER CALIFORNIA WOMEN HAVE ANNUAL CELEBRATION.

San Francisco—The Pioneer Women Association of California, whose purpose is "to perpetuate the memory of our forefathers and to keep alive the romance of California and the true spirit of California hospitality," held its annual California Day celebration May 21 in Golden Gate Park.

Mrs. Clara Mayer-Mundt was chairman of the day and among the speakers was Lewis F. Byington, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., whose subject was the early history of San Francisco. "The secret of San Francisco's strength," said he, "lies in its harbor, its position, and supremely in its early pioneer builders."

DEATH TAKES N.D. SECRETARY.



Glendale (Los Angeles County)—Mrs. Ida May Jones-Farrand, charter member and recording secretary of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W., passed away May 25, survived by a husband and a son. She was born in Los Angeles City February 4, 1884. Funeral services were conducted by the Parlor.

Vigorous Prosecution—In an attempt to cut down the tremendous losses resulting from man-caused fires, State Forester M. B. Pratt says that careless smokers, campers and ranchers who set fires without permits will be vigorously prosecuted.

PAST PRESIDENTS HAVE OUTDOOR INITIATION

NEVADA CITY (NEVADA COUNTY)—Atop the mountain, overlooking the historic Nevada City-Downieville highway, with the blue sky as their canopy and the fir and spruce their sentinels, members of Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents Association saw their first open-air initiation, May 29. Fourteen candidates, representing Auburn, Placer County, Wheatland and Marysville in Yuba County, and Nevada City and Grass Valley in Nevada County were initiated by the drill-team of the organization. Two hundred members of the Order, from ten Subordinate Parlors, stood upon the sidelines while the ritual was exemplified.

Those taking part in the impressive work in the great open space were: Senior past governor, Past Grand President Fred H. Greely, Marysville; junior past governor, J. C. Gray, Hammonton; governor, John P. Colford, Sutter City; first vice-governor, Barney Barry, Lincoln; second vice-governor, H. A. Schroeder, Lincoln; third vice-governor, Seth Millington, Gridley; marshal, Charles Miller, Hammonton; inside sentinel, Thomas J. O'Connor, Marysville. Six of the candidates were from Hydraulic No. 56 (Nevada City), five from Quartz No. 58 (Grass Valley), and one each from Marysville No. 6, Rainbow No. 40 (Wheatland) and Auburn No. 59.

Following the ceremonies all adjourned to Uncle Tom's Cabin at the side of the highway and listened to a musical and literary program, including addresses by Past Grand President Fred H. Greely and Past Governor Seth Millington. Both stressed the broad field to be covered by the Native Sons of the Golden West in the preservation of things in California history. Several vocal numbers by the Cornish Gold Miners' Glee Club of Grass Valley, composed mostly of California-borns, interspersed the program. At 2 p.m. the assemblage, to the number of 400, were guests at a barbecue served by a committee from Fred H. Greely Assembly.

MOUNTAIN GATHERING NATIVE SONS FOR INITIATION.
—Tamblyn, Photo.

During the initiation ceremony the several stations of the officers were fashioned from sewing-machine frames gathered for the purpose in the homes of pioneer residents of this section. One was "brought around the Horn," the contributor said. At the June meeting of the assembly, held in Lincoln, Placer County, it was proposed to make the outing an annual one.

Two Cities Ask for 1928 Grand Parlor.

Joseph B. Keenan (Niantic No. 105) and Arthur E. Curtis (Precita No. 187) were named to represent the Grand Parlor stock in the San Francisco Native Sons' Hall Association.

Invitations were received to hold the Fifty-first (1928) Grand Parlor in Santa Cruz and Merced Cities. They were referred to Grand President Thompson, Grand Secretary Regan, Grand Trustee Lane and the Grand Parlor transportation and mileage committee, to report at the next board meeting.

The five-cent per-capita tax authorized at the San Pedro Grand Parlor for the celebration of Admission Day, September 9, was allowed Santa Cruz.

Invitations were accepted to dedicate the Central grammar-school at Sausalito, Marin County, June 8, and the new city hall at Los Angeles, June 22.

An order was passed that, in future, no extraordinary sessions of the Grand Parlor be permitted for the purpose of conducting dedicatory ceremonies, except by authority and under the direction of the Grand President.

Memorial Day's Observance.

Ferndale—As has been the custom for many years, the observance of Memorial Day here was under the direction of Ferndale No. 93. At 1:30 a procession, led by the Ferndale Union high-school band and made up of various organizations, proceeded to the Star theater, where the following program was carried out:

Address, Wayne Early, president of the day; "America," band and assemblage; prayer, Rev. A. P. Orth; vocal selection, Warren Ott, H. W. Auten, D. E. Culbertson; recitation, Marion Diedrichsen; vocal solo, H. W. Auten, accompanied by high-school string orchestra; oration, Marc F. Morrison.

The procession then proceeded to the cemetery where, at the grave of the "Unknown," the program included: "Star Spangled Banner," band and assemblage; Lincoln's Gettysburg address, Lester Dedini; poem, Mrs. Lucie G. Ericksen; decoration of grave by schoolchildren; firing of salute by John O'Connell, Frank Gregis, Meredith Ring, John Enos, Ambrose Farley, John Ferguson, Lloyd Kausen, H. W. Lance, Hans Hynding; sounding of taps, Everett Payton; benediction, Rev. A. P. Orth. Every grave in the cemetery was heaped with beautiful flowers.

Pioneers Entertained.

Oroville—Argonaut No. 8 and Gold of Ophir No. 190 N.D.G.W. entertained several guests at their annual banquet and reception for the Pioneers. The Daughters appeared in costumes of the days of '49. Frank Boyle and Elizabeth Phillips, presidents of the respective Parlors, extended a welcome, several of the guests recounted early-day experiences and there was a program of musical numbers, recitings and tableaux.

Among the Pioneers present were the following, and the year in which each arrived in California: W. C. Lee 1849, Jean Richardson 1849, Mrs. Laura Gordon Chappelle 1852, C. L. Dunham 1852, Mrs. E. J. Mooney 1854, J. C. Nolan 1857. Also, John Toland, a member of Argonaut Parlor who was born in 1855. Each guest was presented with a bouquet of sweet peas.

Sonoma County Class Initiation.

Santa Rosa—Several members of Santa Rosa No. 28 gathered at Sonoma Mission May 20 and placed in the museum there relics of early days in California. One is a picture, executed in India ink, showing a council of war in pioneer days. Another is a Spanish sabre of sixteenth century workmanship, believed to be a relic of an unrecorded Spanish inland expedition. Hand-loomed linens, a Russian sword, sterling silver teaspoons and an Indian warclub are among the lot.

Sonoma County Native Sons will journey to Fort Ross, the first Russian settlement in California, for a celebration July 3 and 4. A Russian choir will be brought from San Francisco, and also a priest, who will recite mass in the old chapel on Sunday. A fish "feed" is promised, as abalone and other fish are abundant at the site of the historic fort.

July 23 the Sonoma County Parlors will have a class initiation at Santa Rosa. A picked team from San Francisco will exemplify the ritual and several of the grand officers will be in attendance. Sonoma No. 111 will celebrate its institution anniversary with a barbecue at Bates Grove, Sonoma City, July 24, and all the county Parlors will be represented.

Baseball League Organized.

Eureka—The Humboldt County Parlors have organized a baseball league, with Humboldt No. 14 of this city, Arcata No. 20 and Ferndale No. 93 represented. A series of games will be played to decide the championship of the county.

Large Class Initiated.

San Rafael—As a result of the membership campaign now being conducted under the management of Newman Cohn, Mount Tamalpais No. 64 initiated a large class of candidates June 13, a picked team from San Francisco Parlors exemplifying the ritual. Cohn, responsible for reviving several moribund Parlors and for bringing over 1,000 members into the Order in a comparatively brief period, says that, as membership director for Mount Tamalpais, he will add 300 names to the Parlor's roster during this Grand Parlor year. He has just started the campaign and is much encouraged.

Marin County Treasurer Charles Redding (Nicasio No. 183), was the toastmaster at an Italian dinner. Assemblyman Charles T. Reindollar spoke on the worthwhileness of membership in the Order, which has a peculiar mission. Albert C. Wheelan, brother of the late Fairfax Wheelan, founder of the homeless children endeavor, spoke on California's early history, "the most romantic in human annals," he declared. Other speakers were Daniel Nilan, Newman Cohn, Emil Malz Jr., L. R. Knutte, Carlos R. Frietas. Vocal solos were rendered by H. Prignitz, Lloyd Darnett and George Nilan, the latter as proxy for Walter Grady.

Grand Officers' Visiting Districts.

At the meeting of the Board of Grand Officers May 28 visiting district to include the several Subordinate Parlors were assigned as follows:

District No. 1, Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell—Calistoga No. 86, San Diego No. 108, Cabrillo No. 114, Santa Barbara No. 116, Byron No. 179, Hollywood No. 196, Long Beach No. 239, Pasadena No. 259, Vaquero No. 262, Sepulveda No. 264, Glendale No. 264, Santa Ana No. 265, Montecito No. 266, Santa Monica Bay No. 267.

Spanish custom house at Monterey City. In the course of time, the pole carried the flags of Spain, Mexico and the United States.

The presentation was made by Grand President Charles A. Thompson, on behalf of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, to J. Harvey McCarthy (Ramona No. 109 N.S.G.W.), founder of Carthay Center. The relic will be permanently housed in Carthay Circle Theater, which is a monument to the Pioneers of the Golden West.

FIVE INITIATED BY GLENDALE N.D.

Officers of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. (Glendale) were elected June 7, Mrs. Clytelle S. Hewitt becoming president. Five candidates were initiated. In memory of Mrs. Ida Farrand, recently deceased recording secretary, the ceremony of draping the altar was carried out.

June 14 a card party for the benefit of the Parlor was held at the home of Mrs. Eula Van Luven.

PUBLIC SCHOOL GETS BEAR FLAG.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. presented a California State (Bear) Flag to the California-street public-school June 23, Grand President Charles A. Thompson making the presentation address. At the election of officers for the July-December term, Julius O. Leuschner was selected for president.

MIDNIGHT BARBECUE.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. observed Flag Day, June 14, by presenting the Flag of the United States and the California State (Bear) Flag to three public-schools: the John Burrows junior high, the Edison junior high and the Carthay elementary. The respective speakers were Superior Judge Ruben Schmidt, Harry J. Lelande and Ernest Orfila. A program of music and recitation was presented at each school.

During June, several new members were added to the Parlor's membership-roll. At a special initiation at noon of the 15th Edward R. Knowles, born at Union City (now Oakland) in 1851, became affiliated with the Order's largest Parlor. Knowles claims to be the first child born to American parents in Alameda County; when very young he was taken by his parents to Brooklyn, New York, and has since resided there. He came to Los Angeles on a visit, was initiated into Ramona and returned to his Eastern home.

The "Caballeros" of Ramona will present something new in the way of entertainment July 30—a midnight barbecue at Campo de Cahuenga. The womenfolks are invited and a good time is promised. Other events on the Parlor's July program include: initiation, the officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. conducting the ceremonies, the 22nd; good of the order entertainment, when the July birthday presents will be distributed, the 29th.

Sewer and Water Bonds—Bonds of $84,000 have been voted by Livingston, Merced County, for sewer and water systems.

Butter Production—During 1926 California manufactured 74,117,880 pounds of butter. But to supply the populace's demand 28,924,657 pounds had to be brought in from other states.

Short Blast for Curves—When rounding dangerous curves do not give one long toot on the horn, as the sound may merge with a similar blast from an approaching car. It is better to sound short toots and listen between for the sound of an approaching car.

In Memoriam

HARRY HEYES.

Harry Heyes, a member of Los Angeles Parlor No. 17 N.S.G.W. who, May 14, 1927, received the inevitable summons which called him from our midst to the Heavenly Parlor on High, was born in Los Angeles January 27, 1890, and became a member of this Parlor March 9, 1922.

Though close association we came to appreciate his many qualities of sterling worth, and for this reason we mourn his untimely death. And because we realize how great is the sense of loss his family must feel we extend to them our deepest sympathy, and we would render to them such consolation as may be found in the knowledge that their sorrow is shared by the members of this Parlor, and in the assurance that to us who knew him so well his memory will ever be a treasured heritage.

SAN PEDRO'S GOAL— PACIFIC COTTON PORT

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

SAN PEDRO, THE COTTON PORT OF THE Pacific! That is the goal and the partially realized ambition of the harbor commission of the City of Los Angeles. Already leading all seaports of Western America in the amount of cotton exported annually, steps are now being taken to add greatly needed facilities which will ultimately treble the exports.

By terms of an agreement consummated during June, the harbor commission will turn over the cotton export business to the Los Angeles cotton exchange, with certain lease and tonnage charge agreements. The latter, in turn, proposes to spend nearly half a million dollars in constructing new facilities and developing a twenty-acre tract of land at San Pedro.

Important among the facilities to be installed will be a new high density compress, costing nearly $100,000. This devise will reduce cotton bales brought to the port to one-third their original size, making them better for ship stowage.

Cotton is brought to San Pedro from the San Joaquin and Imperial Valleys of California and also from Arizona. Soon the port will bid for part of the crop produced in Northern Mexico. Five years ago the season's movement through San Pedro totaled 20,000 bales. Two years ago it jumped to 85,000, while during the last season it amounted to 135,000 bales.

The principal movement of California and Arizona cotton from the Port of Los Angeles is to Europe, particularly to British and German mills. The Orient is now bidding for some of the crop, however, and soon San Pedro compressed cotton will be the by-word wherever textile goods are manufactured.

NATIVE SON NEWS.

From every source, Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 has been congratulated on the success of the Fiftieth N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor. This was the first state-wide convention to come to San Pedro, and several others are now planned for the future by various organizations.

Sepulveda is now in possession of the handsome silver trophy awarded as first prize in the fraternal division of the Fresno Raisin Day parade to the Bear Flag float. The float, designed by President William F. Durr, is the property of San Pedro Natives, and it was sent to Fresno by the Interparlor N.S.G.W. Committee.

Willard Buchanan, chairman of the committee which devised the fifty-dollar gold slug Grand Parlor souvenir, was elected president of the Parlor June 2, and Frank Markey was selected for recording secretary. Seven candidates were initiated at the June 9 meeting.

James W. Mee, general chairman of Sepulveda's Grand Parlor entertainment committee, left with Mrs. Mee June 10 for an extended Eastern tour. They first went to Miami, Florida, where Mee represented the San Pedro Lions at the club's national convention.

NATIVE DAUGHTER NEWS.

May 31, Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. had a card party, the committee in charge being Letitia Sarciaux (chairman), Zilda Dellon, Hazel Boston, President Gertrude Riepe. At the election of officers June 2 Hazel Raines was chosen for president and Carrie Lenhouse for secretary.

The Parlor participated in the G.A.R.'s Memorial Day services, being officially represented at the luncheon by Secretary Charlotte K. Bennett. There are but five surviving members of the local post. Judge William Savage, the commander, is a pioneer of Wilmington, having been stationed at Drum Barracks there.

Following the June 16 meeting, when two candidates were initiated, a birthday surprise for President Riepe was "pulled." Amy Hagenow provided the cake, and Mrs. Riepe was presented with a hand-painted plate by the officers, a large bouquet by Treasurer Carrie Kuhlmann and a gold pencil by Secretary Bennett. Six of the officers participated in the Los Angeles City Hall cornerstone laying June 22. The drill-team sponsored a dance June 29.

Carl Jorgenson, the third winner in the recent rowboat race to Catalina, is an only son of Elizabeth Jorgenson, a member of Rudecinda, and is the only citizen of the United States among the winners. He plans to join Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. Walter Brooks, who "rowed standing up" and came in sixth, is a member of Sepulveda, while his wife, Juanita Brooks, is affiliated with Rudecinda.

jointly. Both went to their homes, but returned to renew the dispute, armed with shotguns, and fired at each other simultaneously. Haggerty missed, but received a charge of buckshot from Cahill's gun that killed him.

At Santa Cruz City July 17 an invitational party was given by John Fitch to his friends. A teamster named Evans strolled in without an invitation, and Fitch ordered him to depart. Later in the evening Evans returned and Fitch, coming across him, pulled a gun and shot him dead. Edward Fitch, a brother, grabbed John by the arm and exclaimed, "My God, do you know what you have done?" John gazed horror-stricken at Evans a moment and, putting the muzzle of the pistol in his mouth, shot himself dead.

J. B. Canega, a Mendocino County deputy sheriff, rode six miles from Ukiah July 17 to meet the stage from Lakeport, Lake County. He lay alongside the road, pretending to have been thrown from his horse, standing a short distance away. He requested a passenger to go and catch the horse for him. When the passenger got out, Canega clambered into the stage and, drawing a revolver, shot Mrs. Frances Reynolds, sitting upon the front seat, dead. He then fired a bullet into his brain and fell dead.

HOMELIEST MAN DEPARTS WITH BEAUTY.

July 17 Manuel Butron was shot dead in cold blood on a street in San Juan South by Justino Arajo. The next day a mob of masked men gathered at the lockup, overpowered the officer in charge, took the prisoner to a grove near the town and hung him from the limb of a tree.

A seventy-foot-high flume crossing Flea Valley in Butte County July 4 became jammed with lumber. Richard Watson, Polk Bacon, Charles Campbell, Stephen Stevens and a Chinaman were sent to clear it. While at work, 200 feet of the flume fell. Watson and Bacon were instantly killed, Campbell and Stevens were dangerously hurt, but the Chinaman, by clinging to a timber, did not fall.

John Heaton, the Southern Pacific's foreman of bridges, was killed by a collision between a handcar and a special engine near San Fernando, Los Angeles County, July 20. The engine was soon afterward struck by lightning and the fireman was severely hurt.

Wm. Moyle, driving a team at Cloverdale, Sonoma County, July 1 upset the carriage, killing Miss Lizzie Fancher and seriously injuring Miss Emma Fancher and his little niece. The Fancher sisters were on a visit from San Francisco.

Mark Rusick, well known in California South as "El Colorado," a sobriquet given him because of his fiery red hair, was reputed to be the homeliest man in that part of the state. This month he levanted to Mexico with a beautiful but frail brunette, taking with him the capital his mother-in-law had supplied for a business venture. He left behind a pretty wife, who filed an action for divorce.

"Schools are the chief instruments that we use consciously to transform personal freedom into liberty and to save it from corrupting license."—Suzzallo.

GRAND PARLOR

urged the Native Daughters and Native Sons to unitedly oppose any such scheme.

For the first time in the history of the Grand Parlor, a Native Daughter mother, Mrs. Katherine Himes, witnessed the installation of her daughter, Mae Himes-Noonan, as Grand President.

A blind composer, named Buckingham, was given an opportunity to sing "Queen of the West," his own composition dedicated to the Native Daughters of the Golden West. He received much applause and copies of the song to the amount of $106.50 were purchased.

The routine of business was frequently interspersed with musical numbers, and each afternoon Morada Parlor No. 199 presented a program and served refreshments.

Redding, Shasta County, sent a telegram inviting the Grand Parlor to meet there in 1929.

Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley, chairman transportation committee, reported the mileage for the session was $2,350.75.

Past Grand Presidents Dr. Victory A. Derrick and Sue J. Irwin reported, respectively, for the americanization and education committees.

Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs, for the publicity committee, reported excellent publicity for the Order throughout the state. She complimented The Grizzly Bear, and said every member should read it regularly from cover to cover.

From the Grand Parlor delegates, Founder Lilly O. Reichling-Dyer was the recipient of a handsome gift, the presentation address being made by Eldora McCarty (Palo Alto No. 229)

Grand Trustee Mae L. Edwards, chairman of the Fairfax Wheelan memorial committee, reported the completion of that worthy project—a memorial to the originator of the Native Daughters' and Native Sons' homeless children endeavor.

Dr. Louise C. Heilbron (San Diego No. 208), chairman of the veterans' welfare committee, reported on the work of the Subordinate Parlors along the lines of veteran welfare, and also on civic and national activities in the Parlors.

Grand President Pearl Lamb and Grand Secretary Hattie E. Roberts expressed appreciation to Morada Parlor No. 199 for the many acts of courtesy and kindness shown them during the session.

Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer reported that Father Junipero Serra and Rev. Thomas Starr King had been chosen to represent California in Statuary Hall, Washington, D.C.

Past Grand President Ema Gett expressed, on behalf of the Past Grands, the wish that delegates, rather than themselves, be placed on the Grand Parlor committees.

Past Grand President Mamie G. Peyton reported that nothing had been referred to the committee on appeals and grievances, of which she was chairman.

Irma Laird (Alturas No. 159) reported for the extension committee prospects of four new parlors in California North being instituted.

NEW GRAND OFFICERS.

At the election June 23, 383 votes were cast and the following grand officers were selected:

Grand President—Mae Himes-Noonan, Portola No. 172, of San Francisco.

Grand Vice-president—Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, San Diego No. 208, of Sacramento City.

Grand Secretary — Sallie Rutherford-Thaler, Aloha No. 106, of Oakland, Alameda County.

Grand Treasurer—Sue K. Christ, Yosemite No. 83, of San Francisco.

Grand Marshal—Esther R. Sullivan, Marysville No. 162, of Marysville, Yuba County.

Grand Inside Sentinel—Anna Mason Armstrong, Woodland No. 90, of Woodland, Yolo County.

Grand Outside Sentinel—Melissa B. Wilson, Mary E. Bell No. 224, of Dixon, Solano County.

Givens, Mariposa No. 62, of Cathay, Mariposa County; Evelyn I. Carlson, Dolores No. 169, of San Francisco; Marvel Thomas, Los Angeles No. 124, of Los Angeles City; Vida M. Vollers, Marinita No. 198, of San Rafael, Marin County.

Pearl Lamb, El Pescadero No. 82, of Tracy, San Joaquin County, retiring Grand President, automatically became the Junior Past Grand President.

SALLIE RUTHERFORD THALER

NEW GRAND SECRETARY N.D.G.W.

The grand officers were installed, just prior to the Grand Parlor's adjournment, by Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin, assisted by Past Grand Presidents Addie L. Mosher and Alison F. Watt, and Josie Barboni (Vendome No. 100). Following the ceremonies the official emblematic ring was presented to Pearl Lamb, retiring Grand President, by Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster.

Grand President Mae Himes-Noonan delivered an inspiring address, following her installation, and a profusion of remembrances were presented.

PUBLIC RECEPTION.

The public reception the evening of June 20 in the commodious ballroom of Hotel Modesto was a delightful affair. Charles D. Blaine was chairman of the evening. Mayor Sol P. Elias, a member of Modesto Parlor No. 11 N.S.G.W., lauded Morada Parlor No. 199 N.D.G.W. for bringing the Grand Parlor to Modesto and commended the Native Daughters and Native Sons for their historic landmarks work.

"The flood-gates of hospitality have been opened to us," declared Grand President Pearl Lamb in the course of a brief address. Other speakers were President Myrtle Sanders of Morada Parlor, President Hugo McKinley of Modesto Parlor, Florence Giovanetti, chairman Morada's general committee, and Judge J. C. Needham, a "covered-wagon baby" who missed being born a native son by two days.

Musical numbers were contributed by the boys' quartet of Modesto high-school, directed and accompanied by Miss Dorothy Whalley; Richard Waring and Aileen Cowan. Bobbie tinue, to openly evade all laws enacted for the state's protection and for its preservation as a White man's land.

It is regrettable that friction within the California State Federation of Women's Clubs has resulted in the withdrawal, from that organization which has accomplished so much of good for the state, of some of the largest and most influential supporting clubs. Rumor has it that several additional clubs are also to withdraw and that a separate and distinct federation will be formed south of Tehachapi.

This split in the women's federation will give considerable impetus to the sleeping, but not dead, agitation for state division and, unless promptly checked, is very apt to result in the accomplishment of that deplorable end.

As a matter of fact, the "All Parties Reapportionment Committee" of Los Angeles, headed by Ralph Arnold, is still agitating for state division, and The Grizzly Bear has information from a reliable source that that state-division outfit is endeavoring to get all the women's clubs in the southern part of the state to withdraw from the state federation, to set up a southern federation and to support the state-division movement.

Arnold and his gang know that the women are a voting power, and if those in the women's clubs can be "educated" to realize the "advantages of state division," California will be divided. Of course, the gang's sole purpose is to benefit themselves politically, but through propaganda and otherwise they are attempting, and not without considerable success, to "educate" the women to believe that state division will benefit both the southern and the northern sections of California.

A vast majority of the women affiliated with federation clubs are broad-minded thinkers. They must know that California is great because of its oneness and that there is no conflict of interest between the south and the north, except in the minds of a few disgruntled politicians. Because they are thinkers, they should be able to get together and amicably settle federation affairs to the perfect satisfaction of all concerned. But, if that be not possible, they should be exceedingly cautious that, in splitting their one powerful federation into two federations, both of lessened influence, they are not made the "goats" of the state-divisionists.

Sacramento City exemplified charity and patriotism when it decided to dispense with its three-day Independence Day celebration, arrangements for which were well under way, and turned the money collected for the celebration into the Mississippi flood-relief fund.

We'll bet a dollar to a peanut that, if anyone is made to pay a jail-penalty for the colossal Julian oil steal it will be some one of little importance, the same as happened when the Los Angeles Investment Company was "blown up" a few years back.

The men of prominence and plenty who have robbed the honest and confiding Julian stockholders will be allowed to go their way in peace, and that way will lead to another frenzied finance flareup, a few years hence when the Julian scandal is forgotten, and not to the state's prison.

CALIFORNIA DESCRIBED BY A NEWCOMER

TWENTY ONE MISSIONS WERE BUILT between San Diego and San Francisco, some of them along the coast, others short distances inland. The last one was built in 1823. The object of the missions was to colonize, christianize, civilize and educate the native Indians and, incidentally, to extend the scope and influence of the Catholic church in America. Opinions differ as to the purpose or the good done by the missions. Thousands of Indians were brought under their influence. They were in servitude or slaves to the priests, though perhaps not in the strictest sense. The Indians were taught such things as were necessary to make the missions self sustaining, such as farming, stock raising, art of building, etc. However, the missions were crude because the builders were unskilled pioneers.

During the last years of the mission period, under Mexican rule, they had a stormy existence. In 1833 secularization took place and in 1834 the Mexican government dis-established the missions and confiscated the property. Father Serra died in 1784 and his tomb is before the altar of the mission church at Carmel Mission, near Monterey. After the fall of the missions the Indians were scattered and perished in great numbers. They quickly reverted to their native ways of living. They were known as the Digger Indians, are now about extinct and are described as being ignorant, indolent, immoral and filthy.

Mission properties are usually a church and other necessary buildings for the priests, crude adobe quarters for the Indians, and large land holdings. All of the twenty-one missions are, or have been, in a more or less state of ruin. Some of them are being restored in whole or in part. Santa Barbara is the largest mission and was the best preserved until 1925, when it was partially destroyed. The one at San Juan Capistrano has the most tragic history, having been destroyed by earthquake in 1812.

After California was ceded to the United States the missions were restored to the Catholic church by authority of the United States Government and the State of California. The restoration included the buildings and the ground immediately surrounding them, but not the large land holdings.

In architecture the Mission or Spanish style was followed and has been copied thousands of times in California's homes, public and semi-public buildings, with some modifications. The old missions are among the show places of California and thousands of tourists visit them annually.

CALIFORNIA CLIMATE.

No other thing is so little understood as California's climate. This will apply to all who have never been here and a great many who have. People on hurried trips through the state learn little of the climate. Many think we have summer all winter here, which is untrue. However, the gap between the mean summer temperature and the mean winter temperature is very narrow and this will apply to the coastal region. The ocean decidedly influences the climatic conditions from twenty to twenty-five miles inland. Farther inland the mean temperature gap between summer and winter becomes some wider.

Many factors have to do with California's climate, such as altitude, latitude, ocean currents, sunshine and many conditions peculiar to localities which influence climate. California is known around the world as the land of sunshine and flowers. Some ultra conservative people have said we have 350 clear days in a year. A more conservative estimate is 300 clear days, fifty partly cloudy and fifteen cloudy. A totally cloudy day is rare. Old Sol will usually show his face, at least briefly, practically every day in the year.

It is said California has all the climates of North America, and it is no doubt true. In the high Sierras there is a severe winter and a heavy snowfall. Coming down from the high altitudes one will experience greatly modified climates until the valleys and coastal regions are reached. The coastal region is snowless and practically frostless. There may be a few light frosts, but none that do damage. Farther in the interior and where the altitude is one thousand feet or below there is no snow but the frosts are more likely to do damage. Damaging frosts, however, are the exception rather than the rule in Southern California.

Our winter weather in California where tourists stay does not deserve the name "winter weather." The nights during the winter are chilly but not cold. A little heat morning and evening is not out of place. We have some chilly ones out here and they can be found everywhere. One will be surprised to know that perhaps Long Beach is as good a retail market for women's furs and fur coats as St. Paul or Winnipeg. Do not understand that such articles of clothing are necessary in this wonderful California winter climate. Regarding clothing in general, just come to California with what you have. It is not necessary to change the weight or character of clothing. Personally, I could go through a Long Beach winter season without heat or overcoat and not suffer, but would dress for the occasion.

Mark Twain said he had heard a great many people talk about the weather, but so far as he knew nothing had ever been done about it. Californians do not need to do anything about it, because they could not better it if they should try.

California has what might be termed local climates, that is, the climatic conditions of one locality may be different from that fifty miles away. Long Beach is a good example of local climate. Five or six miles to the southwest there is a range of hills extending into the ocean and terminating at Point Firmin. These hills break or modify the ocean current coming regularly from the southwest, to the extent that it comes over Long Beach as a gentle or, at times, a lively breeze, which is delightful all the year and especially so in summer. Storms along the Pacific Coast are not so severe as those along the Atlantic. Cyclones, tornadoes, hurricanes and high velocity winds are unknown to Long Beach and California in general. Locally, the temperature on the hottest summer days has a cool, bracing quality that invigorates, hence heat prostrations and sunstrokes are unknown.

California is an arid state from May to October inclusive and has a rainy season from November to April inclusive. The rainy season is not always on schedule in arrival or departure. Rains may begin in October, November or December and end in April, May or June. The northern half of the state has much more rainfall than the southern half. When it rains in the lower altitudes it snows in the higher. Fogs are not so dense nor so frequent along the southern coast as the northern. We have some high fogs resembling a cloudy morning. Back East we would say, it is going to rain, but here it is glorious sunshine about 9 a. m.

In the interior the summer months are warm, especially in the great valleys. The remainder of the year is ideal. The summer climate of California's entire coast is far superior to that of the Atlantic Coast and a great many tourists are finding this to be true. Summer visitors are increasing rapidly. One interesting feature of the coast is the range of temperature for the year. It may be said that it is rare for the winter temperature to go below forty degrees above zero and the summer temperature to go above eighty-five degrees, or an annual range of forty-five degrees. Variations from the above during the year are very few.

If one were to judge from temperature or the appearance of trees, shrubs, vines, flowers and lawns or the vegetable garden, it would be more or less difficult to tell whether it is January or July. Bathers can be seen in the ocean every month in the year, though the big season is from May to October. California has a very delightful winter climate. Those seeking one a little warmer can find it in Southern Florida.

It has been said that every one laughs at the Californian's eternal talk about the climate. It is a sort of religion. Without being boastful, it is superior to the climate of any other state. The climate is here and God gave it to us and we cannot help talking about it. The climate in the East and Middle West is glorious when it is glorious, but so much of the time it resembles the little girl with a curl on her forehead—when it is bad it is horrid.

Here, almost every evening of the year, one can truly say, this is the end of a perfect day. I hope this information will clear up some of the erroneous ideas many people have of California's climate.

FLORA.

In my travels in every state I have seen none with such an endless number of kinds and varieties of flora as has California. Many things have been introduced from other states and foreign countries, but California is the natural habitat of a large part of its flora. There is a profusion of flowers out in the open every month in the year. There is a large list of trees, shrubs and vines that are flowering varieties. One of the most beautiful sights is to see the extensive citrus groves and deciduous orchards in bloom in the spring.

The trees often seen, and those which seem the most popular, are the eucalyptus, brought here from Australia, date palm, fan palm, royal palm and banana. It is not quite warm enough here for the royal palm and the banana, as they are tropical and do better in Southern Florida. Others are the pepper tree, camphor tree, varieties of acacia, Monterey cypress, Italian cypress, etc. Thousands of date palms line our streets. The eucalyptus is seen mostly in parks, groves and along the highways. The largest trees are the redwood and sequoia. These giant trees of California's forests are the wonder of the world.

DEVELOPMENT.

California has extensive and diversified natural resources, both developed and potential. It is not as yet a great manufacturing state but is rapidly becoming important along this line. One of the officials of the industrial department of a large railroad corporation has said that California has all of the raw materials necessary to manufacture eighty-five percent of the different kinds of goods made in the world. This of course does not mean that we could manufacture eighty-five percent of the goods consumed in the world. The value of manufactured goods in the Los Angeles metropolitan district is over a billion dollars annually.

The production of citrus and deciduous fruits, nuts and vegetables on a large commercial scale is the largest single development. It requires about four hundred thousand cars annually to move these products to market. The returns are hundreds of millions of dollars.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR)

POLITICS ABSORBED THE ATTENTION of the California public during August 187[illegible]. The campaign for members of the Legislature and county officials was enlivened by the presence of the candidates, on electioneering tours, in the different bailiwicks. In San Francisco the contest became a hot one and was thoroughly enjoyed. The Republicans indorsed the Taxpayers' ticket, while the Democrats renominated Mayor Bryant, who was endorsed by the Workingmen's party. The latter was an unknown and unfathomable organization. Many of its leaders were either not-registered voters or not-naturalized foreigners; its voting strength, therefore, was not determinable. To add to the complexity of the situation John F. Swift announced himself as an independent candidate for the State Assembly on an anti-Spring Valley Water Co. platform, and his election seemed assured. As the September election-day approached the battle for ballots became more and more exciting.

As the citizens showed an intention to strenuously cope with it, the anti-Chinese excitement slowly died down in San Francisco. Aside from an attempt to burn the residence of W. T. Coleman, leader of the citizens' committee, and the writing of anonymous letters, signed "Hounds," to prominent men, nothing of importance occurred during the month.

Owing to the prominent part taken by "hoodlums" of San Francisco in the anti-Chinese disturbances a discussion arose as to whence came the appellation which was indigenous to that city. The best account of its origin was given by a policeman, who stated that in 1868 an organized gang of thieves in their teens rendezvoused in a vacant building on the water front. They had a lookout who, on seeing a cop or some other undesirable person approaching, would shout a warning of: "Huddle 'em! Huddle 'em!" When the gang was finally enmeshed the name "hoodlums" was applied to them and it spread so as to eventually embrace irresponsible gangs of law-breaking youths that roamed about the city.

Mayor Beaudry of Los Angeles City was building a reservoir north of the Arroyo Seco that was 150 feet thick and 35 feet high. It was to hold 42,000,000 gallons of water, with which to irrigate many thousands of acres.

An oil-boring apparatus was brought from Titusville, Pennsylvania, to Santa Barbara City this month to be used in the development of oil wells in that section.

RECORD HEAVY-WEIGHT BABY BORN.

At Placerville, El Dorado County, August 1 began the trial of the libel suit of Congressman H. F. Page against the DeYoung brothers and the "San Francisco Chronicle" for publishing the statements of George M. Pinney. The defendants asked for a change of venue, which was denied, much to the satisfaction of the Placerville businessmen, for the town became filled with men and money during the trial. After a three weeks' hearing the jury failed to agree on a verdict. They divided in opinion politically, it was claimed, the Republicans being for conviction and the Democrats for acquittal. Another trial was in prospect during September.

The bail of Pinney, in jail in San Francisco for inability to furnish it, now approached the $100,000-mark in total. To add to his numerous troubles the Bay City grand jury returned two more indictments against him for embezzlement and his divorced wife sued to have set aside a deed to property obtained from her through misrepresentation, she claimed.

Rumors of crooked handling of mining companies' funds by officials thereof caused disconcerting conditions in the stock market, and afforded the newspapers opportunity to howl against mining-stock speculation.

The wife of Alden S. Johnson, at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, presented him with an eighteen-pound boy August 10. This was the largest baby known to have been born in California to date. It was also considered a world record, as only two babies approaching it in weight are recorded as being born in the nineteenth century. Other weighty babies, born in California, of which there is a record are: At Vallejo, Solano County, June 26, 1869, to Mr. and Mrs. Elias Viera a sixteen-and-one-quarter-pound daughter; at Los Angeles City, January 1877, to Mr. and Mrs. J. Norton a fourteen-and-one-half-pound boy.

C. W. Lane invented and perfected a safety cage attachment for use in mining shafts. It was put in operation at Ophir, Placer County, and worked satisfactorily to a gathering of mining men.

The entire force of street-car drivers in Stockton, San Joaquin County, consisting of two men, struck on account of a reduction in pay amounting to $5 a month and tied up traffic for a time.

A racing meet the last week of the month at Chico, Butte County, was well attended and was a good betting affair.

"Consulo" won the annual regatta of the San Francisco Yacht Club, sailed August 8.

Judge Benjamin Hayes died in Los Angeles City August 5, aged 63. He came to California from Maryland in 1850 and that same year was elected district attorney of Los Angeles County. He also served eleven years as district judge, and was noted as a linguist and for his superknowledge of Spanish-California history.

HENS LAY HARD-BOILED EGGS.

A Santa Barbara editor claimed that city had, in the garden of a citizen named Childs, the only night-blooming cereus in the United States flowering in the open air. It came from Jamaica and was of the variety grown only in hothouses outside of California. The flower, seven inches in diameter, was white in color.

The twelfth annual exhibit of the Mechanics Institute opened in San Francisco August 7.

Phylloxera was devastating Napa Valley vineyards and spreading its evil presence to other counties in California North. The name meant "leaf witherer," and the louse was of American origin.

The Milton-Sonora stage had its monthly hold-up August 20, this time near Copperopolis, Calaveras County. The express-box, containing about $1,200, was taken.

Maria Acuna, 97 years old, died in Los Angeles City August 7. She was a granddaughter of Eulalia Guillin, 139 years old, who was living at San Gabriel Mission.

A baseball game for the state championship, played at San Francisco August 10 by the crack clubs of that city and Sacramento, was won by the former.

A heated spell during August caused a number of old-timers, seated in the back room of a Grass Valley, Nevada County, saloon to recount hot days experienced during their sojourn in the state. "I remember," said one, "a day in August of the '50s when the thermometer at Bidwell's Bar rose to 127 in the shade. My hens that day layed hard-boiled eggs." Looking around to see if there was any doubter, he was greeted with this unexpected response: "That's so, Jim. I can vouch for that," said the speaker as he spat at and engulfed a fly crawling along the rim of a spittoon about ten feet away, "because the next morning I bought two of them from you for my breakfast."

By the state school census this year there were shown to be 200,067 children between 5 and 17 years of age in the state. Over one-fourth of them, 53,210, were in San Francisco.

Glass-ball shooting matches were much in vogue at this time.

California South's pioneer mule died at the age of 40 on the Puente Rancho, Los Angeles County. It was ridden from New Mexico by William H. Workman in the '40s, and was responsible for the death, from a kick of its heels, of his brother.

Fire which broke out in a Merchant-street, San Francisco, livery stable August 8 destroyed two blocks of frame buildings—hotels, saloons and shops—and cremated thirty horses and twelve head of blooded cattle. A $250,000 loss was sustained.

The town of Tomales, Marin County, was burned August 17.

"TOADS HAVE DIGNITY."

The variety of eucalyptus from Australia called "Ekastrata" and popularly known as "red gums" was found to be deadly to bees when in bloom. A grove of the trees, planted in 1875 near Santa Monica, Los Angeles County—when they were slips about the size of a lead pencil—

CALIFORNIA'S SEVENTY-THIRD ANNUAL STATE FAIR

Charles W. Paine

(SECRETARY-MANAGER, STATE BOARD AGRICULTURE.)

CALIFORNIA'S STATE FAIR—BUT four years younger than the state itself will open its doors at Sacramento, September 3, for the seventy-third annual exposition. That this year's fair will establish records both in exhibits and attendance during the ten days of its progress is a certainty, for the growth of this highly important institution has steadily kept pace with the growth of the state, and interest in its activities has become general throughout California.

This is as it should be. As an educational institution the State Fair compares favorably with the universities of the state, and although its exhibition period is short, the results and benefits obtained by the various industries continue indefinitely.

It is the show window for the producer and manufacturer of products. Here are brought together for comparison the finest specimens of the different breeds of livestock, poultry, etc., the best products of the horticulturist and the agriculturist—for which California is justly famous—and exhibits representing all other resources of the state. Every Californian should take a personal interest in the welfare of this great exposition, and pride in lending it every possible assistance. We sing "I Love You, California."—and here is our chance to prove it.

Before outlining some of the features of this year's fair, I believe it would be of interest to subscribers of The Grizzly Bear to read extracts from a communication received recently from Miss Marion Thompson of Santa Rosa, Sonoma County. This correspondence is appropriate because it relates to historical records pertaining to the fair.

Miss Thompson says that her father, D. W. C. Thompson, who was one of the officers of the first State Fair, held in 1854, received a prize on that occasion for having the second-best farm in California. He was a San Franciscan who spent the summers on his Sonoma Valley farm, and was a very active worker for the Agricultural Society. It is also pointed out that the prize for the best farm in California seventy-three years ago was won by a Mr. Davis, who owned the property upon which the State Agricultural College is now located in Yolo County. He was awarded this recognition at that memorable first State Fair of 1854.

It is appropriate to list the names of the officers of the first fair, as given by Miss Thompson from newspaper records in the State Library: President, F. W. Macondray of San Francisco; vice-presidents, E. L. Beard of Alameda, J. K. Rose of San Francisco, D. W. C. Thompson of Sonoma, H. C. Malone of Santa Clara, W. H. Thompson of San Francisco, C. L. Hutchinson of Sacramento; corresponding secretary, J. L. L. F. Warren of San Francisco; recording secretary, C. V. Gillespie of San Francisco; treasurer, David Chambers of San Francisco. These names are worthy of perpetuation, for they represent the pioneer leaders in agricultural enterprise and development—the foundation of California's lasting prosperity.

From the modest beginning of seventy-three years ago the State Fair has grown, step by step, until today it ranks with the famous expositions of the nation. The value of property and exhibits runs into millions. This year more than $111,000 is the record-breaking amount offered in prizes and special awards. We have gained and will hold the reputation of having the best horse show west of Chicago, and the prize awards of $30,000 will this year attract the greatest field of harness and running horses on the Pacific Slope.

STATE'S PROSPERITY INDICATED BY INCREASED AUTO REGISTRATIONS.

An increase of 130,875 in the number of registrations of motor vehicles in California during the first six months of 1927 over the corresponding period of 1926 was reported July 20 by officials of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. This means that there are 130,875 more motor vehicles on the highways of California than a year ago.

Evidencing the contention of the department that the so-called "point of saturation" is far from being reached and adding proof of the general prosperity of the state, the report shows a net gain of 15.4 percent in the number of vehicles in a year. The total, inclusive of passenger cars, solid and pneumatic tired trucks, motorcycles and trailers was 1,625,766. This does not include non-residents, cars exempt from license fees and those registered as dealers' cars. These would add several thousand to the total. Here are the comparative figures:

Passenger cars	1,388,947	1,262,841
Solid trucks	36,322	39,290
Pneumatic trucks	162,798	157,439
Motorcycles	8,122	8,968
Trailers	29,577	26,353
Totals	1,625,766	1,494,891

All counties of the state showed gains. Los Angeles County kept its usual record by registering better than one-third of the vehicles, its total being 645,549. San Francisco came second with 126,163, and Alameda third with 119,067. Other counties having large totals are: San Diego, 62,003; Santa Clara, 46,105; Orange, 40,851; Sacramento, 39,845; San Bernardino, 37,933; San Joaquin, 33,021; Riverside, 25,443; Stanislaus, 21,907; Contra Costa, 19,990; Santa Barbara, 19,000; San Mateo, 17,878; Monterey, 13,611; Humboldt, 12,704.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

were now, two years later, over thirty feet high and about two feet in circumference. A writer deplored the planting preference given the eucalyptus over the native mesquite, that abounded in California South. This tree, he said, makes excellent fuel. Its beans, growing in pods about nine inches long, blend acidity with sweetness and are palatable and healthy. Indians make a porridge of, and also distill a liquor from, them. Grazing animals eat the beans with avidity and fatten rapidly on them. But the eucalyptus fad could not be downed.

At Petaluma, Sonoma County, a Norman stallion named "Cognac" ran amuck August 15. Attacking James Kennedy, the animal kicked and knocked him down with its hoofs, then grasped him in its teeth and, as a terrier does a rat, shook him until his lifeless body dropped upon the ground. The stallion then gave chase to everyone in sight until lassooed by a vaquero.

At Gold Run, Placer County, to prevent Chinese sluice robbers from again cleaning up the gold-dust in his hydraulic mine, Hugh Powers, with H. Weisgerber and E. Nessen, employees, August 28 placed a torpedo, containing four pounds of powder, in a sluice as they ceased the day's work. Deeming it advisable to cover the torpedo with gravel to conceal it, Powers threw a shovelful upon it. The torpedo exploded, Powers was instantly killed and Weisgerber lost an eye.

A California schoolboy, M. Jackson, had given him as a subject for a composition "Toads." Here's the result of his effort: "Toads are frogs but have more dignity, while frogs are wetter. The warts that toads make can't be cured; they are chronick. They catches flies with a long red

At Adin, Modoc County, an inoffensive sheep herder loitering in the town, excited the animosity of a saloon habitue named John McCoy who killed him with a bowie knife. A vigilance committee, quickly organized, hung McCoy from the limb of a tree before sundown.

L. C. Hanks, representing a Central American republic in the consular service in San Francisco, had a barroom controversy with a stock broker named Kuranda. While exchanging fist blows J. A. Daley, partner of Kuranda, gave Hanks a knockout blow. The next morning while walking down Montgomery street Daley was overtaken by Hanks who, placing a revolver against his side, fired a bullet that soon caused death. Hanks was arrested and put in the city jail, but was allowed to pace a corridor which at one end had a number of rifles stored for use of the committee of safety. Securing one of these and concealing it in his cell, he asked for and was given a supply of ink, pen and paper and wrote a note making known his farewell wishes. He then sent a bullet into his heart.

CAMPAIGN INAUGURATED TO REGULATE TRUCKS' USE HIGHWAYS.

July 4 the State Division of Motor Vehicles launched a determined campaign to protect state and county highways by eliminating therefrom overloaded trucks.

Five crews, fully equipped with scales and other necessary equipment, were put in the field with orders to stop every truck suspected of being overloaded, weigh it and arrest the driver if the law is found to have been violated. The crews were also given orders to stop the speeding of trucks, a flagrant source of damage to the highways.

The truck weighing and checking crews will be maintained as a permanent organization, for it is the belief of the motor-vehicle organization that thousands of dollars can be saved to the taxpayers by a careful supervision of this means of transportation.

"Night owl" patrols from midnight to daylight have been inaugurated as the latest move to trap the driver of overloaded trucks and curtail damage to the state highways. It was prompted by information received from the five truck-weighing squads that large numbers of truck drivers use the highways during the early hours of the morning, partly to avoid detection in overloads and partly to escape traffic and the heat.

CALIFORNIA DRAWS THOUSANDS OF VACATIONING AUTOISTS.

Another great army of motor tourists from all parts of the globe is chugging its way into California this summer, records of the State Division of Motor Vehicles reveal. These show that 17,260 permits for non-resident cars were issued during the first six months of 1927. On an average of three persons to a car, this would mean that more than 50,000 persons used motor transportation as the means of reaching the Golden State.

This, however, does not nearly represent the total, as it is known that large numbers of cars pass through the state without securing permits, as the law gives them ten days in which to do so. These tourists left thousands of dollars in California, contributing heavily to the upkeep of the state highways by the payment of the two-cent gasoline tax. Almost every state and country was represented among the number.

U. S. SUPPLIES AUTOS FOR WORLD.

The Federal Department of Commerce says that at the beginning of 1926, 27,650,267 motor vehicles were operating throughout the world and that 95 percent of them were of American origin.

Throughout the world, the average was one car for each sixty-six of population, while the average in the United States was one auto for each five citizens.

NEW RECORDS INDICATED.

New records in motor travel to the twelve national parks of the West will be scored again this year, it is expected by authorities who are studying the tourist movement. Widespread desire to see the Western scenic marvels will be the primary causes, it is believed. The touring is now well under way, following the recent announcement by the Federal Department of the Interior of opening dates of the parks.

Agricultural Fair—The Napa County Agricultural Fair for 1927 will be held at East Napa, August 25, 26 and 27.

SANTA BARBARA'S OLD SPANISH DAYS FIESTA

(CHARLES E. PRESSLEY.)

SANTA BARBARA HAS ALWAYS BEEN A natural setting for pageantry—its traditions, its realistic history give it reason for pageantry. Padres, Indians, soldiers, Cabrillo and his sailors, pirates and commandantes, with pounds of gold braid and cumbersome epaulets, lend atmosphere to the Old Spanish Days Fiesta that is held in August of each year.

The 1927 fiesta is billed for August 11, 12 and 13. These dates have been selected as coming during the full of the moon, thus giving a wonderful opportunity for the two night pageants, to be held at the Peabody Stadium Friday and Saturday. Wednesday, August 10, will be celebrated the restoration of the old mission; this will mark the opening of the fiesta. Thursday morning, August 11, will be witnessed the historical pageant parade; nothing like it is produced anywhere else in America. It is truly a wonderful and inspiring sight.

Try and return with me for a few minutes and see the golden ports of California before the White man set foot upon this soil. See the Indians, just as they looked in those days.

In 1542 came Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, a Portuguese by birth, with soldiers and sailors, to discover Alta California; then in 1579, Francis Drake, with soldiers and sailors, on the good ship "Gold Hind." In 1602, Viscaino came, with soldiers and sailors and three Carmelite friars.

In 1679, under the Spanish flag, Don Gaspar D'Portola, with soldiers and muleteers, arrived and marched through the wilderness, arriving at Santa Barbara August 18, and camping by an Indian village called by him "Laguna de la Concepcion"—a location near the Santa Barbara courthouse of today. In 1782 Father Junipero Serra and his followers founded the Presidio of Santa Barbara, April 1. In 1786, Padre Fermin de Lasuen and brethren, December 4, founded Santa Barbara Mission.

All of the above historical incidents will be depicted in the fiesta parade and also the laterday oxcarts, ramadas, donkey trains and pioneers of the Spanish period. The wedding party, showing the marriage of Juanita De la Guerra and Alfred Robinson, as Richard Henry Dana describes very realistically in his well-known classic, "Three Years Before the Mast," will be an attraction.

The famous equestrian division will show wonderful mounts from the stables of Dwight Murphy, Adolpho Camarillo, Charles Hobson, the Donlins of Ventura and Santa Barbara Counties.

The Mexican period of 1831 will introduce Lieutenant Arguello and soldiers. The Bear Flag party will represent the American occupation, along with Colonel John C. Fremont, who marched his army over San Marcos Pass while the Californians were lying in ambush in Gaviota Pass.

And as a finale will be seen the emigrant wagons, miners, trappers and stagecoaches of the 1849 period—the year in which California began to grow in population and in importance.

NEW 40-MILE LIMIT DOES NOT PERMIT RECKLESS SPEEDING.

Although the new speed limit of forty miles an hour became effective July 29, reckless speeding upon California highways remains outlawed, and has not let down the bars to rash, heedless fast driving.

The new maximum speed limit is permissible only under safe conditions, and the State Division of Motor Vehicles says that the forty-mile limit will be strictly enforced.

PRIVATE-CAR SIRENS TABOOED.

The state attorney-general has rendered a ruling to the effect that sirens and red warning lights are reserved exclusively for use on publicly-owned police and fire apparatus and cannot be installed on machines privately owned and operated by police and fire commissioners of cities and counties.

"Gyp" Motor Clubs Active—With the summer touring season comes the annual influx of organizations of doubtful character known as "gyp automobile clubs," points out the California State Automobile Association in a warning to firms and individuals to investigate thoroughly all proposals from so-called motoring associations which promise large returns for small investments.

STATE FAIR

It is gratifying to announce that, for the first time, Southern California counties will be represented one hundred percent in the exposition buildings. The great horticultural pavilion will present a marvelous, unequaled picture of California's highly diversified field and farm crops. It is to the glory of the state that no other American commonwealth can exhibit such a varied and excellent display of products.

The same high standard will be in evidence throughout the stock barns, the machinery and manufacturers' exhibits, the educational building, the poultry sheds, the art gallery. All will blend into a magnificent and inspiring outpouring of California's wealth.

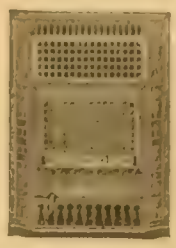
As before stated, the main function of the State Fair is to educate and instruct, but the officers and directors of the Agricultural Society are mindful of the fact that the exposition must also inspire, amuse and entertain. Therefore no opportunity will be overlooked to arrange for the pleasure of the many thousands who will visit the fair this year. Music, vaudeville acts, spectacular stunts in front of the grandstand and other entertainment features will fill every hour of the ten days.

The State Fair is the property of the people of California and the State Agricultural Society is interested above everything else in developing and operating this property to the utmost advantage of all the people. Last year a splendid grandstand building was added to the group of structures comprising the exposition. The ground floor of the grandstand provides an exceptionally attractive setting for the State Fair auto show.

We are now working out plans for a machinery building, the bill for this purpose having been signed by Governor C. C. Young a few months ago. A thirty-acre tract of ground has been acquired for further expansion. Thus it will be seen that the people of the state have a property, located in the Capital City, which is constantly increasing in value and importance.

Tribute should be paid the directors of the Agricultural Society who have worked long and faithfully, without remuneration for their services, to make the State Fair what it is today. These men are: Robert A. Condee of Chino, president of the society; T. H. Ramsay of Red Bluff, vice-president; Sam H. Greene of Oakland, Edward Dinkelspiel of Suisun, A. C. Hardison of Santa Paula, Harold J. McCurry of Sacramento, J. J. Deuel of Bakersfield, Justus F. Craemer of Orange, Ellis Franklin of Colfax, John M. Perry of Stockton, Fred H. Bixby of Long Beach and W. H. Brooks of El Centro.

WANTED—THE TALLEST NATIVE-BORN CALIFORNIAN.



This is the sign hung out by W. I. Elliott, chairman of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce state fair committee.

When the champion tall man is located, Elliott will pay his fare to Sacramento so Governor C. C. Young may look him over (or up) and award him a State Fair medal for standing as "Exhibit A" in support of California's claim as the state with the best "growing" climate.

"California grows the tallest trees in the world and I believe we also grow a champion crop of tall and stalwart men," says Elliott. The human redwoods are requested to mail to Elliott, at the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, their name, age, height (in stocking feet) and birthplace—and the birthplace must be some point in California. The winner is to be determined by September 3, opening day of the State Fair.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

"TEEN" GIRL GETTING ATTENTION

MANY OF THE IMPORTANT DRESS openings have already taken place and early prophecies of flares have become a firmly established fact. The allegiance to several approved fashions, such as two-piece ideas and pleats, is also notable. New materials and technique give them a refreshing individuality and the decree of fulness is accepted.

A most interesting development has been the profusion of the cloth dress which, until now, received scant recommendation. Designers have overcome their reticence and declared in favor of woolen frocks. In sheer georgette weaves, in crepe, frisca, jersey and rep, there is formality in the handling of the materials irrespective of whether the dress is sports-like or tailored. Trimmings of satin insets, which contrast with silk crepe skirts, are indulged in. There is a penchant for doing things lavishly this fall, reflecting an exuberance of fashion spirit which seems to celebrate the passing of the ultra-simple.

Transparent velvet and brocades have assailed the formal afternoon mode and frequently appear together in two-piece frocks, which combine metal jumpers and circular skirts of transparent velvet. This sheer velvet is sometimes subjected to rather tailored treatments in which pleats or tucks are favored. A collar of gold or cream lace may be the chief decorative concession. Transparent velvet for evening becomes more formal by means of rhinestone trimmings.

The main point in these velvets for hats, is that they are supple and have all the qualities of felt hats. The cutting and incrusting of velvet is very important, it would seem, and all sorts of unusual designs in geometric patterns, sometimes outlined in punch work, are used. Two-toned velvet combinations are also used in new ways in draped turbans that fit the head very closely. Another use of velvet is the very fine shirring. Petal effects are finely shirred and inset in a velvet hat that is sometimes crushed and pressed and sometimes plain.

Small nose veils are being employed on a few of the early fall modes. These are made either of lace or very fine tulle and generally reach just across the front of the hat.

There is some little talk of the medium large hat being shown for the advance fall in the shape that is cut away over one eye in the bend of its brim.

The medium size shape which has the effect of a cloche is also shown. It is slightly shorter at the back and it is thought that the vogue will continue until the fall season with certain variations, as it is so generally becoming.

As for the skull cap, it is being shown in the early fall models by the French, but it achieves many new angles and develops more of the toque idea than the skull-fitting cap of spring.

For the forecast of color possibilities for fall and those that will find favor later, gray receives recognition. Pink is a smart accessory shade worn with black or navy blue. Black is expected to lead in satins and much confidence is placed in gray as a leading color favorite.

The shops are exhibiting costumes for every occasion in shades of gray such as sports frocks, street costumes, afternoon and evening gowns, coats, furs and scarfs. In respect to gray accessories, the hat, gloves, bag and shoes must match or tone in with the costume. With navy blue frequently appears the lighter shades of blue in accessories and also with the frock worn with a coat of darker blue.

The dress coat of velvet for afternoon wear is generously trimmed with fur, and the ensemble of velvet of an elaborate type is expected to have an important place in every woman's wardrobe this fall.

The junior of today requires as many clothes, with as varied selection, as the older woman, therefore we are paying particular attention to the "teen" girl. Many styles contain the latest fashion features, modified to retain the youthful silhouette.

Crepe, knitted fabrics and combinations are used for the sports dress and ensemble, while georgette crepe frocks, in girlish lines, are shown for afternoon and party occasions.

Small tucks and tiny pearl buttons trim the blouse of a one-piece georgette dress, with white organdie collar and cuffs edged in net embroidery. The tucked belt and bow of self material in front completes the youthful effect, and the front of the skirt is laid in small box pleats.

A quaint sleeveless dress of checked taffeta with yoke and skirt inserts of white organdie answers many needs in the young girl's wardrobe. The skirt is scalloped and bound with organdie and has a large bow for side finish.

A review of the new confining garments presented for fall wear shows a greater use of some form of inner belt used as additional support. Women are coming to realize the importance of more scientific and properly fitted corsets. The softer fabrics and the limited amount of boning which has provided a minimum support has not been sufficient for the large majority of women.

The three types are: combinations with inner belts, step-in types; junior foundations and girdles; and the corset. The corset has virtually become the foundation garment and must be fitted to the individual type and yet possess the line and shape that the mode requires. The inner belt is adjusted to give more support to the hip than former designs. Garments of this character should be worn by women of medium stout figures. Among the shades approved and selected are coral, pale blue, delicate green and orchid for the light-weight garments of attractive appearance. The uplift brassieres and combinations of the clinging type are proving very popular.

Handbags come in two styles. One an elaborate type of silk and velvet with marcasite trim, and the other in reptilian skins, in a wide range.

ATTRACTIVE COTTON CHARMEUSE AND ITS COUSIN, SATEEN.

One of the most attractive new materials shown this spring is cotton charmeuse. It is not actually a new material but an improved quality of a very old and familiar fabric—sateen. According to the Federal Bureau of Home Economics, charmeuse usually is lighter in weight than sateen, more highly mercerized, and the warp forms the surface instead of the filling, as in sateen.

Printed patterns have been applied to sateens for many years. These were designed primarily for coat linings, and were large, scrolly designs unsuitable for dresses. This spring cotton charmeuse has appeared in small, neat patterns much like those used in English prints. Because of its lustrous surface and lovely texture it has become increasingly popular for house dresses, sports dresses, smocks and children's dresses. Many mothers like it for the baby's first rompers because it is one of the smoothest and softest of the cotton fabrics.

Cotton charmeuse is also woven in striped and checked patterns in plain pastel colors. In this form it is used largely for underwear and night wear, such as bloomers, chemises, slips, pajamas and nightgowns.

Ordinary sateen is still used a great deal because of its durability and wide range of plain colors. In blue, tan and green sateen makes excellent play suits for the small boy and girl. Sateen has long been used as a lining for draperies, but it is now being used as a drapery fabric itself. It comes in fast colors and is an economical and serviceable fabric to use for pillow covers, bedspreads and covers for comforters. It combines well with cretonne as valance or trimming bands. In a heavier weight, warp surface fabric commonly known as Venetian satin, it is used for upholstery purposes.

PILGRIMAGE TO NEIGHBOR STATE IN TRIBUTE TO PIONEERS.

Alturas (Modoc County)—Responding to an invitation from Eulalona Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, a delegation of Alturas Parlor No. 159 N.D.G.W. members made a pilgrimage to Merrill, Oregon, just over the border from California, to participate in the dedication of a bronze marker at the Natural Stone Bridge over Last River.

This marker commemorates the fifteen men who, eighty-one yars ago, forged their way through the then wild and dangerous Klamath Basin, blazing the South Emigrant Trail. It was at Stone Bridge that these men crossed Lost River. A member of this party was Captain Lindsey Applegate, father of Captain O. C. Applegate, a veteran of the Modoc War, resident of Klamath Falls, Oregon. He and other Pioneers were present to assist in the dedicatory ceremonies.

Mrs. Irma Laird, Grand Trustee N.D.G.W., conveyed greetings from Alturas Parlor and made an impressive address on the fitness of marking historical spots and of commemorating the Pioneers of the Great West.

Now, apparently, the bottom has been reached and farm products have started on the upgrade and should overtake the prices of other things within a ten-year period. In other words, the farmer's dollar should be worth 100 cents some time around 1935. If the price movement of former years may be taken as an indication, the farm products' values, compared with other values, should keep on increasing, perhaps indefinitely, until some such condition obtains as was brought about by the Civil and the World Wars.

Agriculture, as a profitable industry, appears quite likely to come into its own. A movement back to the farm is a probable result.

RESULTS OF INBREEDING.

What is the result of inbreeding? From time immemorial it has been held detrimental to vitality, productivity and constitution of animals. But science makes this old tenet not so sure. Prof. W. M. Regan of the University of California, when he came to this state from New Jersey, brought with him an experimental herd of Jersey cows that have been inbred now for several years. Prof. E. H. Hughes of the University has inbred hogs for four years. Neither has noticed any detrimental effects. On the other hand, uniformity has been increased.

Both admit their problem is too big to be determined in so short a time, and Professor Regan wants his experiment to run for fifty years. However, both have been inbreeding longer than the average farmer ever would, and it may be taken for granted that close breeding, as practiced ordinarily, isn't going to produce any noticeably bad effects.

MITES AND CHICKENS.

Watch for mites in the chicken house. They work on the hens while they sleep and hide in cracks during the day. Examination of the fowls, therefore, seldom avails to detect them. But they surely cut down vitality of the fowls, and consequently reduce production. Kerosene isn't the best remedy, although it is used a great deal. Dilute crude oil with kerosene, about three of the former to one of the latter, and paint the roosts and walls carefully. Sheep dip will do the work. Old crank case oil usually gets the mites. Be sure it is used thoroughly. Spraying is best, but applying with a paint brush is effective if carefully done. Once clean, the house will need attention but once or twice a year.

ANTS ARE REAL PESTS.

Ants are a pest that bother much. Nor is their control the easiest thing in the world. However, they can be conquered, with determination and the proper materials. If the hills can be located, wait until the evening when they are all at home, then shoot the hole full of carbon bisulphide. Gasoline sometimes gives results. Preparations now are on sale at drug stores that may be placed about the premises; or a homemade mixture of equal parts starch, sodium fluoride and pyrethrum is usually effective, if placed along their trails. Ants are hard to control, but there is no need to be worried by them if the campaign is made systematically and thoroughly.

MOTHS MUST BE KILLED.

Another household pest that worries the farmer's wife not a little is the moth. Once it gains entrance and a foothold, it is a hard problem, for its appetite is voracious and its diet list has no limit. Insect powders usually act only as repellants and chase them to new feeding grounds. A pint of flour and a half-ounce of white arsenic, mixed to a thin paste and spread upon shelves, in closets and other places where they appear, ought to poison them. This is a dangerous poison, however. Some housewives have taken carbon bisulphide, about a quart to an ordinary sized bedroom, placed it in pans, calked all the cracks and holes, and used it successfully as a fumigant. Use it carefully and don't get it near a flame. It may take persistence and patience, but the moths can be eradicated; and unless they are, damage is almost endless.

BIRDS AND FRUIT.

How, asked a backyard farmer recently, can birds be kept from the fruit as it ripens? If he wants to rid himself of such pests as English sparrows, and has no valuable birds about, poisoning is the method. Shooting does no good; English sparrows appear in pairs where one was shot. They roost on scarecrows, and pay no attention to the most ingenious methods of frightening them, after a day or two, at least. Not only do they eat fruit, but they begin in the spring with fruit buds, they dig up garden seeds and nip tender shoots. If there were no valuable birds, the problem would be easy. But with birds about that must be protected, the owner of fruit trees can do little more than grin and bear it.

TURKEYS DIE

Heavy losses among t as additional support. have been reported fro alize the importance of tricts this year. Blackerly fitted corsets. The it, but not all. Tapewo ited amount of boning kamala has been blamed, bu m support has not drug or the weakened condition ority of wome has not been determined. Thousands of potential Thanksgiving dinners have been buried along with the hope of profits of their owners, and the disease has not been diagnosed or controlled. Cleanliness, care in feeding and prompt segregation of affected birds is the only method of procedure in control that can be given yet.

CALIFORNIA FARMS SANITARY.

There are four times as many septic tanks on the farms of California as on farms of the average state in the union, according to a recent survey of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The farmer of this state, evidently, is interested in the health of his family and the sanitation of his premises. Another instance supporting the findings of the survey is the report of the College of Agriculture, that it has been necessary to republish, for the third time, Circular 270, giving specifications and directions for the construction of septic tanks. A tank of the type recommended can be built in two days by two men with a cost for materials of something like $35.

BUILD A COMPOST PILE.

An ordinarily neglected but nonetheless valuable farm practice is the construction and operation of a compost pile. It may be built above the ground, or beneath the surface in the form of a pit. If the ground is tight, no lining is needed for the pit, but cement or boards will serve to conserve the materials. Built above the ground, it may be made of boards. Make it tight and cover it, to keep the flies from breeding. Throw in everything of a vegetable nature, poultry and animal manure, weeds, grass clippings, trash and even table waste. If used consistently, it not only will aid in keeping the premises clean, but it will add many times its cost through fertility of the soil and increased production.

TO GET RASPBERRY PLANTS.

Cultivate deeply near your raspberry plants after the berries have been picked, if you want to propagate plants. This stimulates sucker growth. Do no cultivation after this time, except to hoe out the weeds. Irrigate plentifully at first, to encourage growth, but stop toward the fall to insure hardening up of the plants before digging. The earliest shoots will make the strongest plants, but they will make the heaviest drain on the vitality of the parent plants. It is better to start early with the plants, permit a few strong suckers to grow, and keep the surplus pulled out.

FEED FOR GOATS.

The stale old joke about tin cans and shoes being a sufficient diet for a goat never would have originated had goats had plenty to eat. True, they will eat paper from a billboard to get the dry paste when they are starving; but a milk goat needs and deserves just as careful care in feeding as a dairy cow. Plenty of green feed, bran and rolled barley make an acceptable feed. Vegetable trimmings, lawn clippings, prunings from trees and bushes, will eke out a dry feed diet. Opinions differ as to the economy of the milk goat, but she has her place on the small farm that has not feed for a cow. There's no pasteurization problem in handling the goat's milk; and it is as free from objectionable flavor as that of a cow, if properly handled.

HORSES NOT GONE.

Horses have not passed from the agricultural picture yet, and will not for years to come. Right now there looms a shortage in work horses and mules, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, which points out that there has been a decline of 17 percent in seven years. A further decline of from 30 to 40 percent is predicted if breeding is not resumed at once and on a considerable scale. Poor stock is a drug on the market, and always was. But good horses are in demand, and will continue to be in demand. The farmer who has good draft stock is overlooking a good bet if he does not keep his mares producing colts as well as motive power for farm implements.

CURE FOR CANKER WORMS

Canker worms, a pest on prune trees in many parts of the state, have been effectively controlled through the use of two and a half pounds of pyrethrum powder to 100 gallons of water applied as a spray. The powder is mixed first with a small amount of water allowed to stand for an hour or so and then poured into the spray tank. The control is immediate and thorough. The worms fall for two or three days and the trees are then clean. The material is harmless to the tree and to animals. Apparently the new treatment will entirely supplant the use of arsenate of lead, which never has been found more than a partial control.

TEMPORARY TREE SUPPORT.

With trees bending to the breaking point with fruit, the orchardist who didn't find time to wire brace his trees last winter is wishing now he had. He is putting props under the limbs, usually to have them fall out or to have the limbs break over them, or he is just letting the trees do the best they can. If it is possible, a rope may be put about the tree and cinched up, to draw the limbs back to place and hold them from breaking. If this can't be done, use braces the best way possible. But resolve right now to wire those trees this winter, and carry out the resolve when the trees are bare and the work is easily and cheaply done, and permanently.

CUT OFF THE RUNNERS.

If you let the runners on strawberry plants go wild, you'll get lots of plants next year, but fewer and smaller berries. Unless you want more plants, pinch off the runners. If you have let them go this far into the season, a wholesale job will be necessary, but get them off if you want big berries and lots of them. The matted row method of production gives berries, sure enough; but it is a reversion to the wild manner of growing, and there will be an accompanying reversion in size of berries. Pinching the shoots while picking the berries is the most effective and the easiest means of controlling runners. Commercial growers with fields running into many acres have a problem that must be met in a different way, quite obviously.

KEEP THE CHICKS BUSY.

Cannibalism, or picking, among chicks is caused either by an improper ration or by idleness. Having made sure that your chicks are getting the proper feed, keep them busy. Get them out on clean ground as much as possible. Indoors get them working for grain in litter deep enough to make them scratch earnestly; and keep them working on green feeds. Plenty of work and proper food will keep them out of mischief.

GIVE THE BEES A CHANCE.

Apiaries should be inspected now, if the work has not already been done. The hives should be in first-class condition for the fall honey flow, and the time is late enough right now. Remove all surplus honey at once. Hives that have no queens should be given them. Weak hives should be fed so they will be in condition for the activity that comes with blossom time in the fall. The fall flow can be stimulated appreciably by a little work at this time among the bees.

CARELESS HANDLING HURTS.

It is a surprising fact, yet one that can easily be substantiated by visiting almost any orchard during picking time, that thousands upon thousands of dollars are lost to California growers through carelessness in handling fruit from the time it comes from the tree until it reaches the

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

ENVIABLE POSITION COMMANDED BY ORDER NATIVE DAUGHTERS

Mae Himes-Noonan

(GRAND PRESIDENT, NATIVE DAUGHTERS GOLDEN WEST.)

"WITH A CORPS OF NEW OFFICIALS effervescing with enthusiasm, the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West has entered another year—the re-birth of a new era or the re-creation, as it were, of new ideas, new hopes, new aspirations, new opportunities and new purposes.

"The past years have been but mere stepping stones along the highway to success, and accomplishments that were considered of great import while busily striving to fulfill them, today seem but trivial incidents to the greater things which we will from this time forward undertake and bring to fruition.

"It is an extreme honor to be a member of the N.D.G.W., an honor which every member of the Order should realize to the fullest extent. Furthermore, we should co-operate in advancing and extending, by every lawful means within our power, the influence of this Order throughout the state. The principles upon which this Order was founded are: Love of home, devotion to The Flag, veneration of the Pioneer and an abiding faith in God.

"Love of home means, to me, not only that which is contained within the four walls, but also everything beyond which may affect the harmony and beauty within the home; or, as it has been expressed by a modern writer, the larger home. This, then, would include an interest in the conditions of city, state and nation. I would imply an understanding of the pure food laws, modern methods of education, public libraries, art galleries, parks or anything which could hinder or aid the cultural development of the members of the home.

"Devotion to The Flag I interpret to mean loyalty to the principles for which it stands or the things it represents. In our country the two outstanding features represented by The Flag are democracy and equality of opportunity. Applied to our Order then, this would mean a recognition of the democratic spirit and the practical application of it in the way we receive and value each member. It would also include the opportunity for each sister to live up to her highest ideals.

"Veneration of the Pioneer is reverence for the courage which enabled the early Pioneers of California to overcome almost insurmountable obstacles, and the exemplification of those qualities so generally admired and desired in an organization—determination, courage and will to win. In other words, that same spirit which so recently stirred the world—that spirit of determination and courage displayed by the pioneer in the world of aviation, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

"An abiding faith in God. 'God,' in its original sense means 'good.' An abiding faith in good, then, should stimulate in us a spirit of optimism and an absolute belief that the good in each member and the good in each Parlor eventually must prevail.

"The development of the Order impresses me as being analogous to the words of Spartus addressed to the envoys of Rome, when he directed their attention to the growth and development of his army and said: 'Look on that narrow stream, a silver thread, high on the mountain's side; slender it winds, but soon it is swelled by others meeting it, until a torrent, terrible and strong, it sweeps to the abyss, where all is ruin.'

"So, like the narrow stream, a silver thread, high upon the mountain's side, our Order had its origin in the small, but once famous, mountain town of Jackson, Amador County. Minute in its beginning, with but twenty-five members, it has gradually disseminated throughout the state, and today, with its membership of over 14,000, it commands an enviable position in the world of fraternalism.

"While my endeavors during the ensuing year will be directed toward the advancement and furtherance of all projects of the Order, my principal thought will be to further increase the membership and to make the Order more representative in districts not now adequately covered by Subordinate Parlors. In other words, difficult as it may seem, it will be my aim > "'To plan and build for the future

> Without thought of personal gain,
> To bury all selfish thoughts within me
> That our Order may achieve and win fame.'

"The continued success of the Order likens itself to the laying out, growth and management of a well-arranged garden. Weeds, although uninvited, always creep in and make their appearance in fertile soil and are a source of considerable grief. If not controlled, they are very apt to seriously retard or destroy the other growth. For this reason, each member should appoint herself a gardener, ever watchful to uproot the first weed of inharmony that may strive to flourish among the more-welcome blossoms.

"For stability and permanence of color, we must have our evergreen shrubs and small trees, which I might regard as perennials. In our Order we have those faithful members and past grand officers who for years have carried on with the uppermost thought of advancing the Order and always giving us the protection and aid necessary to assist us in reaching greater heights. These may be compared to the perennials, stable and permanent, adding constantly to the beauty of the garden. Then we may consider the rapid-growing, shorter-lived annuals, which may be comparable to those of us who are more in evidence and display for a year only.

"For continuous beauty, fragrance and vividness in color, we must see that there is an interspersion of the colorful flowers that will bloom all the year round, such as the stocks, gaillardias, wall flowers, border pinks, daisies, petunias and forgetmenots. While each of these possesses its own individual beauty, to complete the harmony of the garden it is essential that we have this varied combination of color and fragrance. So it is with the membership at large—each possesses her own characteristics and, by combining them, we have a representative garden.

"Some of our most fragrant flowers are the most perishable, and so some of our most brilliant members have been taken from us, by leaving the confines of the state or otherwise passing from our midst. Our everlasting flowers, those members who have retained continuous membership in the Order since its inception, furnish much of the permanent beauty and satisfaction which a delighted gardener feels on gazing upon the plants which require comparatively little encouragement but seemingly flourish and thrive in their sheer desire to add to the beauty of the world about them.

"Because red symbolizes courage, let us introduce members who may be likened to the deep red rose or the scarlet carnation, that our organization may stand firm, brave and strong for the principles upon which it was founded. White, to us, means simplicity, frankness, open mind and heart. So, in adding to our membership, let us also beautify our garden with roses and carnations of that hue.

"Because of the warmth and life we derive from the golden sun, yellow, to those of us in California, symbolizes warmth of friendship which tends toward happiness. Therefore, to make the garden complete, we must plant in season a goodly supply of California poppies, daffodils and yellow pansies, and have well placed several bushes of the attractive yellow rose known as the Golden Emblem. To add further beauty to the garden, the renowned Cecil Brunner should be in evidence. This bush, with its myriad of baby blooms, keeping us ever mindful of our able Mary E. Brusie and her homeless babies.

"A garden requires continual cultivation to have permanent beauty, so let us all strive then to plant the flowers of friendship and happiness, not overlooking the planting of a generous supply of the seed of that everlasting plant called 'Honesty.' The future of our beloved Order would indeed be bright if each of us, as a member of the organization, could express her hopes, aspirations and ambitions in the words of an unknown poet:

"To be so strong that nothing can disturb my peace of mind.
To look upon the Sunny Side of everything I find.
To make no room for worry—[illegible]
To have a heart that always beats for others in [illegible] and need.
To have a countenance that meets each creature with a smile.
To make my friends forever feel that they too are worth while.

HOMES FOR 3,000 CHILDREN FOUND.

The Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Central Committee on Homeless Children, with headquarters at 955 Phelan building, San Francisco, has elected the following officers: Colonel Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, Grand Organist N.S.G.W., chairman; Ariana W. Stirling, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., vice-chairman; Mary E. Brusie, Argonaut Parlor No. 166 N.D.G.W., secretary.

Other members of the committee are: Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand President N.D.G.W.; Harry G. Williams, Past Grand President N.S.G.W. and city assessor of Oakland; Irving Baxter, Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W.; Earl Warren, district attorney of Alameda County; Sue J. Irwin, Past Grand President N.D.G.W.; Charles A. Murdock, Rev. Patrick G. Moriarty, Lucius L. Solomons.

Over 3,000 children have been adopted into homes of California through the offices of this committee.

GRAND PRESIDENT WELCOMED HOME.

Portola Parlor No. 172 N.D.G.W. featured a welcome-home party July 5 for Grand President Mae Himes-Noonan, a member of the Parlor. A splendid program was enjoyed by the sixty in attendance. The tables were decorated in gold and green, the colors of Portola's drill-team.

Addresses were made by Grand President Noonan, D.D.G.P. Mae Rose Barry, President Elsie Lunsmann, the Parlor's Modesto Grand Parlor delegates and Catherine Himes. Mrs. Noonan was the recipient of many gifts.

SURPRISE PROMISED.

Minerva Parlor No. 2 N.D.G.W. plans to have its newly-elected officers installed early in August and the committee for the occasion promises something of a surprise for those who attend.

Like all San Francisco Parlors, Minerva is delighted that the 1928 Grand Parlor meets in this city and will do everything within its power to help prove that San Francisco IS the city that knows how.

MARRIAGE ANNOUNCED.

D.D.G.P. Agnes Curry installed the officers of Buena Vista Parlor No. 68 N.D.G.W. July 14, Miss Stella E. Mackintosh becoming president. On the Parlor's behalf, Mrs. May Noble, chairman of the committee in charge, presented a silver console to Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, retiring past president. Miss Amanda Buhman, who became the past president, announced her recent marriage to William James Loermann.

The affair was open to the public and many visitors were in attendance. Following the ceremonies a short program was presented and refreshments were served.

RECEPTION FOR PAST GRAND.

June 27 La Estrella Parlor No. 89 N.D.G.W. tendered a reception to Past Grand President May C. Boldemann and its delegates to the Modesto Grand Parlor. Past Grand Secretary Laura Frakes-Toman and D.D.G.P. Alice Lane were special guests. Mrs. Boldemann was presented with tokens of affection by the members of the Parlor.

GRAND TRUSTEE SURPRISED.

One of the most brilliant and successful functions in the history of Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. was the surprise reception tendered Evelyn I. Carlson, elected Grand Trustee at the Modesto Grand Parlor, July 13. It was attended only by members of the Parlor and D.D.G.P. Agnes McVerry. Too much credit cannot be given the committee, headed by Past President Emma Jess O'Meara, who worked so faithfully and secretively to have the party a success and a surprise.

A delicious chicken supper was served, following which a delightful program was presented by Evelyn Leahy, Irene McCourtney, Katherine Keating, Alice Clewes, Past President Katherine Lutticken and Alma Hall. Remarks were made by D.D.G.P. McVerry, Charter President Mayme O'Leary and Grand Trustee Carlson. Among the many gifts bestowed upon the honor-guest were

BIG CROWD AT INSTALLATION.

July 12 officers of Portola Parlor No. 172 N.D.G.W. and Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed. Grand President Mae Himes-Noonan officiated for Portola and D.D.G.P. Frank A. Biedermann for Pacific.

About 350 witnessed the ceremonies, among the number being Grand Vice-president Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Past Grand Presidents Ema Gett and Mary E. Bell, and representatives from Palo Alto, Redwood City, San Jose, Oakland and San Mateo. A splendid entertainment, refreshments and dancing were enjoyed.

JOINT INSTALLATION.

Officers of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W. and Twin Peaks No. 214 N.S.G.W. were jointly installed July 13. Addresses were made by D.D.G.P. Elizabeth Muller and D.D.G.P. Thomas Foley, who officiated. On behalf of No. 214, Ed. P. McAuliffe presented a past president's emblem to Thomas Cavanaugh. Following the ceremonies refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed.

SPLENDID CALIFORNIA WOMAN DEPARTS ON FINAL JOURNEY.

California lost a splendid woman July 7, when Mrs. Anna Geil-Andresen of Salinas, Monterey County, passed away at San Jose. Her death resulted from tuberculosis, contracted while following her profession as a nurse. She was for years affiliated with Aleli Parlor No. 102 N.D.G.W. (Salinas), and was long prominent in the affairs of the Grand Parlor, her especial "hobby" being California's history and landmarks.

Mrs. Andresen was born February 13, 1872, in Monterey City, her birthplace being the historic Castro-Sanchez home, built in 1828 by her great-grandfather, Don Simeon Castro, alcalde of Monterey from 1836 to 1838. She was a direct descendant of the Picos, her great-grandmother being Maria Antonia Pico. She was the daughter of S. F. and Josefa Sanchez-Geil.

Mrs. Andresen was a writer of considerable note, her activities along that line being largely confined to California history subjects. She was a liberal contributor of history-articles to The Grizzly Bear, and in 1917, as a result of her painstaking search of records, published a book, entitled "Historic Landmarks of Monterey," which was widely distributed.

Mrs. Andresen had legions of friends. In fact, everyone who was privileged to make her acquaintance became an admirer. Her life was well spent, and she will ever be remembered.—C.M.H.

CALIFORNIA'S BIG SPRINGS.

Of the sixty-five first-magnitude springs in the United States, seven are in California, according to the Federal Department of the Interior.

The largest springs in California are those at the head of Fall River. Others of the first magnitude are Rising River Springs, Great Springs, Burney Creek Springs and Crystal Lake Springs. All these issue from volcanic rock in the northeastern part of the state.

Mission Celebration—At Santa Barbara City August 10 a celebration will be held to mark the complete restoration of Santa Barbara, the only California mission in which the altar candles have never been extinguished since its foundation in 1784.

CALIFORNIA

the country. It has built large reservoirs in the high Sierras which are filled with water from melting snow. A series of hydro-electric generating plants have been built at intervals down the mountainside. Water from the reservoirs operates these plants, generating enormous horse-power energy of electric current, which is transmitted by power lines to distant parts of Central and Southern California for light and power. The water, after reaching the valley below, is utilized for irrigation.

The Southern Pacific Company is one of the largest railroad corporations in the country. It was the pioneer railroad and has had a very large part in California's development. In the East one can often hear two statements about California. One is that California is a place for the rich only. The other that the Southern Pacific owns the state. Of course, neither statement is literally true.

California is no more a place for the rich only than any other state. It costs no more to live here than elsewhere. Workingmen of the right sort, who are honest and industrious, can do as well here as in any other part of the country. The Southern Pacific handles a large volume of business and owns more than half of the railroad mileage in the state and of course needs large property holdings. It is true that it had a strong hold on the State Legislature years ago, but that is not the case today. Centered at Los Angeles, it owns the largest electric railroad system in the United States, handling passengers, freight, express and mail. The Santa Fe railroad came into California many years after the Southern Pacific, but has also been a big factor in the development of the state.

The irrigation projects that have been developed in this state are very extensive. The winter rains have a large part in the success of all soil crops because they saturate the earth with water and fill the rivers, streams, lakes and reservoirs for the coming season. After the rains are over irrigation is the main dependence. Vast quantities of water are stored in California by means of dam and reservoir. Main reservoirs are usually in a high altitude. A notable example is the Cuyamaca reservoir, altitude 4,600 feet. Water is piped from it to smaller concrete reservoirs forty to fifty miles away. The smaller reservoirs are at a much lower altitude and the water moves through the pipes by gravity. Other pipe systems carry the water from the smaller reservoirs to the land to be irrigated. The pipe system of irrigation conserves water as there is no loss by evaporation or soaking into the ground while enroute to the land to be irrigated.

Another system is the open canal and ditch, carrying the water from its source to the land to be irrigated. This system is wasteful and does not conserve water as noted above, though it is extensively used. Still another system is the well, from which water is pumped into large elevated tanks by windmill, gasoline engine or electric motor. This method has its limitations and is used for small tracts of an acre or more. California has so many large developments that only a few could be mentioned here.

PROPAGANDA.

Every state should have the truth told about it! California has been maligned without cause. Every person knows there is not a place on earth that would suit all comers. Millions of people have come and gone, as they have from every other state, yet our population is rapidly approaching five million. Where have they all come from? They are from every state and about every foreign country. Some states have contributed such large numbers that it has caused alarm, jealousy and ill feeling in some places. Things happening in California have been seized upon, enlarged, exaggerated, the untruth told, then broadcast through the newspapers. Fortunately the most of such propaganda was so inconsistent and ridiculous that sensible people would not believe it. Examples are the foot-and-mouth disease and the Santa Barbara earthquake. Both were greatly exaggerated and spread throughout the East and Middle West. At Santa Barbara only fourteen lives were lost and the property damage can be laid at the door of faulty, cheap construction. The foot-and-mouth disease never reached a widespread epidemic stage and was quickly and efficiently put under control.

What is California's earthquake history? Go back 114 years to 1812, when San Juan Capistrano Mission was partially destroyed by earthquake during a Sunday morning service and about forty lives were lost. During the 114 years the loss of life has been only about one hundred and the destruction of property has not been great. It would be absurd to think California is not a safe place in which to live. Only a year ago a cyclone in Illinois and neighboring states killed about one thousand people and the destruction of property was enormous. Earthquake shocks have been felt in many parts of the United States in the last two years.

Another thing we have to contend with here is the labor condition, and many people do not seem to understand it. California is a progressive and prosperous state; as much so as any other. If we had a normal population there would be an abundance of work for all. Now comes the difficulty. More than a million tourists come to this state annually. They are coming and going all the year and population is never normal. It is difficult to estimate, even approximately, how many of these tourists must work for their daily bread. No doubt one-third of them must work, so the labor market is glutted by the influx. With our prosperity much of this surplus labor is absorbed, but even California cannot employ all creation. Even though there is plenty of work the labor market is over supplied with workers. The disappointed ones, without studying the cause, move on and "knock" the state because they fail to get work.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

California is about a thousand miles in length from its northwest to the southeast extremity. For convenience, it is divided into three divisions—Northern, Central and Southern California. Each division is approximately the same size. Southern California comprises the ten southern counties. Two of them are noted. Los Angeles County is the richest in agricultural products in the United States. San Bernardino County is the largest in the United States.

Want to reach the California buying public? Then consider the advertising columns of The Grizzly Bear, which is the only publication in the state with a California-wide circulation!

Eighty five percent of the motion pictures produced in this country come from Los Angeles County. More than half of the petroleum output of the state is produced in Los Angeles County. The population is around a million and a half, and the assessed valuation of the county is three billion dollars.

Southern California, while it has only about one third of the state's area, has half or more of the population and wealth. Southern California is the best known and most talked about and has more than half of the tourists that come to the state. This division produces more than half of the citrus fruit of the state. Los Angeles, with a million and a quarter people, is the largest city west of Chicago. Southern California is scenic, has wonderful paved highways everywhere, agreeable all-year climate, and the greatest combination playground—the mountains and the sea.

MANY WITNESS INSTALLATION TWELVE NATIVES' PARLORS.

A large crowd assembled July 16 in Moose Hall, Long Beach, to witness the joint public installation of officers of the Native Son and Native Daughter Parlors of Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

D.D.G.P. William F. Durr, assisted by D.G.P. Sidney B. Witkowski, D.D.G.P. Albert Cron and Pianist Roger M. Johnson, first installed the officers of nine Native Son Parlors—Los Angeles No. 45, Ramona No. 109 (Los Angeles), Hollywood No. 196, Long Beach No. 239, Vaquero No. 262 (Los Angeles), Sepulveda No.263 (San Pedro), Santa Ana No. 265, Monrovia No. 266 and Santa Monica Bay No. 267—the presidents of which became, respectively, Julius O. Leuschner, Carl A. Mueller, Carl E. Riley, Charles E. Crowell, Miguel Micaroli, Willard Buchanan, James B. Utt, Ray E. Kittle and Dwight C. Freeman.

Officers of three Native Daughter Parlors—Long Beach No. 154, Verdugo No. 240 (Glendale) and Santa Ana No. 235—were then installed by D.D.G.P. Mamie Schonberg, assisted by Genevieve Hiskey as acting grand marshal, the respective presidents becoming Fannie McPherson, Clytelle Hewitt and Mary Moore.

Among those who witnessed the ceremonies were: Lily O. Reichling-Dyer, who founded the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West and who delivered a brief address; Marvel Thomas, Grand Trustee N.D.G.W., and John T. Newell, Grand Third Vice-president N.S.G.W. Dancing, music for which was furnished by the orchestra of Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W., concluded an enjoyable occasion. Light refreshments were dispensed during the evening by Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W.

PAST PRESIDENT GETS EMBLEM.

At the July 6 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. two candidates were initiated. Among the visitors were D.D.G.P. William F. Durr and Stanley A. Wheeler of San Pedro, who delivered addresses. R. J. Pogue gave an account of his trip to Yellowstone National Park.

On the Parlor's behalf, Harold W. Oliver presented to Edgar C. Crowell, retiring past president, an emblematic pin. The membership drive is progressing favorably and a big class of candidates is promised for August. The following made up the Parlor committee in charge of arrangements for the July 16 joint installation: E. E. Hann, W. F. Kroeger, H. W. Oliver, C. E. Crowell and Dr. S. T. Luce.

Bathing Beauty Parade—Long Beach will stage its annual bathing beauty parade along the Pike, August 21.

Citrus Station Expanding—Development work is under way at the University of California's citrus experiment station at Riverside City which will bring into use an additional 120 acres of land.

Engineers To Meet—The National Association of Stationery Engineers will hold its forty-fifth annual convention at Los Angeles City, August 22 to 27.

CALIFORNIA'S "MAGIC" CITY

VASQUEZ'S REVENGE

(W. O. GILKEY,
History and Landmarks Committee
Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W.)

THE CHICKENS, WITH THEIR RUFFled feathers, were scurrying to shelter, the horses were neighing and pawing the ground, gray clouds swooped down and gathered in battle formation, a few drops of rain fell. This was the advance guard of the approaching storm.

Don Juan, my host, stepped out upon the portico, surveyed the heavens, then turned and slowly entered the large-beamed living-room with its furniture brought from Spain. As I sat by the fire dreaming of the days of the dons and dashing caballeros, Don Juan laid his hand upon my shoulder, saying: "Amigo, muchas lluvia." ("Friend, much rain.") "Yes, senor, much rain," was my reply, "but haven't we ridden through the storm while driving your cattle from out of the mountains to the grassy plains of old San Gabriel? And why, senor, should rain dampen our spirits, for you well know that Don Tomasio would feel insulted if we were not present in his box at the 'Mission Play'." "You are right, my lad, we shall go."

Orders were given and serapes were produced, and in short notice the horses were awaiting outside in the patio. By this time the rain had settled in for the night, and as we opened the door, allowing the moist air to enter the room, we drew our serapes closer about us.

With one bound we were into the saddles, the horses pausing as if to allow us to get firmly settled, then leaped forward, dashing out the gate and around the left wing of the old adobe to the trail that led up the canyon to the road to old San Gabriel.

After our first burst of speed we slowed down to a walk, for the road was dangerous and the storm at its height. At the crest of the hill, at the head of the pass, was the deserted ranchhouse of Don Repetto, standing out in relief against a sea of storm-swept clouds.

As we pulled up under the drooping pepper trees to rest our horses and adjust our serapes, we heard, as if in the distance, the clatter of horses' hoofs. "Thunder!" cried I. "Yes," replied Don Juan, "the Bandit Vasquez's thundering horde, returning for revenge."

As we turned our prancing horses to the north and started over the pass we heard the clatter of thunder and, looking back, were blinded by a flash of light. In an instant all was dark and still, except for the echo of the thunder that was fast dying as it sped over the hills to the south.

Little was said as we made our way over the pass to the north, for the rain pelted against our broad-brimmed hats as we turned our heads from the onrush of the storm. The only sounds were the howl of the wind, and of the horses' hoofs as they stepped in the soft earth that covered the road.

As we approached the hacienda of Don Tomasio we were met by Poncho, the don's young son, who had heard us coming and came to receive us. After an exchange of greetings we were relieved of our wraps, ushered into the great living-room and seated by the fire. Coffee and cigarettes were produced, and after our wants were satisfied we were asked to relate the experiences of our ride through the storm.

We told of the fury of the storm, of the danger of slides in the pass, of the bolt of lightning we were so fortunate to escape, and of the thunder which, Don Juan said, was the returning horsemen of the Tiburcio Vasquez gang, that were bound for revenge and the buried gold.

The old signor was right for, as we wound our way homeward through the pass, we stopped at the crest of the hill to view the beautiful valley below. But hold! To our left, through the old pepper trees that crown the majestic hill, we saw the crumpled ruins of the once-stately old adobe of Rancho Repetto leveled to the ground.

Sure enough! The Bandit Vasquez reaped his revenge for, like the robber he was, he came in the storm and disappeared in the night, taking his buried gold and leaving in ruin the Repetto adobe.

("Vasquez Gold," of which this story is a sequel, appeared in The Grizzly Bear for May 1927. The Repetto adobe referred to is near Monterey Park, Los Angeles County. The Native Sons made unsuccessful attempts to have

SUMMER CONCERTS DRAW.

With attendance greater than any month of July in their history, the Hollywood Bowl summer concerts move on into their second and last month of the season. The new special policy established by the Bowl Association this season is assuring musical satisfaction for all tastes.

Tuesday of every week is "novelty night," at which time some novel or unusual number is given, surrounded by a program of good standard classics and lighter numbers. Thursday is "symphony night," when one of the great symphonies is featured. Friday is "solo night," when the program is varied by solos by celebrated vocalists or instrumentalists. "Popular night," on Saturday, offers a program of light, melodious numbers, strictly high-class in calibre but of a sparkling, tuneful nature.

While the July audiences, which numbered as high as 18,000 on some nights, welcomed five world famous conductors and four well-known soloists, music lovers will, in the month of August, greet the same number of equally famous conductors and one more soloist, there being five during the closing month of the concert season.

GRAND OPERA BALLET TRAINS.

Interest in the coming October performances of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association will be heightened by the announcement, made by George Leslie Smith and Merle Armitage, managers, that Serge Oukrainsky has been engaged to provide the ballets for all operas. Oukrainsky is known all over the world for his dance creations and his individual ballet work. He is the senior member of the celebrated Pavley-Ourainsky ballet, which has toured Europe, South America and the United States.

For the past many years these two masters of the dance have directed the ballet at the Chicago Civic Opera, the Paris Opera and the Colon Opera in Buenos Ayres, in addition to their own tours. Training of the ballet for the Los Angeles season started two months ago.

CARTHAY CIRCLE THEATER POPULAR.

When the ventilating engineers installed the cooling and ventilating system in the Carthay Circle Theatre, which is now playing the screen sensation, "7th Heaven," they used a revolutionary principle which has resulted in this theatre being the coolest showplace in Los Angeles, and they stumbled onto the solution of what, until a year ago, was the concern of motion-picture players and everyone who had to work under the intense glare of studio lights, namely, "Kleig eye," the painful and dangerous eye malady contracted while working under the powerful lights used for motion-picture work.

This ventilating and cooling system washes and cools the air at the same time, removing all dust and giving positive temperature control at all times. It is now being installed in all the big indoor stages at the motion-picture studios, for it was found that "Kleig eye" was really caused by burned carbon dust particles which were thrown into the air by the powerful studio lamps.

The coming of warm summer weather has made the Circle Theatre the most popular matinee house in Los Angeles by reason of its delightfully cool interior. "7th Heaven" is a picture of love, courage and faith, and is being presented with Carli Elinor's famous concert orchestra and Jack Laughlin's prologue, "Paris."

ATHLETICS GETTING ATTENTION.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. initiated a class of four candidates July 22, the ritual being impressively exemplified by the officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, headed by President Julius O. Leuschner. D.D.G.P. Burrell D. Neighbours delivered an address for the enlightenment of the candidates.

The Parlor's August program includes initiation the 19th, and an entertainment under the supervision of the good of the order committee, Walter Slauson chairman, the 26th. The younger members of Ramona are interesting them-

Native Daughters of the Golden West

PIONEER REVERENCE INSPIRED

SAN JUAN BAUTISTA—AMIDST SETtings worthy of the envy of any dealer in, or lover of California antiques, San Juan Bautista No. 179 met July 6 in new quarters located in the banquet-rooms of the San Juan Bautista Mission and conducted the invocation over a Bible, a relic of the "Donner Party" and probably one of the oldest English-language Bibles in this state. It was through the courtesy of the Rev. Father O'Reilly, resident priest of the mission, that the Parlor secured these historic and appropriate rooms for its future home.

Great credit is due the committee in charge of the furnishing and decorating for while producing a most homelike and artistic effect, they in no way destroyed the atmosphere of antiquity so inherent to the rooms. Layer upon layer of dust, that had lain undisturbed upon the walls for ages past, were completely obliterated by numerous coats of whitewash under the skillful brush-wielding of two enthusiastic Daughters.

A bright-hued "body brussels" carpet, whose vividness belied its more than sixty years of continuous service in the home of Miss Victoria Zanetta, one of the charter members of the Parlor, covered the rough-hewn flooring and bore silent testimony to the sturdiness and integrity of those things that came with the pioneer settlers. No wonder Native Daughters were reared on substantiability.

Chairs, ranged on each side of the rooms in sufficient numbers to seat the entire membership and many guests, came from the once well-known "Plaza Hall." Had they but tongues, they could tell of many weighty subjects of government, politics and development that were discussed and settled by one-time dignitaries of this state while seated in their comfortable embrace.

Even the piano, which adds so much pleasure during the conduct of the Parlor ceremonies, boasts an age beyond that of the oldest living member and still responds to the touch with a haughty remembrance of the delicate tone and harmony brought from it by some of the most famous musical artists to visit the Western coast.

In such a lodge-room with such surroundings, and with many members present whose parents were in the state before there were any "Native Daughters," is it to be wondered that, in closing, eyes and thoughts reverted to the Bible, the property of the secretary, Miss Gertrude Breen, and brought through trial and tribulation to bring solace to those assembled as it had done to all in the "Donner Party," both in their hazardous trip across the plains and their enforced encampment. This Bible and her father, John Breen, one of the few survivors of the catastrophe, doubtless added much solace to the direful hours and days spent in that dismal prison whose walls were the unscalable snow-clad mountains of the mighty Sierras surrounding beautiful and scenic Donner Lake. Could one fail to "Revere the Memory of the Pioneers" in such an atmosphere?

Speakers of the evening included President Blanche Taix, Mrs. Katherine Nyland, Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs, D.D.G.P. Josephine Snell. Delicious refreshments were served.

Piedmonters Wed.

Oakland—Miss Edith Marian Roemer, third vice-president of Piedmont No. 87, became the bride June 27 of Richard Cannel Hamb, third vice-president Piedmont No. 120 N.S.G.W. The groom is a son of Richard M. Hamb, Grand Trustee N.S.G.W.

Grand President in Mother Lode.

San Francisco—During the latter part of July, Grand President Mae Himes-Noonan officially visited the following Parlors of the Mother Lode at joint meetings:

Ursula No. 1 (Jackson) and Chispa No. 40 (Ione) at Jackson, Amador County, the 26th; Amapola No. 80 (Sutter Creek), Forrest No. 86 (Plymouth) and California No. 1 (Amador City) at Sutter Creek, Amador County, the 27th; San Andreas No. 113, Princess No. 84 (Angels Camp) and Ruby No. 46 (Murphys) at San Andreas, Calaveras County, the 28th; Dardanelle No. 66 (Sonora), Golden Era No. 99 (Columbia) and Anona No. 164 (Jamestown) at Sonora, Tuolumne County, the 29th.

Youngster Growing.

San Bernardino—The seventy-second application for membership in the recently-instituted Lugonia No. 241 was presented at the Parlor's July 13 meeting. Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer and D.D.G.P. Florence Dodson Schoneman were among the visitors and delivered inspiring and encouraging addresses. The Parlor has changed its meeting nights to the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month. At the July 25 meeting a large class of candidates were initiated.

President Outlines Plans.

Oroville—Officers of Gold of Ophir No. 190 were installed July 6 by D.D.G.P. Lois Heberle, Bernice Renfrow becoming president. Several visitors from Chico were in attendance, also Mrs. Maybelle Burns, a member of No. 190 residing in Seattle, Washington State.

President Renfrow, following her installation, gave an inspiring address in the course of which she outlined the work she hopes to accomplish during her term. Irene Lund, retiring past president, was the recipient of a diamond-encrusted emblematic pin. Refreshments were served.

Generous Gift for Good Cause.

Mariposa—Mariposa No. 63 has appropriated $100 to assist the Mariposa County Chamber of Commerce in collecting and caring for pioneer relics of the county. The Parlor has always taken an active interest in this work as well as in preserving landmarks of old Mariposa.

Joint Installation.

Sacramento—Officers of La Bandera No. 110 and Sutter No. 111 were jointly installed July 15 by D.D.G.P. Maybell Tuggle. Among the many in attendance were Grand Vice-president Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand Inside Sentinel Anna Mixon-Armstrong, Past Grand Presidents Ema Gett and Dr. Eva Rasmussen, and a delegation from Woodland No. 90. Following the ceremonies President Estella Baumgartel of La Bandera presented a set of hand-painted china to D.D.G.P. Tuggle.

Speakers of the evening included Past Grand President Gett, supervising district deputy for Sacramento County, Grand Inside Sentinel Armstrong, Mrs. Nettie Harry and others. Refreshments were served.

Grand President Dinner Guest.

Mountain View—Grand President Mae Himes-Noonan was guest of honor at a dinner given by Grand Trustee Eldora McCarty at her home here. In the appointments and favors and throughout the several courses the colors of the Order, red, yellow and white, were used. Those present, in addition to Mrs. Noonan, were the Grand President's mother, Mrs. Katherine Himes, Agnes Curry, chairman 1928 Grand Parlor committee, and Mr. Curry, all of San Francisco, and Mr. and Mrs. McCarty.

President Was Queen.

Salinas—Mrs. Edna Martin, president Alell No. 102, reigned as queen over the Colmade de Rodeo, which terminated this city's sixteenth annual rodeo July 23. The privilege of choosing the queen was delegated to the Native Daughters to avoid the usual dissension from a popularity contest.

Pioneer Monument Site Selected.

Quincy—Plumas Pioneer No. 219 had a special meeting July 1 at Portola and exemplified the ritual. The Parlor now has twenty-two members residing at Portola, and they served delicious refreshments to the visitors.

The pioneer committee of the Parlor visited Elizabethtown recently and selected the site for the monument to be erected to the memory of Plumas County Pioneers. Elizabethtown was named for Elizabeth Stark-Blakesley, September 1852.

Anniversary Celebrated.

Napa—Officers of Eschol No. 16 were installed July 18 by D.D.G.P. Frieda Leudeman, Theresa Hein becoming president. July 26 members of the Parlor accompanied D.D.G.P. Leudeman to Vallejo and installed the officers of Vallejo No. 195 at joint ceremonies with Vallejo No. 77 N.S.G.W.

July 25 Eschol celebrated the fortieth anniversary of its institution. The six remaining charter members had charge of the entertain-

Successful Term.

Chico.—The January-July term was most successful for Annie K. Bidwell No. 168, which added eighteen new members. Social activities were given due attention, club affairs were called, special days of the Order were duly observed, a generous sum was given the Mississippi flood relief committee and twelve outfits were sent to homeless babies.

Following installation July 14, when Alice Bass became president, the Parlor took a summer recess until September.

National Museum Encouraged.

San Juan Bautista.—The "Fill the Hole" Club, organized for the exchanging of ideas among the newspaper fraternity, had an enjoyable gathering here July 10, when the proposed Fremont national memorial museum, sponsored by the Native Daughters of San Benito County, was discussed and was promised united support by the pencil-pushers. In the museum will be housed for all time relics, documents, etc., connected with the early days of California.

Speakers at the gathering included Frank B. Abbe, San Juan mayor; B. J. Ahern, "San Juan Mission News;" A. R. Shields, "Santa Cruz Tribune;" John Hall, "Gilroy Dispatch;" Mr. Wilson, "Watsonville Register," and Bertha A. Briggs, Past Grand President N.D.G.W.

Native Sons of the Golden West

GRAND PRESIDENT RECEPTION GUEST

SAN JOSE—NATIVE SONS FROM ALL sections of California gathered here in large numbers July 6 at a reception tendered Grand President Charles A. Thompson. During the evening "Doc" Newton, on behalf of the Grand President's home-Parlor, Santa Clara No. 100, presented him with an emblematic watch-charm. There was community singing, and other musical numbers were contributed by William Pengilly, Ray Tinney and an orchestra.

Fred L. Thomas, district attorney of Santa Clara County, was introduced as the toastmaster, following the dinner. Those who responded included: Grand Marshal John Corotto, Past Grand President Dr. Charles W. Decker, Grand Trustee Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb, Grand Second Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Past Grand President Thomas Monahan, Grand Trustee Emmet Seawell, Judge W. A. Beasley, Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler and Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington. "Give your best efforts to that organization which means love of country, love of home and love of The Flag which stands for America—the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West," concluded Byington.

Grand President Thompson, the final speaker, was given an ovation as he arose. "The unflagging energy and loyalty of the Santa Clara County Parlors," he said, "were responsible for securing the greatest Native Son honor for the county." Briefly referring to the Order as a whole, he declared "a recent survey revealed that, in relation to membership and financial resources, the Native Sons compared favorably with other California fraternal organizations, and in relation to public esteem the Order holds the highest position in its history."

Constructive Plans Commended.

Santa Barbara—Completing his presidency of Santa Barbara No. 116, George A. Black presented a splendid report for the term July 7. He commended "the membership for the interest manifested in the affairs of the Parlor, and" congratulated No. 116 "on the initiative work not only in the affairs of the State of California, but its constructive plans for the better conditions of Santa Barbara County and the City of Santa Barbara, and its co-operative work toward the advancement of affairs in Ventura County."

"Santa Barbara Parlor has shown signs of activity," continued the report, "and this Parlor should in consequence become a potent asset among fraternal organizations in Santa Barbara, and should at all times contribute its share in California affairs."

Gathering Trinity Relics.

Weaverville—Mount Bally No. 87 and Eltapome No. 55 N.D.G.W. are interested in collecting relics of pioneer Trinity County days to be housed in the exhibit-room at Memorial Hall, where the Board of Supervisors has promised to install suitable cases.

The Parlors' committees in charge of collecting these relics, which will be appropriately labeled, include: Mount Bally—J. J. Jackson, Ronald Blaney, Horace Leavitt. Eltapome—Mrs. Royal Trimble, Mrs. A. J. Fetzer.

Anniversary Observed.

San Rafael—The forty-second institution anniversary of Mount Tamalpais No. 64 was observed with a dinner, initiation and installation of officers July 25. Frank M. Angellotti, former chief justice of the California Supreme Court, George Agnew and T. J. Wosser are the sole remaining charter members.

The Parlor is experiencing a substantial membership increase, a drive under the directorship of Newman Cohn and a committee of active members being in progress. Confidence is expressed that No. 64 will increase its membership by not less than 300 by next May.

Planning for Admission Day.

Santa Cruz—To aid and encourage Santa Cruz No. 90 in arranging a monster state-wide celebration of Admission Day, September 9, for this city, Grand President Charles A. Thompson, Grand Marshal John Corotto and Past Grand President Thomas Monahan visited the Parlor July 12. In the course of addresses the visitors advanced many valuable suggestions.

To arrange the details of the celebration the Parlor has appointed several sub-committees and the following executive committee: Charles E. Canfield, chairman; T. V. Matthews, secretary; Enoch Alzina, Arnold M. Baldwin, R. A. Schwarzmann, Allen Dudley, Darrell Dudley, Stanley Tait, Harold Hitchie, Willett Ware, Ralph S. Miller.

The Grand Parlor transportation committee—Joseph Barry (chairman), James L. Foley and Jesse M. Waterman—has arranged with the Southern Pacific for a rate of $2.50 from San Francisco or Oakland to Santa Cruz and return for the Admission Day celebration.

Birthday Party in Mountains.

San Bernardino—In celebration of the birthdays of those members born in the months of May, June, July and August, Arrowhead No. 110 had a picnic barbecue at its Cresline Clubhouse July 3. Members of Lugonia No. 241 N.D.G.W. were among the many who attended. A program was presented during the evening.

Splendid Work Appreciated.

Ferndale—Officers of Ferndale No. 93 were installed July 18 by D.D.G.P. R. A. Titlow, E. H. Lanini becoming president. Grand Inside Sentinel A. W. Garcelon was among the visitors.

In appreciation for splendid work during his incumbency of office, John Lund, on the Parlor's behalf, presented a past president's emblem to S. J. Damon. Refreshments, featuring cantaloupes a-la-mode, concluded the evening's program.

CALIFORNIA IS SUFFERING GEOLOGIC GROWING PAINS.

California, together with the rest of the Pacific Coast from Alaska down to Patagonia, is still suffering from geologic growing pains, according to Professor Franz X. Schaffer, famous Viennese geologist. Geologically, he points out, California and the rest of the Pacific Coast are relatively in their early teens. They are still growing, but the growth cannot be measured by centuries, except for relatively slight changes in the surface, but must be measured by hundreds of thousands of years.

The growth is there, nevertheless. It shows in the rising mountains, going higher and higher, and the gradually sinking valleys of California. It is this geologic transformation, going on at so slow a rate that the most delicate instruments are needed to check, which gives California such a variety of scenic splendors.

Evidences of this growth can be found in the islands off the California coast. These were once the tops of mountains; they have sunk and only their tips show above water now. They may sink still further, but there is no need to worry about them, since it will take hundreds of thousands of years, in Nature's slow fashion, to effect any real change.

On the other hand, the Coast Range of mountains is rising, as is the entire coast line. Evidence of this can be found in the remains of very young mollusks found buried all up and down the California coast.

GAINING IN POPULARITY.

Twenty-six California cities have adopted the uniform traffic ordinance sponsored by the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California. They include.

Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Diego, Santa Rosa, Santa Cruz, Willows, Bakersfield, Glendale, Anaheim, Santa Barbara, Delano, San Bernardino, Colton, Ventura, Calexico, Santa Monica, Alhambra, Brea, Beverly Hills, El Monte, La Habre, Ojai, Pomona, Oxnard, South Pasadena and Whittier. And the list is growing.

CALIFORNIA'S NATIONAL FORESTS GREAT ASSET

CALIFORNIA'S PROSPERITY, AS EXemplified by fruit and farm crops, by droelectric development, timber and livestock industries, recreational advantages and thousands of happy homes, is inseparably linked with the wealth of resources provided by its national forests, according to a new descriptive bulletin on "The National Forests of California" by Robert W. Ayres and Wallace Hutchinson of the California district, United States Forest Service.

"The Spanish explorers who were attracted to California in the early days were right in their assumption that the region possessed wealth beyond the dreams of avarice," say the authors, "but they missed the one kind of wealth they sought gold and they failed to realize the wealth that is in her forests and waters, wealth now being derived from a thriving timber industry and from prosperous irrigated farms and orchards."

The eighteen national forests of California cover nearly one-fifth of the total area of the state and contain resources valued at $300,000,000, not taking into account their value in protecting the mountain watersheds upon which depend nearly all the actual and potential major irrigation and hydroelectric power developments of the state and the continuity of municipal and domestic water supplies.

The national forests in California are managed with a view of perpetuating their vast resources. In all lumbering operations upon the government's forest lands only the mature trees, previously designated by forest officers, are cut, and precautions are taken in felling and slash disposal to protect the young growth from fire or other injury. Every effort is made to keep the lands producing timber up to their full capacity.

California was one of the earliest states to give thought to the care of its natural resources and as early as 1850 the best thinkers of the state were urging scientific care of the forests. Notwithstanding this fact, there are nearly 1,500,000 acres of privately-owned cut-over lands in the state now producing but a small part of the timber that could be grown upon them. Also some 50,000 acres a year of privately-owned forest are now being logged off, of which at least 40 percent is left in an unproductive condition.

Stock raising is the oldest industry in the state, and at one time was attended by violence and range wars, says the bulletin. Today the Forest Service effectively regulates the grazing on 24,000,000 acres of government and private lands within the national forests.

The circular, which is illustrated with twenty-six photographic cuts and a skeleton map of the national forests of the state, gives an account of the early history of California's forests, the national forest resources in the state, recreation possibilities and scenic attractions, wild life, etc. Copies of the publication (Miscellaneous Circular No. 94) may be obtained free of charge from the District Forester, U. S. Forest Service, Ferry Building, San Francisco, or from any of the forest supervisors of the eighteen national forests of the state.

OPERATOR'S LICENSE SITUATION CLARIFIED BY AUTO CLUB.

Much confusion prevails among motorists over the amendment to the California Vehicle Act, that went into effect July 29, relating to operator's license. One of the reports in connection with the new law is that every motorist who has carried a license for more than three years must be examined for license renewal. This is in error, says the Automobile Club of Southern California, which has issued a statement to the following effect:

"In the renewal of such license, when called in by the State Division of Motor Vehicles, the division may or may not require an examination as a condition precedent to the issuance of a new license. This is a beneficial feature, because if the record of one heretofore licensed appears to be bad that is, to involve numerous convictions of speeding or reckless driving,—then the division is authorized to require an examination of such applicant for the renewal of license. In this way some who have been licensed previously and who, because of physical or mental deficiency are not competent to drive an automobile, and who have caused numerous accidents previously, may thus be prohibited from driving, by the division refusing to issue a new license in the event the applicant fails to pass the examination."

STOCKTON, SAN JOAQUIN COUNTY

Industrial and Agricultural Capital of Interior California

ROMANCE OF SUTTER'S FORT MUST BE PRESERVED

STOCKTON PARLOR NO. 7 N.S.G.W. FEATured a reception to one of its popular members June 27—George F. McNoble, elected Grand Trustee at the San Pedro Grand Parlor. Sixteen Parlors were represented at the gathering. On behalf of Stockton, Law T. Freitas presented a wallet to McNoble who, in responding, declared he joined the Order at the age of 18, while a country schoolboy in the Mother Lode country.

Grand President Charles A. Thompson extended greetings to the honor-guest and referred to the propaganda that is being systematically sent out for the purpose of creating sentiment for state division. "California will never be divided," declared Judge Thompson, "and the Order of Native Sons must teach that there is no Southern and no Northern California, and that the virtues of any one section of the state should not be pitted against those of any other section."

Brief addresses were delivered by Past Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Outside Sentinel Arthur J. Cleu, Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb, Grand Trustee Frank I. Gonzalez, Grand Second Vice-president Charles L. Dodge and Assemblyman Percy G. West (Sunset No. 26). The latter pleaded for co-operation in arousing interest in historic Sutter Fort, the property of the state, located in Sacramento, and said:

"Instead of giving you a history of Sutter's Fort, other than a very brief one, I am going to have a little heart-to-heart talk with you about what the state is doing at the old fort, and what we, as loyal Native Sons, should do to further that good work. Already we, as an Order, have accomplished much, but there is a great deal yet to do. Every Parlor, in any way connected with the great Mother Lode, should have a Sutter's Fort committee to see that its district is adequately represented by appropriate relics and portraits of Pioneers, for reasons that will be apparent later on.

"Just a word about the history of the fort: Captain Sutter was born in Germany, of Swiss parents; was educated in a Swiss academy, served in the French army, got the wanderlust, came to New York about 1835, went on to Saint Charles, Missouri, thence to Santa Fe, where he heard marvelous tales of that mystical land known as California. He determined to come here, found a colony and become rich.

"There were no trails for him to follow. He seized the opportunity of getting here by accompanying a group of trappers headed for Oregon. Once there, he found that the Siskiyou Mountains were impassable because of snow. No ships were sailing from Oregon here, but one was leaving for the Sandwich Islands. That was his quickest way; he took it. The island king took a great fancy to him and presented him with a bodyguard of eight Kanakas. From the islands he shipped to Sitka, Alaska, and from there to Yerba Buena [now San Francisco], only to be told there he could not land, but must go on to Monterey, which he did, and there talked Governor Alvarado out of a grant of land of some ninety-nine square miles in the Sacramento Valley.

"August 12, 1839, he landed with his eight Kanakas and three White men on the south bank of the American River at a point which is now just the other side of the S.P.R.R. track across from the head of Twenty-ninth street, Sacramento. A few days scouting, and the selection of the knoll was made where the Fort now stands. Two Kanaka huts were first erected, then a small adobe shelter, then began the work on the main building, which still stands and which now contains a museum. The outer walls went up next, with their two bastions of walls five feet thick. Then the little rooms inside the walls followed, until, in 1842, the fort stood completed. At this time he bought out the Russian settlement at Fort Ross, and young Bidwell moved over from there all the cannon, doors and windows, and such other material as he could bring in a small river sloop. The stock were driven overland.

"Once established, he went ahead with his big idea, that of establishing a vast inland agricultural empire, with the fort as its headquarters, or administrative center. Here he started the manufacture, in a crude way, with the crudest of tools and material, of all such implements and necessities as the early settler might need, and he planted great fields of grain, protecting them with deep ditches eight feet wide.

"Immigrants and trappers began to arrive, many of whom he employed, including several hundred Indians. Marshall drifted in about 1844 or 1845. He was a jack-of-all-trades, and became the handy man around the fort. Then Sutter sent him to Coloma to build that sawmill; he discovered gold; the whole world was aroused by the news, the great gold rush was on.

"Sutter's Fort became the objective point of this tremendous stampede. In one year over 42,000 men were headed for this place, coming across the plains, and nearly as many more by vessel. Once here, these men played havoc with the plans of the captain; before he could realize the disaster that was overwhelming him, his once-peaceful fort was a place of stores, saloons, boarding-houses, gambling-hells and even a hospital, while he had to provide a free cemetery for those unable to stand the hardships, or to dodge a pistol ball. Then Sacramento was established, down by the river front.

"By 1851 the old fort had passed into history; it was abandoned, but the windows, doors and even the wooden shakes from the roofs had been stolen for use in the new city. Even the very walls were taken to fill in the roadway. In time, nothing remained but the main building, the one now housing the museum. Then, in 1891, the Native Sons took hold, raised $20,000, bought the property and deeded it to the state, which appropriated enough to restore the fort to its original size. This work, done under the supervision of Native Sons, was thorough, and completed as far as the money allowed; most of the interior partitions were not completed for lack of funds.

"Some old bookcases were donated and a miscellaneous collection of material put in them, and thus it remained until two years ago, when the Legislature appropriated $10,000 to repair the buildings, install new cases, process and preserve the old relics, put up special glass-enclosed sheds for the old stages and wagons, and get it ready for the really greatest work of all, the rehabilitation of all the small rooms as they were in Sutter's time, a job that will really require several years' time.

"The state has adopted a definite policy as to the exhibits. It is no longer a general museum, but one specializing on relics dealing with the great gold rush and the events leading up to the founding of the fort. In this way, we are able to create that '49 atmosphere there, which we are doing just as fast as possible. The date limit for relics is from 1839 to May 10, 1869, when the gold spike connected the West with the East.

"Now, in this work of rehabilitation, we face many difficult problems. To do justice to Captain Sutter, to the men who came here in '49, we must present our exhibit as a composite one, a composite of the most kaleidoscopic upheaval of local conditions that it is possible to imagine. We must show in these rooms the transition from the peaceful days of the fort, when it was the pioneer agricultural center of the state, with its primitive furnishings, tools, farm implements, its intimate daily life, and on through to its place in state and national affairs prior to, and after the discovery of gold by Marshall. Particularly must we emphasize that period from the time he brought down those first flakes of gold from Coloma, as well as his work at the fort.

"We must always bear in mind that the fort was not on the sea coast, that the means of transportation for several years was by small river craft; that everything was primitive, in a very primitive country. Consequently, most of the furnishings of these rooms were home made, and here again we face a variety of types, for Sutter had men from many different parts of the world working for him, and each man's work would show his national characteristics; the Kanaka, the German, the sailor, the trapper, the Englishman, the Yankee, would each make it according to the usages in his home country.

"No White women lived at the fort until 1845, so there was no appeal to be made to their taste. It is doubtful if, in all America, there was any such place for a diversity of all-round equipment as was at Sutter's Fort during the days of its active existence. The proportions of these various classes of furnishings must be made with great care and only after thorough research.

"Three of the most interesting rooms are those Sutter used for his private quarters, just west of the main south gate. The first was his bedroom, wherein he allowed none but his Indian servant to enter; next to it was his little dining-room, furnished with but the most scanty equipment, while the third room was his private office and the place where he did most of his writing and thinking. It had a little cupboard, some shelves, a medicine closet where he kept the simple remedies he used at the fort, mostly quinine, calomel and castor oil. This room and his bedroom had fireplaces, but it was his private office that is most interesting to us, for it was here that Marshall came that rainy afternoon from Coloma, bringing with him those few precious chispas of virgin gold that later sent the whole world into a frenzy of greed and desire.

"It was here they tested out those flakes of gold; it was here that Sutter pledged Marshall to secrecy, and here they made great plans for the future, plans that were never realized. In this room we hope to stage, in lay figures of Sutter and Marshall, the scene in which they are testing that first gold. In fact, we hope to fit each room up with lay figures of people who were there at that time. Necessarily, many of these wax figures must be of composite types, as we have no photographs of most of them.

"Another room of great interest at this time is the old distillery, the first place in which wine and brandy were made in Central California, using the wild river grape. The original still was in existence until the late war, when it was sold for old copper; at least, such is the report, but we hope to find a duplicate of it. The equipment was of the simplest, which in this case will prove a stumbling block in restoring it, for no one knows just how he fitted it up. Of the dozens of old books consulted, none give anything as crude or primitive as he must have used.

"Two other rooms, intimately connected with the life of the fort, were the blacksmith shop and Marshall's wagon shop. We need very much old wood-working and blacksmith tools, old home-made iron bolts and pieces of wagon irons for these rooms.

"Now, there is one room that some of you good Stocktonians may be able to help out on, the rehabilitation of the old Slater saloon on the south side of the east court. We want all the old-time wine and whiskey bottles we can get; bear in mind that they must be fairly old timers. They need not contain their original contents; we will refill them. Also, we want some real old-time whiskey and wine barrels, especially French and Spanish barrels. We shall need fittings for the immigrant headquarters where the members of the Donner Party were housed when the relief party were brought in. We shall need things for the two miners' stores on the north side, and old picks and shovels.

"But, above all, we want a good representative collection of relics from this section. The founder of your city [Stockton], Captain Weber, was associated with Captain Sutter at the fort in 1841-2. With his own hands he helped Captain Sutter build the walls of the fort; with Captain Sutter he ate his meals, with him he discussed the value of the great San Joaquin Valley, and with him dreamed great dreams of the future. Could anyone be much more directly connected with the very life of that fort than the founder of your city, unless it was Sutter himself? And yet, today there is not a thing to represent either himself or the city he founded in the museum at the fort.

"Don't you think you owe it to Captain Weber to see that you have an exhibit there worthy of him and the City of Stockton? Thousands of people are visiting there every week, mostly strangers. They learn of Placerville, of Columbia, of Sonora, of dozens of places along the Mother Lode, because they see the relics from those places, but of Stockton they learn nothing until they are directed here by Peterson, the curator, as the easiest and best way to reach the Southern mines. He is very anxious that we all work together in this matter, that we do not consider it a Sacramento attraction, but as the property of the state to be utilized for interesting visitors in the history of the Mother Lode, and furnishing them with routes to travel, should they wish to see the places from which the relics came. It is a case, practically speaking, of the place represented by the greatest number of relics that receives the greatest interest of the visitor.

"Let us all work together in popularizing the history of the old gold diggings, of our forefathers who endured so much to make this the most wonderful state in the union, and for the memory of those who lie in unmarked graves in the fastnesses of the great Sierras.

"The romance of Sutter's Fort—the outpost of civilization in pioneer days, monarch of all it surveyed, conquering the wilderness, the soil, the Indians, the dangers and terrors of those days, a place of refuge, of rest, a shelter for the wearied traveler, a hospital for the sick, and a burial place for the dead—must be preserved."

SAN JOAQUIN FAIR.

Great plans are being made for the annual San Joaquin County Fair and Horse Show, which will open at Stockton, August 23, and run through the 28th. Many improvements have been made at the fair grounds.

In Memoriam

ROBERT LEAM.

Whereas, The Supreme Power of the Universe has, in His infinite wisdom, removed from among us one of our worthy brothers, Robert Leam, and whereas, the long and intimate relation held with him in the Parlor make it befitting we record our appreciation of him:

Brother Leam was received into membership in this Parlor in December 1896. During the war with Spain he enlisted and served his country in the Philippines. On his return he presented to this Parlor some relics of the war gathered in the Philippines. These relics, we will cherish in fond remembrance of the patriotism and loyalty of our departed brother. The removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy that will be deeply felt by the members of this Parlor. It is no more than fitting that here we record our tribute of brotherly affection for Brother Leam, and may time console and lessen the grief of those loved ones he has left to mourn his passing.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of Amador Parlor No. 17 Native Sons of the Golden West, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, a copy to The Grizzly Bear for publication, and that the Parlor's charter be draped in mourning for thirty days.

PROPAGATION OF SHRUBS.

Most shrubs may be propagated by layering, or burying the tips in dirt until they root. Scraping the underside lightly often encourages the rooting process. Bend over a low branch of the shrub, cover it lightly with earth and leave the tip projecting. Keep the soil moist and well rooted plants will result in most cases. Propagation by slips will be found satisfactory in the case of roses, at this season, if the slips are relieved of most of their leaves, placed in moist sandy soil and covered with a fruit jar. Use hard wood, but not old. A home nursery for ornamentals is easy to provide, and it will give the plants for beautification that may cost too much money to purchase.

BURNING OUT THE FERTILITY.

Still the waste of money through over-cultivation goes ahead. Ground as bare of vegetation as Sahara is cultivated week after week for the mythical beneficial effects of the dry mulch. The soil is turned over and over, subjected to the sterilizing effects of the rays of the sun, and burned until bacterial life and humus are but a memory. Cover crops won't grow, and crops don't flourish. After the weeds are gone, nothing is gained by cultivation, and the losses have just been cited. Keep out the weeds to prevent loss of moisture through transpiration, cultivate deeply and thoroughly with a chisel or some such implement at the proper time, and save the money and time and work wasted in ceaseless cultivation.

RAISE PLENTY OF CHICKS.

Poultrymen will do well this year to watch the results of replacements in their flocks. Generally speaking, there are not enough pullets introduced each year to keep the flock up to maximum production. About 40 percent of the chicks turn out to be good pullets. Mortality and culling of non-producers will require all these. A safe rule is to raise as many chicks as there are laying hens on the place, if the size of the flock is to be maintained. Then cull carefully and closely, and keep only the hens on the job that know their business.

MORNING GLORY CONTROL.

The morning glory goes right ahead prospering in the dry season, and robbing soils of moisture that ought to be supporting crops that would support the farmer. The control is difficult. If the patch is small, the pest may be smothered by straw or dry refuse. Clean cultivation gives results on small fields, but it is impossible on large ones. A chemical preparation, commercially known as KMG, has proved the best means of control so far, and is being freely recommended by college authorities and farmers who have tried it. Applied as a spray, it kills about 75 percent of the plants, leaves and roots. Applied the second time, it often cleans up the pest, and three applications are said to have completely passed the morning glory into oblivion. The cost is relatively high, it is true, but the damage done by the morning glory is more than relatively great. If the land is worth cropping, it is worth while treating, either by cultivation to control, or by chemicals to cure.

CORN EAR WORM CONTROL.

The corn ear worm has caused a lot of trouble to the producers of roasting ears this year. Excellent results were obtained in many sections by the dusting of the silk with calcium arsenate, just after the silk appeared. The eggs of the corn ear worm are laid on the silk; they hatch and go indoors to do business. They must be stopped before they hatch or the ear is damaged. Too late now, but it is not too early to prepare against loss next season.

HOGS COMING BACK.

Hogs are off a bit in price, due mainly to a poor corn prospect in the Middle West, which caused a dumping of pigs and unfinished stock on the market. Fall conditions are sure to be good; and the California farmer who has hogs will have profits this year.

NOTED INVENTOR EULOGIZED BY CALIFORNIA EDITOR.

The editor of an interior newspaper, lacking items, wrote and published the obituary of Professor Newman, an inventor of note who had made a number of useful inventions before his last which, unfortunately, caused him to succumb. He invented a large chamois skin covered helmet to be worn upon the head. It was filled with sponges saturated with a chemical compound, the components of which were known only by him. To this was attached an unique inhaler, fastened by a strap beneath the chin and held over the mouth. The gas generated by the compound was mixed with air breathed through the inhaler by the wearer. The invention was intended to be worn by prospectors and others when crossing the deserts of California South and Arizona. They would then not suffer from heat and thirst, no matter how arid and hot the burning sands became. July 4 the professor essayed to give his invention a try and started to cross Death Valley, leaving his rendezvous full of confidence. Alas, his invention worked too well! Not returning, a searching party set out to find him, and discovered him about twenty miles out seated upon a rock, stone dead. He had been frozen to death, and an icicle over a foot long hung dripping from his beard.

CALIFORNIA METAL PRODUCTION DROPPED DURING 1926.

Production of gold, silver, copper, lead and zinc in California during 1926 amounted in value to $20,050,801, a decrease of $3,233,553, or 14 percent, as compared with the preceding year, according to statistics compiled by J. M. Hill of the bureau of mines, Federal Department of Commerce.

There were decreased yields of 9 percent in gold, 40 percent in the value of silver and 30 percent in the value of copper, but increases of 13 percent in the value of lead and 76 percent in the value of zinc, as compared with the values of these metals in 1925.

Ninety-five percent of the 252,923.99 ounces of gold production credited to "placer" mines, came from dredges. The "lode" mines produced 323,874.41 ounces.

SAN PEDRO THE GREAT
HARBOR of the GRE AT SOUTHWEST

EXPORTING CITRUS PRODUCTS

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

CALIFORNIA'S GOLDEN CROP OF CITrus fruits, moving in part through San Pedro to the markets of the world, took an important place in maritime commerce during the last fiscal year. Figures released by the Los Angeles Harbor Department for the twelve-month period ended June 30, 1927, show that 975,905 boxes of oranges, lemons and grapefruit were exported through this port.

Thirty-four fast refrigerator ships, flying the houseflags of a half-dozen steamship companies, moved 321,292 boxes of oranges alone to European ports. The Orient bought 48,688 boxes of the golden fruit, Hawaii 39,222, Canada 28,726 and New Zealand 1,000. Total orange exports for the last fiscal year through San Pedro were 743,151 cases. Lemon exports by water totaled 148,629 cases, and 84,125 boxes of grapefruit were loaded into ships for long-distance transport.

With this development of citrus trade, a number of specially designed storage facilities are being planned for the harbor. Already new patent conveyors, capable of putting 1,500 boxes of fruit into a ship's hold every hour, are in operation. Recently two vessels loaded 62,000 boxes of oranges for Liverpool and sailed within twelve hours of each other.

Citrus exporters declare that their exports during the current fiscal year will exceed the 1,000,000-box mark by a comfortable margin. They look for an increased demand both in foreign countries and at domestic ports, where fruit shipments by water are gaining favor.

FIT AS EVER, AT NINETY.

Still "as fit as ever" to stipulate in court, address a jury or prepare a brief, Judge William H. Savage of San Pedro observed his ninetieth birthday July 12 by spending ten hours in his office. During the day he received scores of congratulations from a host of friends.

It was in January 1866 that he first saw San Pedro. After a long voyage by steamer from the Atlantic coast, including a difficult trip across the Isthmus of Panama, he arrived with a company of the Fourteenth Infantry, United States Army, which was stationed at the historic Drum Barracks in Wilmington.

He is revered by eight children, thirty-five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. All but three of his sons and daughters were born in California, while every one of the grandchildren are natives of the Golden State. Several are past officers of Parlors of the Native Sons or Native Daughters of the Golden West.

Judge Savage has led an active and colorful career during his ninety years. He served in the United States Marine Corps during the Civil War; had a fistfight with a young officer who later was known to the world as Admiral George Dewey, hero of Manila Bay; served in the army in both California and Arizona; was a member of the State Legislatures of both those states, and at various times held many responsible governmental posts. His long legal career has been that of a self-made man, for he read law while in the army and prepared himself for the examinations which admitted him to the bar in both California and Arizona. He came to San Pedro to live in 1887.

PLANNING ANOTHER BARBECUE.

Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. is taking an active interest in plans for the dedication of the proposed new branch city hall in San Pedro. The structure will be six stories in height and will rise on the site of the present old city hall, erected in the days before San Pedro and Wilmington became a part of the City of Los Angeles. Demolition of the old building has begun. Preliminary plans for the dedication are in charge of D.D.G.P. William F. Durr, junior past president of the Parlor.

While James W. Mee, a member of Sepulveda, was absent in the East in July, he was elected president of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce. He had served for several years as a director of the chamber, and in many other civic and fraternal lines of endeavor is recognized as a leader.

Responding to the wishes of its own members and many friends, Sepulveda is planning another of its famous early-day California barbecues for September. Four similar events were recently staged and their financial success, under the direction of J. J. Kaveney, made possible the successful financing of the Grand Parlor entertainment in May. Willard Buchanan is now the president and Frank I. Markey the recording secretary of the Parlor.

DAUGHTERS' OFFICERS INSTALLED.

July 21 officers of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. were publicly installed by D.D.G.P. Kathryn Ronan, Hazel Raines becoming the president and Carrie Lenhouse the secretary. The hall was decorated with flowers, and refreshments and a social time followed the ceremonies. A gift was presented D.D.G.P. Ronan and an emblematic ring to Gertrude Riepe, retiring president. In charge of arrangements for the evening was this committee: Charlotte Bennett (chairman), Gertrude Buchanan, Virginia Bruchner, Carmen Ardiaz.

A group of Rudecinda members who have relatives in Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. served the "eats" at the doings of that Parlor July 14. Among them were Gertrude Buchanan, Gertrude Riepe, Charlotte Bennett, Dorothy Markey, Catherine Hackett, Carrie Kuhlmann, Juanita Brooks. Gertrude Riepe, who has just retired from the presidency of Rudecinda, entertained the officers who served under her at luncheon at her home July 20.

Farmers Use Electricity—January 1, 62,000 California farms were being served with electricity for light and power. This number represents 45.4 percent of the farms of the state.

selves in athletics. President Carl Mueller and the other officers of the Parlor paid a visit July 20 to Santa Ana Parlor No. 265 and exemplified the ritual.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

Officers of Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. were installed July 20 by D.D.G.P. Albert Cron, Clarence N. Lechner becoming president. A large number of members witnessed the ceremonies. Among the speakers were Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell, Dr. Joseph A. Kleiser, retiring treasurer, Dr. F. W. Loring and others. Refreshments were served.

The Parlor is making good progress, its net membership gain for the January-July term being seventeen. Several applications are on file. The monthly dances, which proved so popular, have been discontinued during the summer months but are to be resumed.

BIG BAY DISTRICT INITIATION.

The membership campaign of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. under the direction of Deputy Grand President Sidney B. Witkowski is meeting with such success that a large class of candidates will be initiated August 15. Grand President Charles A. Thompson and other grand officers will be in attendance and a great outpouring of southland Native Sons is anticipated.

July 16 the Parlor elected a corps of new officers, J. Howard Blanchard being chosen president and John J. Smith secretary. Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell and a delegation of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 members were in attendance. An entertainment followed the meeting.

The Parlor will be represented at the Toronto, Canada, twenty-one-mile international endurance swim the latter part of August by Bob Foster, a member of No. 267 and a Los Angeles municipal life-guard. He recently won the fourteen-mile Wilson trophy swim at Venice and is considered a wonder swimmer.

ACTIVITY THE KEYNOTE.

Activity is the keynote of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W., Glendale. Recent events were: A card party at the home of Marshal Beulah Van Luven which was a great success; the initiation of two classes of candidates; interesting and instructive Flag Day exercises in charge of Past President Ida N. Gilman, and a shower for one of the charter members. In philanthropic work, twenty-eight laundry-bags have been made and sent to the California boys at Whipple Barracks, Arizona. New members are being initiated into the Parlor right along and "it won't be long now" until No. 240 is numerically as strong as the other Parlors.

Miss Leona McClain, who is to be married in August, was recently given an enjoyable shower by the Parlor. The main event was a mock-wedding, planned by Mrs. Edith Dobson, who acted as the minister. Miss Kathryn Tregea was the bride and Miss Mabel Devine the groom. It was a side-splitting comedy. Cards and bunco were played, and Mrs. Martha Hawkensen served refreshments. Miss McClain was showered with numerous gifts, which she accepted in her usual gracious manner.

At Hahn's Auditorium, 109-A North Brand boulevard, August 20, Verdugo will have a benefit card party. Mrs. Ella Mae Madden is in charge, and promises good prizes and good "eats." All Natives and their friends are invited, and a large attendance is hoped for.

ANOTHER NATIVE SON PARLOR.

August 16 has been fixed as the date for the institution of a parlor of Native Sons at Van Nuys. The San Fernando Valley natives are being rounded up by Gabriel E. Ruiz, actively affiliated with Vaquero Parlor No. 262, and Deputy Grand President Sidney B. Witkowski.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS WILL HELP TO PREVENT FIRES.

Moved by the increasingly large number of grain, brush and forest fires all over California, Chief Frank G. Snook of the State Division of Motor Vehicles has ordered all state traffic officers to give special attention to the enforcement of the law prohibiting the throwing of lighted matches, cigars and cigarettes from moving vehicles.

Reports received by the State Forestry Department and the motor-vehicle division indicate that a number of disastrous fires have started in this manner, particularly in the grain districts and the dry foothill country. The law makes it a misdemeanor to throw such articles from vehicles.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

LOS ANGELES IS READY FOR THE launching of a new financial institution, to be known as the "Bank of Santa Claus." It will be directed by the gang of "sacred financial bulls" who, through their frenzied finance operations, succeeded in wrecking the Julian Petroleum Corporation, and thereby robbing many people of moderate means of their life savings.

The daily press of Los Angeles has devoted endless space to letting the "dear public" know little about this Julian affair, the most gigantic steal ever promoted in this state, if not in this country, but care is taken that the facts relating to the part played by the Angel City's "prominent personages" are not given to the public. There is not in Los Angeles a daily paper that has the "guts" to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

These "sacred financial bulls" have gotten by with so many deals of a questionable nature that, through the accumulation of wealth, which has enabled them to ascend to the topmost rung of the codfish-aristocracy-ladder, they are intrenched, apparently, above and beyond the law. These modern money-worshipers have the Shylock of Shakespearean fame backed off the map; they charged, and collected, interest at the rate of nineteen percent per month, which is two hundred and twenty-eight percent per annum. Who couldn't, and wouldn't, be a "Santa Claus" at that rate?

The highwayman, the fellow who takes a chance, is far more worthy of consideration than these generally-respected thieves. But, every consideration is being, and will continue to be, shown them. Any one familiar with the course of events when the prison-gates are ajar for the reception of such prominents knows full well that the stage is being set to clear the "sacred financial bulls." They may return their ill-gotten gains, but most likely will not be punished even to that extent.

In any event, any one who thinks that any one of them is going where he belongs, to jail, has another think coming. There's not a chance! The overworked and always-ready "insufficient-evidence-to-convict" veil will blind Justice, and the "sacred financial bulls" will be turned loose to browse in new shylockean fields and to further fatten, in wealth and in prominence, at the expense of a trusting public. It is ever thus, and yet, surprise is frequently expressed at the growing number of bolsheviks and law-haters.

From the evidence that has been made public, it is apparent that state authorities, as well as the "sacred financial bulls," knew full well that there was an overissue of Julian stock. But no action was taken by those who could have put a stop to the steal. Why? Evidently they were agreeable to having the modern Shylocks get their full pound of usurious interest.

The whole Julian stock-selling scheme reeks with rottenness, and it has infested, directly or indirectly, every line of endeavor. For the future good of California, the dirty mess should be cleaned up thoroughly and promptly. To let the matter drag along until public sentiment has "cooled down," is an invitation to financial juggling in other quarters. Right now is the time, and the Julian case is the opportunity, to exemplify, for once, the much-talked-about principle of "equality before the law."

Congressman John C. Box of Texas has a bill before the Federal Congress which aims at putting a stop to the bringing in to this country of "seasonal laborers," largely peons from Mexico who stay here and become public charges. Discussing the bill and voicing his approval of it before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco recently, C. M. Goethe said:

"If you cross a bulldog with a greyhound you are not likely to get a stronger bulldog, nor a swifter greyhound—you will probably get a yellow cur. This holds true with respect to human stock."

California does not want more Mexican peons; there are already too many of them here. The "seasonal laborers" should be rounded up and returned whence they came. Such a course would provide employment for numerous American citizens.

The United States Public Health Service just recently made public the following regarding the orange, one of California's most valuable products:

"An orange a day will do more than keep the doctor away. It will help to give positive health. Oranges in the daily diet increase the appetite, assist nutrition, regulate the body and generally aid in gaining that priceless possession, good health. Good health is not merely avoiding sickness. Good health is positive vigor and well-being.

"Oranges give vitamins and good food values; they make for strength, endurance, firm muscles, a clear mind and a bright eye. In spite of what is commonly believed, oranges are food for an 'acid condition' of the blood. Orange juice is a mild laxative, is not 'fattening' and is a good between-meal drink."

California now having a law which extends to husbands the privilege of collecting alimony—if they can—the crop of divorce cases will undoubtedly be materially increased.

Include the California State Fair, at Sacramento, in your September vacation itinerary. You'll become better acquainted with this great state by so doing.

The grand jury of Yuba County "said a mouthful" when it opened its report with this statement:

"If the people want law enforcement to the letter they will gain their end by electing men to office who will enforce the laws without fear or favor; and, from our information and observation, that is not what the people want."

An "employment contract," another invention of yellow- and white-Japs to evade the provisions of the California Alien Land Law, has been declared by the State Supreme Court a "cropping contract" and therefore in violation of the law.

The court, pointing out that the "employment contract" would permit a Jap to have possession of land for agricultural purposes, said: "It is clear, therefore, that these covenants make an out and out cropping contract, and one specifically forbidden by the 1923 amendment to the alien land law. To all practical purposes this would constitute a withdrawal of agricultural lands from the use, occupancy and benefit of the citizen."

Much like any other business

THERE was a time when tradition demanded that the bank be a solemn, chill structure and the banker so dignified that he became rather inhuman.

~ Fortunately, those days have gone forever. As we see it, banking is much like any other business. It does carry an especial responsibility for the safeguarding of depositors' funds. It does impose an irrevocable obligation toward the community at large.

~ But today your bank is a very human institution. With unswerving integrity as its foundation, it offers an informal and friendly contact with its executives—men who are intimately in touch with San Francisco problems and California development.

ADMISSION DAY—
ITS RIGHTFUL PLACE IN CALIFORNIA'S SUN OF GLORY

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, WILL BE THE seventy-seventh anniversary of the admission of the State of California into the Family of the Nation. And September 9, in California, is Admission Day, decreed by an act of the State Legislature a compulsory legal holiday when all public schools and all offices under state jurisdiction must close. It is one day in the year when, out of respect to the American Pioneers who made the California of today possible, every place of business should be closed and every building adorned with the Flag of the United States and the California State (Bear) Flag.

Admission Day is an American holiday, marking an important milestone in California's progress toward the goal of becoming one of these United States. In its true observance, the accomplishments of the American Pioneer only must be featured. Historically, it is to California what Independence Day is to the United States. Who would propose, in celebration of the Fourth of July, the glorifying of the British? Admission Day, contrary to the belief which apparently exists in some quarters, has no connection whatever with either the Spanish or the Mexican eras of California history. Each has its proud place in California's Sun of Glory, but Admission Day is associated with neither, belonging exclusively to the American era.

Because California, the thirty-first state, pursued a different course to get into the Family of the Nation than did any other state,—by demanding admittance without territorial childhood, after a state government had been organized,—Admission Day, September 9, has been perpetuated.

Unique, indeed, is the history that immediately preceded California's admission to statehood, and because of the uniqueness of those historic events the day that brought with it success to its "audacity," September 9, has been set aside as a state holiday, an occasion when those who love California—upon whose mountains the snows never melt and within whose valleys the flowers never cease to bloom—may, in song and story, recount the stirring events of its past, review its world-inspiring progress and paint a word-picture of its more-glorious future.

The California that should be honored on Admission Day, the American California, had its beginning in the town of Sonoma, in Sonoma County, where, on the 14th day of June 1846, a small band of Americans, known as the Bear Flag Party, raised the Flag of the "California Republic"—later known as the Bear Flag and designated as the State Flag of California by the Legislature—and proclaimed the end of Mexican rule in California, this spot of earth supremely blessed. Spanish domination had previously been cast aside by the Mexicans.

Those sturdy American Pioneers who constituted the Bear Flag Party had reason to believe that their revolt, which had for its object the bringing of California within the United States, would be successful. They were not mistaken, nor did they have long to wait for a realization of their objective, for, on the 7th day of July of the same year (1846), Commodore John Drake Sloat of the United States Navy raised the Flag of the United States in the town of Monterey, in Monterey County, and, in the name of the United States, took possession of this Golden Land. Two days later (July 9), by order of Commodore Sloat, The Flag was hoisted in San Francisco, at Portsmouth Square, by Commander John B. Montgomery of the U. S. S. "Portsmouth."

After many encounters and much controversy between Americans and Mexicans, peace was finally declared between the two countries, and American military authorities administered the law in California. With the incoming of thousands of gold-seekers, however, following the discovery of gold at Coloma, in El Dorado County, by James W. Marshall early in 1848, law and order in the mining communities, to which most of the people had rushed, were upheld by the miners. And who can deny that, through the operation of their unwritten code of laws, more real justice was meted out, less crime was committed and fewer criminals escaped punishment, than through the operation of the present-day code of written laws, of quantity limitless and administered by those more concerned with retention in official berths than with the welfare of California and its people? To revert to the subject:

June 3, 1849, Brigadier-General Bennet Riley of the United States Army, then Military Governor of California, issued a proclamation recommending the selection of delegates from all sections of California to meet for "the formation of a state constitution or a plan for a territorial government." August 1, carrying out his suggestion, such delegates were elected, and September 1 they assembled at Colton Hall, in the town of Monterey, and organized. The members of that convention were representatives of the people of California and were in accord with the views of their constituents: that California should knock at the door of the American Union for admission as a full-fledged state, and should not be content with a territorial form of government which would prevail until such time as the National Congress was ready and willing to grant statehood.

So, October 10, those California Pioneers who were delegates to the First Constitutional Convention adopted a constitution that provided for a state government, and adjourned October 13. At an election November 13 the people ratified this constitution and at the same time elected a governor, a lieutenant-governor, two representatives to the National Congress,—although California had not even been accorded the right of representation therein—sixteen state senators and thirty-six assemblymen. The constitution provided that other state officers should be elected for the first term by the Legislature and thereafter by the people.

As prescribed by this constitution, the first California Legislature met at San Jose, December 15, 1849, canvassed the election returns and declared the State Government's first duly elected officers to be: Peter H. Burnett, Governor; John McDougal, Lieutenant-Governor; George W. Wright and Edward Gilbert, Representatives to the National Congress. December 20, the governor and the lieutenant-governor were inaugurated, and the appointment of William Van Voorhies, as secretary of state, was confirmed.

Immediately following the inauguration of Governor Burnett, General Riley, the Military Governor of California, issued this remarkable proclamation—remarkable in the fact that although the American Congress had not passed, and might never pass, a bill providing for the admission of California into the union as a state, he recognized the constitution in which California was referred to as a state and himself referred to it as the "new state":

"To The People of California: A new executive having been elected and installed into office, in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution of the State, the Thirty-first Congress of the United States of America:

at the First Session,

Begun and held at the City of Washington, on Monday, the third day of December, one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine.

AN ACT
FOR THE ADMISSION OF CALIFORNIA INTO THE UNION.

Whereas the people of California have presented a constitution and asked admission into the Union, which constitution was submitted to Congress, by the President of the United States by message, dated February thirteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty, and which, on due examination, is found to be republican in its form of government.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the State of California shall be one, and is hereby declared to be one, of the United States of America, and admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original states in all respects whatever.

Section 2. And be it further enacted, That until the representatives in Congress shall be apportioned according to an actual enumeration of the inhabitants of the United States, the State of California shall be entitled to two representatives in Congress.

Section 3. And be it further enacted, That the said State of California is admitted into the Union upon the express condition that the people of said State, through their Legislature or otherwise, shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the public lands within its limits, and shall pass no law and do no act whereby the title of the United States to, and right to dispose of, the same shall be impaired or questioned; and that they shall never lay any tax or assessment of any description whatsoever upon the public domain of the United States, and in no case shall non-resident proprietors, who are citizens of the United States, be taxed higher than residents; and that all the navigable waters within the said State shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of said State as to the citizens of the United States, without any tax, impost, or duty therefor.

Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as recognizing or rejecting the propositions tendered by the people of California as articles of compact in the ordinance adopted by the convention which formed the constitution of that State.

undersigned hereby resigns his powers as Governor of California. In thus dissolving his official connection with the people of this country he would tender to them his heartfelt thanks for their many kind attentions and for the uniform support which they have given to the measures of his administration. The principal object of his wishes is now accomplished—the people have a government of their own choice, and one which, under the favor of Divine Providence, will secure their own prosperity and happiness and the permanent welfare of the new State."

This same day (December 20, 1849,) the Legislature selected two United States Senators to represent California in the National Congress, General John C. Fremont and William M. Gwin. Additional state officers were elected the 22nd, so that, by the end of the year, a complete state government had been set up and was in working order.

California had, of course, not been recognized as a state of the union; in fact, it had made no formal request for such recognition, but had, in the manner provided by the Federal Constitution, chosen representatives to both houses of the National Congress. But those who had California's destiny in their keeping had not been idle, and steps had been taken to demand its acceptance and recognition as a full-fledged state. The California Constitution, as ratified by the people, contained these, among other, provisions:

"Section 7. If the Constitution shall be ratified by the people of California, the executive of the existing government is hereby requested, immediately after the same shall be ascertained, in the manner herein directed, to cause a fair copy thereof to be forwarded to the President of the United States, in order that he may lay it before the Congress of the United States.

Section 12. The Senators and Representatives of the Congress of the United States elected by the Legislature and people of California, as herein directed, shall be furnished with certified copies of this Constitution, when ratified, which they shall lay before the Congress of the United States requesting, in the name of the people of California, the admission of the State of California into the American Union."

February 23, 1850, these directions having been carried out, the matter of California's admission into the union as a state was submitted to the National Congress in a message by President Zachary Taylor. A bill providing for its statehood was long and bitterly debated, for the slavery question was then agitating the Congress, and California, in addition to declaring itself a state, had declared against slavery; the anti-slavery element of the Congress were ready to let California in, but the slavery advocates were determined to keep it out.

August 13, 1850, the United States Senate passed "An Act for the Admission of the State of California into the Union;" it was passed by the House of Representatives September 7, and September 9 was approved by President Millard Fillmore, who had succeeded to the presidency on the death of President Zachary Taylor, July 9, 1850.

This, in brief, is the story, based on historic facts, of the unique method taken by California to get into the Family of the Nation as a state. And other than the original thirteen colonies, it is the only state in the national domain that was admitted into the union without a previous enabling act or territorial apprenticeship.

True, the story has been told time and time again, but it never grows old nor loses any of its interest. It is a story that should be familiar not only to every native of California, but to those who claim California as their home. And that the story, which is but the record of the achievements of the American Pioneers, may never be forgotten, California has Admission Day, September 9.

The question naturally arises in the minds of those citizens not familiar with the State of California's early history, why so much is made of Admission Day, and until they appreciate its full significance they give little heed to the day's observance. Many imagine that Admission Day is purely a festive occasion originated and fostered by the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West when, as a matter of fact, history is responsible for the day, and love for that history perpetuates it as one of holiday.

One has but to understand the meaning of the symbols in the Great Seal of State (an enlarged facsimile of which appears upon the cover page of this issue) to fully appreciate the significance of Admission Day, and with that knowledge must come a patriotic desire, born of loyalty, to pay homage to California and the American Pioneers —such a feeling of patriotism as inspires every loyal American on Independence Day, the birthday anniversary of the nation.

To those who look upon the Great Seal and have some knowledge of California's early history, every symbol has historic significance:

The thirty-one stars indicate that California was the thirty-first state admitted into the union.

The goddess tells how, Minerva-like, California was born a state, without having gone through the probation of a territory.

The grizzly bear feeding upon a grapevine, typifies peculiar characteristics of California; the miner with his rocker, its golden wealth; the shipping, its commercial greatness, and the mountains, its beauty.

The "Eureka" (I have found it) indicates that the American Pioneer, after traversing a continent, found in California the wealth and the beauty of all the world.

Just as the State of California was formed without the consent of the National Congress, so the Great Seal of State was adopted before California had a legal right to adopt such a seal. But it was the custom of those American Pioneers who had come here to build an empire to make, not to be guided by past, history, and it was through their courage and determination that California's early history is so different from that of any other state.

The design for the Great Seal of State originated with Major Robert Seldon Garnett, a United States Army officer who did not want to be known in the matter. It was submitted to the Constitutional Convention, in session at Monterey in 1849, and was formally adopted October 2, 1849 but California was not admitted to statehood until September 9, 1850. This seal has ever since been the official seal of the great State of California.

FIRST CELEBRATIONS

The news of California's admission to statehood reached San Francisco October 18—nearly six weeks after the National Congress had acted —by the mail steamer "Oregon," there being no communication by rail or wire in those days between the East and the West.

When the people heard the news, they began to rejoice. All business was at once suspended, courts were adjourned, and messengers upon horseback were sent to spread the news throughout the state. In the evening a large and happy crowd gathered at Portsmouth Square, where addresses were made by leading citizens.

Eleven days later, October 29, the people of San Francisco held a formal celebration in honor of the event, and this was the first observance of California's Admission Day. The population of the place was then about 25,000, and the shanties and tents of '49 had been replaced by more substantial buildings. Neither labor nor money was spared to make the demonstration a success. All the buildings in the town and the ships in the harbor were gorgeously decorated with flags and bunting. A procession, consisting of civic and military societies and private citizens, marched to Portsmouth Square, where appropriate exercises were held; there an eloquent address, prepared for the occasion, was delivered by Justice Nathaniel Bennett of the Supreme Court.

Every organization was represented in the parade—the California Pioneers, Mexican War Veterans, United States Army and Navy officers, sailors and marines, fire department, fraternal and benevolent societies. The parade was most cosmopolitan, for people from almost every nation of the globe participated—Yankees, Mexicans, Spaniards, Indians, Englishmen, Frenchmen, Germans, Peruvians, Polynesians and Mongolians.

In the evening there was an illumination of fireworks, and the celebration ended with a grand ball which lasted all night. Invitations to the ball read:

Committee of Invitation

There were demonstrations of joy throughout the state, too, for the people of California had cause to rejoice. They had organized and perfected a state government without the sanction of the National Congress, and this action had been approved and legalized by that body. California had been born a fully-matured state, and had the distinction of being admitted as one of the United States without having had a territorial form of government.

Ever since this first formal celebration in San Francisco, Admission Day, September 9, has been observed as a day of rejoicing, but not until 1888 was the day declared a legal holiday by the State Legislature. The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West had come into prominence and strength by that time, and had been holding general celebrations of the day. With few exceptions, the day has, since 1881, been the occasion for a general celebration every year under the auspices of that Order which, at its annual Grand Parlor, names the place of celebration.

The first formal observance of Admission Day by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West was in San Francisco, in 1875, less than two months after the Order started on its career, July 11, 1875. On that occasion the Native Sons, headed by the French Zouaves and a band, marched to Woodward's Gardens. In the evening a program was presented, including an address by Andrew Maver Winn, an American Pioneer from Kentucky, the Founder of the Order.

ADMISSION DAY PROCLAMATION

GRAND PARLOR
NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST
OFFICE OF THE
GRAND PRESIDENT

"To the Officers and Members of all Subordinate Parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West—Dear Sirs and Brothers:

"As the 9th day of September draws near, I desire to extend cordial greetings to every Parlor in the State, and request that each of them make preparations for the proper commemoration of the Admission of California to Statehood.

"The City of Santa Cruz was selected by the last session of the Grand Parlor as the place for the holding of this year's general celebration of Admission Day by our Order. The General Committee in charge at Santa Cruz is making vast preparations for a grand demonstration in honor of this important event in the history of our State and Country.

"It is our sacred duty as Native Sons to properly celebrate this day. May I, therefore, express the hope that every Parlor will take part in the parade at Santa Cruz, or where this is absolutely impossible, that some other sort of observance of this day be held.

"It is also the duty of every citizen of our State to co-operate with us and not deter us in our efforts to hold a great general celebration. It has come to my attention that certain large department stores in the City of San Francisco, Oakland, and elsewhere have decided not to close this year on Admission Day, thus keeping their employees from attending our celebration.

"As Admission Day is a legal holiday, and its celebration is most important in typifying California's glorious past, her wonderful present, and her expected future, I, therefore, as Grand President, most earnestly request that each Parlor located in the City of San Francisco, Oakland, or in any other city in which the opening of stores on that day affects our celebration, write to the proprietors of such stores inducing them to close.

"With best wishes to every Parlor, I remain,

"Sincerely and fraternally yours,
"CHAS. A. THOMPSON,
"Grand President.

Why delve in the tombs of the ancients
For secrets musty and old,
When out in the dancing sunlight
Are wonders ten thousand-fold?
Clusters of creamy blossoms,
Each one a perfect gem
Cupped like a pearly chalice
Clinging to one great stem—
Stand on the golden hillside,
Flinging their bells to the sky,
Swinging their fragrant censers
As each breeze goes fluttering by.
Rightly called "God's candles,"
And ever, by day and by night,
They gleam on His living altar
Tall and waxen and white.

ADMISSION DAY PROCLAMATION

GRAND PARLOR
NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST
OFFICE OF THE
GRAND PRESIDENT

"To the Subordinate Parlors, Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters:

"Authentic information has come to hand that certain business interests within the bay region are endeavoring to have all retail stores remain open on September 9th, thereby evincing an utter disregard of the observance of California's Natal Day.

"It is quite evident that those fostering this movement are Californians by adoption only, having little or no sentimental interest in our glorious commonwealth, and being here solely for personal gain. You realize of course, that no true Californian would attempt to minimize the importance of Admission Day, which has been observed as a legal holiday since 1889.

"When one considers the enormity of our indebtedness to our State, very little is being asked in setting aside but one day within a year, as a holiday. Is it not a natural thought to observe each family's parental birthdays? Then why not observe the birthday of a State which is responsible for our health and happiness and which has become so universally known on account of its productiveness.

"Believing that the present action is only a forerunner of a statewide movement of this character, I therefore appeal to you, as true and worthy daughters of California to use your every effort to combat propaganda tending to destroy the observance of this day. Further, since women constitute a potential buying power, I urge that all members of our Order refrain from making purchases on Admission Day, and that they influence the members of their families and their friends, if possible, to do likewise.

"A formal protest, voicing your disapproval, should be made at once by your Parlor to the Merchants or Associations in your respective localities who are contemplating such action. Copies of your protest should also be filed with your local newspapers.

"Sincerely and fraternally yours in P.D.F.A.,
"MAE HIMES NOONAN,
"Grand President.

The West adopts Union-Ethyl

As Its Finest Motor Fuel

THE wide acceptance of Union-Ethyl by western motorists is the best recommendation for this super motor fuel.

It proves that western motorists appreciate a gasoline that takes them up the hills at faster speeds than they have ever gone before.

A gasoline that gives instant acceleration, immediately overcoming sluggishness in traffic.

A gasoline that eliminates carbon troubles, resulting in a sweeter, smoother, finer running motor.

If you haven't yet tried Union-Ethyl, do it now.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

ADMISSION DAY OF 1877 WAS CELEbrated September 9 by a parade of the National Guard in San Francisco, by meetings and banquets of the Pioneer Societies in California, and by a gathering of former Californians residing in the East at Long Branch, New York. General John A. Sutter was present as a guest of honor at the latter event.

A state-wide election was held September 6, and the proposal to hold a new constitutional convention in 1878 carried by a vote of 73,458 to 44,368. The total vote cast was 146,050. The California Grange was the only organization that had indorsed the proposition, while the big corporations were opposed to it.

The Democrats won a victory that gave them control of the State Legislature and insured the election of a United States senator of that political faith to succeed Senator A. A. Sargent, Republican. San Francisco re-elected Mayor Bryant.

The State Fair opened at Sacramento September 17 with increases in exhibits and attendance. Racing received the greatest attention.

The Northern California District Fair was held at Marysville, Yuba County, the week of September 10, the San Joaquin Valley Fair at Stockton, San Joaquin County, the week of September 24, and the Sonoma County Fair at Petaluma the last week of the month. All were well attended.

The second trial of the criminal libel suit of Congressman H. F. Page against the De Young Brothers and their "San Francisco Chronicle," began at Placerville, El Dorado County, September 20 and lasted fifteen days. The jury again disagreed and the suit was dropped.

S. C. Bugbie, a prominent architect who designed, among many other buildings, the Nob Hill mansions of San Francisco's millionaires, dropped dead aboard an Oakland ferryboat September 1.

Mrs. Belle Lynch, publisher and editress of the "Ukiah Dispatch," was indicted by the Mendocino County Grand Jury for criminally libeling T. J. Carothers, editor of a rival paper.

Loring Pickering, publisher of the "San Francisco Bulletin," sued the De Young Brothers and the "Chronicle" for libel, placing his damages at the modest sum of $5,000.

The United States Mint investigation ended in the vindication of General La Grange, the superintendent, from the George M. Pinney charges. The latter was again indicted for embezzlement and promised to keep the San Francisco courts busy for some time with the trials that his numerous indictments foreshadowed.

UNEMPLOYED RESTLESS.

Henry Meiggs, who built the wharf at North Beach, San Francisco, that bore his name and levanted to Peru to get from under heavy financial liabilities, died at Lima September 20. In Peru he became a railroad builder, accumulated millions, and paid all of his debts. In many ways he was a remarkable man.

Unemployed workmen had a big meeting September 25, when Dennis Kearney, who became a prominent anti-Chinese agitator and sand-lot orator, made his first appearance upon the soapbox forum. He advocated that every workingman add a musket to his household equipment, and applied the sobriquet "honorable bilks" to the plug-hat-wearing politicians who were numerous about the public resorts and free-lunch tables at this time.

Kearney, an Irishman, was 32 years of age. Being naturalized in 1876, he was now an American citizen. By occupation, he was an unassuming drayman, obliging and reliable, and was kind to his team. Becoming obsessed with the slogan, "The Chinese Must Go!", he soon was the leader the workingmen had been looking for.

Restlessness permeated the ranks of the unemployed throughout the state. Numerous gatherings of an anti-Chinese character were held in different cities and towns, and inflammatory speeches were delivered. Over 1,000 participated in a mass meeting at Sacramento City September 30.

James Van Wyck, a Clarksville, El Dorado County, lad herding cattle upon a range in the Sierras, came upon three grizzlies. His dogs kept them at bay while he obtained a rifle from camp. Returning, he killed the bears.

A party of Los Angeles nimrods went for a hunt in the San Juan Mountains and returned with eleven deer.

The meanest footpad developed during the year was the one who, in Santa Cruz City, robbed a telegraph messenger boy named Semet of thirty cents.

J. H. Ritchie and W. F. Zambro, while walking along a ditch in El Dorado County, suddenly came upon a grizzly bear. It attacked Ritchie, and Zambro wounded it with a charge of buckshot. Ritchie began beating the bear with a club and two dogs attacked the infuriated animal from the rear. Zambro fired again, from his perch in a tree, but killed one of the dogs. Ritchie had had his clothes torn off and was badly wounded when the bear, losing its footing, fell off the ditch and down a forty-foot bluff, and was killed. It weighed 800 pounds and yielded a firkin of bear-grease.

MISPLACED CONFIDENCE.

James Gozean left Scotland forty-seven years previously and, sailing about the world, finally anchored in Trinity County, where he had mined since the early '50s. He wrote home several times, but never had a reply. His father, a wealthy merchant, died in 1860, leaving an estate of £100,000, and in January of 1877 his uncle died. A solicitor looked him up this month and advised him that he was heir to his father's estate; also, that the uncle had intercepted the letters he had written home, so that his family knew not what had become of him. James, not having had good luck at mining, was preparing to depart for his native heath.

J. P. Treadwell of San Francisco, looking for a man to attend to his business affairs while he took a trip East, selected J. R. Cooper, a street stock broker who favorably impressed him. On return, Treadwell found that Cooper had departed with $60,000 of his funds, obtained by forging checks.

During a moonlight church social upon the beach at Santa Barbara City, a deacon, evidently from force of habit, passed a collection-plate.

As an advertising stunt that attracted crowds, a Sacramento jeweler kept in his show-window a mouse that was an adept fly-catcher.

John Batton of Vallecito, Calaveras County, had an English walnut crop of astonishing size upon 100 trees planted nine years previously.

Two prominent Los Angeles politicians, getting into a heated election-day argument in a livery stable, procured horsewhips and lambasted each other until they were minus their trousers.

Given the subject of "Tigers" to write a composition about, a Grass Valley, Nevada County, schoolboy wrote, in part: "In Africa they hunt and shoot the tiger, but here in California only buck the tiger. My Uncle Joe is a regular bucker. He says pikers have no business bucking the tiger, for he believes in hitting it high."

In the Calaveras County superior court September 1 an Italian applied for citizenship and was vouched for by Sheriff Ben Thorn, who was the only man in the county the Italians would go to for advice. In the course of questioning the applicant the judge inquired: "Who is the president of the United States?" With a look of extreme contempt for asking such a foolish question, the Italian replied: "Ben Thorn."

A portion of the business section of Auburn, Placer County, and all of its Chinatown were burned September 2 with a $100,000 loss.

The Chinatown of Grass Valley, Nevada County, went up in smoke September 17; loss $40,000.

CHINKS ROUTED.

The roundhouse of the Monterey and Salinas Valley Railway, at Monterey, was burned September 2, along with several engines and cars, causing a $35,000 loss.

The Butchertown district of San Francisco had a $100,000 fire September 21 that destroyed stables, tanneries and warehouses.

Another $100,000 fire loss was occasioned by the burning of a King-street, San Francisco, factory where about 100 Chinamen were employed. The blaze was believed to be of incendiary origin.

A cloudburst near Cactus, Imperial County, September 12 produced a flood seven miles wide.

SANTA CRUZ, FAMED "SURF CITY," STILL HOLDS HERITAGE OF FOUNDERS

Fred Cairns
(SECRETARY-MANAGER SANTA CRUZ CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

SANTA CRUZ OWES ITS FOUNDATION to the spirit of those early Spanish fathers who braved hardship in the days before the United States was born to penetrate the wilderness of California. California's plenty and happiness and background of Spanish poetry are a direct result of the old Spanish missions.

It was in 1769 that the site destined to become Mission Santa Cruz—"the Mission of the Holy Cross"—was discovered. Years later the mission was founded, under the direction of Father Junipero Serra.

Makeshift buildings were erected at first, and during the first winter heart-breaking failures and hardships were endured. Although cows, oxen and steers had been brought from Santa Clara, provisions ran short, and it was necessary to appeal to the nearest neighbor for aid.

After two years the building of a church was begun. When completed it was 112 feet long, 26 feet wide and 25 feet high. Other buildings —carpenter shops, blacksmiths' and shoemakers' shops and a special building for the priests and officers—were erected.

AFTERNOON CROWD UPON THE BEACH AT SANTA CRUZ.

The church came to own a great deal of valuable property. Its land holdings extended eleven leagues along the coast, from New Year's Point on the north to Aptos on the south, and three leagues inland. It also owned valuable furniture brought from Spain, and the mission bells, pure-toned symbols of old Castile, were valued at $4,000. Fruit trees, grape vines and roses, all brought from Mexico, bloomed in the gardens and around the mission.

Breakfast in the old mission was served each morning at day break, after which every one left to attend to the work of the day. At 11 o'clock the large family of White men and their Red brothers had dinner, and then they passed the siesta until 2. At 2 they commenced work again and labored in the fields until the angelus called them to evening prayer. It was a monotonous life, but beautifully serene.

Now, however, the flourishing life of the old mission has disappeared, and all that remains is a memorial archway to the present Catholic church to mark the spot where it stood. But even though the mission itself and the old Spanish fathers are gone, Santa Cruz still holds the heritage of its founders.

Santa Cruz's central location, conveniently near San Francisco Bay and San Joaquin Valley points, as well as being easily accessible for Southern California on northern trips, is responsible for the coming of many visitors to the famed "Surf City." Seventy-eight miles from San Francisco, one hundred and twelve miles from Stockton, and also near other valley cities, Santa Cruz is but a few hours' drive from almost any place in Northern and Central California.

Her location is largely responsible for Santa Cruz being called the "premier convention city of California." Delegates from the north and from the south travel practically equal distance to reach Santa Cruz, which is a great convenience. Even discounting Santa Cruz's wonderful convention facilities, this convenience is enough to bring many conventions here.

CITY OF THE HOLY CROSS.

Here on the north shore of the crescent of Monterey Bay lies the City of the Holy Cross—Santa Cruz—in an atmosphere of diversity of attractions unexcelled anywhere. Little did the Spanish fathers who braved hardship to penetrate the wilderness of California, before the United States was born, dream that Santa Cruz would in future years become the "Playground of Central California," the ideal convention city of the Pacific Coast. Today as we drive over the splendid system of highways throughout the county, or come by train, how little we realize or even think of the hardships endured by the early settlers, who have helped to make our present advantages and surroundings possible.

With the charm of Italy and the grandeur of Switzerland, Santa Cruz enjoys one of the most equable climates in the United States, with wellnigh perfect weather that is an appeal to homeseekers, vacationists and tourists, who find the mid-summer temperature seldom registering as high as 85 degrees or as low as 32 degrees in winter. Jaded nerves find true rest and relief in this climate, not in enervating indolence, but in play that never seems to weary.

The mile strand of perfect beach with its famous million-dollar casino is the mecca for the thousands of vacationists and pleasure seekers who come to enjoy the attractions of the beach city where the cool breezes are wafted across the Pacific and beautiful Monterey Bay.

What can be more delightful than a plunge in the surf which is entirely free from undertow, or to enjoy the natatorium, where the very best of sanitary conditions prevail and the water is a few degrees warmer than the surf, or to lounge on the finest of white sands, or visit the concessions along the boardwalk, which are many and varied.

Beautiful drives along the water, through the agricultural districts, or into the wooded hills, add much to the pleasure of a stay in Santa Cruz. Cliff Drive, eight miles in length, follows the rugged cliffs with ever-changing scenery, which helps to make one of the most interesting trips in the vicinity.

As a home community, Santa Cruz offers wonderful inducements, for in few places do we find such a combination of climate, scenery and all-round ideal living conditions.

With the second largest poultry center of California, bringing an annual income of $1,500,000 to the city; with one of the largest bulb centers of the world, producing bulbs which are shipped to all parts of the country; with an increasing demand for the Santa Cruz County artichoke, which vegetable is fast gaining in popularity on account of its splendid food value, Santa Cruz has become known as an agricultural center, as well as a resort and convention city.

The largest cement plant in the world, with an output of 1,500,000 barrels of cement annually, gives employment to about 500 men. Other important industries are truck farming, fruit raising, fishing and lumbering.

New subdivisions are opening up in various sections and the improvements in the city during the past five years have far exceeded any twenty years in the past history of the place. The building of attractive homes, paving of streets and improvement of the sewer system to make Santa Cruz one of the most sanitary cities in the United States are important factors in the development of the community.

Fortunate, indeed, is the person who comes to Santa Cruz, whether it be for a short time, or as a permanent citizen, for social and educational advantages are of the very best.

Santa Cruz, I love you,
Beauty by the Sea,
Blue skies are above you,
Waiting there for me.
Age old redwood forests,
Mountain rainbow hues,
Throw their spirit o'er me,
I love you, Santa Cruz.

Santa Cruz, I love you,
Sandy beach and bay
Beckon me, inviting
Summer every day.
Home of health and pleasure
Happiness pursues,
Life is worth the living,
I love you, Santa Cruz.

BIG TREES ATTRACT.

Santa Cruz is one of the very few cities having two groves of redwoods, the oldest and largest living things on earth, easily accessible to them. Both the Big Tree grove and the California Redwood Park in the Big Basin are in easy driving distance of the Surf City over excellent highways.

The Big Tree grove, six miles from Santa Cruz, holds a place in California history by virtue of its having been the camp of General Fremont and his troops while awaiting the arrival of Commodore Sloat, who came by the way of Cape Horn to raise the Stars and Stripes upon this coast. For this reason, most visitors to the Big Trees group are attracted most strongly to the big hollow tree, since named the "John C. Fremont," in which the general lived through that winter's encampment. There is no doubt that one might be quite comfortable in this shelter even now, for it offers a fair-sized room with a tiny window.

Trees found in the grove are the sequoia sempervirens, not the sequoia gigantea of the Sierras. The former grow straight and tall with a thick bark, not branching for some height, while the gigantea is more cone-shaped. However, both are quite similar in trunk and bark, and both grow to an enormous size.

The Giant, tallest tree in the grove, is a beautiful old redwood which towers three hundred feet in height. Its top is gilded by the sun's rays from early morning until evening, and, with its extreme height, it seems to stand guard over the surrounding trees.

Most of the giant redwoods in the Big Tree grove are dedicated to noted persons or organizations. One especially vigorous-appearing tree is named for Theodore Roosevelt. It was dedicated at the time of his visit to the grove, during his presidency.

The Cathedral, a tree of immense size, has eighteen more smaller trees growing out of its roots. But even more handsome than the Catedral is the General Sherman tree. It rises strong and rugged to a great height before it branches. The bark, which is thick, rough and grooved, is charred in places from forest fires, but that only adds to its beauty. Along the trunk and at the base gnarled knots appear, enhancing its ruggedness. The tree is most appropriately named, so like the sturdy warrior whose name it bears.

After the motorist leaves the Big Trees on the road to the California Redwood Park at the Big Basin, eighteen miles farther, he passes through more delightful scenery.

A number of years ago this was a wild, timbered spot, difficult to reach, as the road was rough and dangerous. However, lumber companies were already commencing to cut the rare redwoods. Andrew P. Hill of San Jose, a nature-lover and an artist, took it upon himself to intervene to save the giant trees.

Enlisting the aid of Josephine McCracken, famous writer, he inaugurated a campaign against the destruction of this magnificent forest. Other people took up the cudgels, with the result that an act was passed by the California Legislature making the section a state park.

How much this park is appreciated is shown by the hundreds of people who congregate there on any Sunday or holiday. The trees there are much larger than those in the Big Trees grove, towering to an immense height.

The underbrush has been cleared in the park, making ideal camping places. There are all sorts of accommodations, such as mail, stage and telephone service, electric lighting, running water, an inn, swimming pool, and excellent trails for the hiker. At night a campfire is enjoyed in a well-constructed amphitheater, with seats for the guests hewn from huge redwood logs. Those campfire evenings have become an institution at the Big Basin.

One is awed by the age and grandeur of these trees, which have stood through centuries of fair weather and storms. They were growing when the pyramids were built, when Alexander conquered India, when Nero ruled in Rome. And they will probably be alive when we and our grandchildren are dead.

FINE GOLF COURSE.

One of the best courses that Nature has produced, the Santa Cruz Golf and Country Club links, are regarded as the best natural layout in this section of the state. The lower nine holes are especially interesting from the golfer's point of view. Few courses offer holes such as are seen on No. 1 or No. 4, the golfer having to tee off at a much higher level than the hole on both of them. There are plenty of natural hazards, and yet the nine is not too difficult for the average player.

The "upper" is not quite so blessed in the matter of natural hazards as the lower, but the improvements made on it make this nine quite as sporty as the other. A watering system covers the entire course.

The clubhouse is large enough for all social functions. The large oak near the clubhouse is said to be the second largest in the state.

One of the best features of the local course is its accessibility. It is only a few minutes' ride from the business center of Santa Cruz. Visitors to Santa Cruz find it especially convenient, making it possible for them to enjoy a swim at the beach and a round of golf in the same afternoon. Four thousand two hundred visiting players paid green fees on the course last year, and at the present pace this record will probably be broken in 1927.

Arrangements for the Admission Day festivities have been made by an executive committee Charles E. Canfield (chairman), T. V. Mathews (secretary), Enoch Alzina, H. P. Jeantrout, R. A. Schwarzmann, Allen Dudley, Ralph Miller, Darrell Dudley, Stanley Tait Jr., Harold Richie, Willett Ware, O. A. Foster, Ed. Moody—and a number of sub-committees, all composed of members of Santa Cruz Parlor No. 90 N.S.G.W.

San Francisco will send an immense crowd to Santa Cruz for Admission Day. In fact, the parade will be made up largely of Native Sons and Native Daughters from the "City That Knows How." The other counties bordering San Francisco Bay will be well represented, and so will Santa Clara County. The grand officers of the Native Sons, headed by Grand President Charles A. Thompson, will walk in the parade, while the past grand presidents of that Order, and the grand officers and past grands of the Native Daughters will appear in autos.

SHADE TREES ALONG HIGHWAYS.

Beautification of California's highways follows along with road building. A recent report of the State Highway Commission shows that systematic tree planting, begun in 1920, has provided 56,400 trees covering a distance of 685 miles along main routes. In addition to trees planted, the commission conducts maintenance work on those trees already growing along the road which do not interfere with visibility at dangerous points.

GREATEST ROAD DEVELOPMENT ERA IN STATE'S HISTORY LAUNCHED.

California is launched on the greatest road development era in its history. Ultimate completion of the premier motoring state's splendid highway system is now a certainty. Highway bills, adopted by the last State Legislature and enacting a twelve-year program of financing and construction are now law.

The companion measures, providing an additional one-cent gasoline tax for new highway construction and for the equitable allocation of highway funds for the benefit of the entire state, became effective July 29. They represent the State Legislature's solution of the problem involved in the big road-building job ahead of California to provide for the needs of approximately 1,650,000 California motorists and hundreds of thousands of motor tourists who visit this state annually.

The measures meet practically the unanimous approval of every section of the state. Sponsored by the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California, the legislation was introduced by Senator Arthur H. Breed, adopted by the last Legislature with an almost unanimous vote and approved by Governor C. C. Young. In signing the bills the governor commended the two big motoring organizations, with a combined strength of more than 200,000 members, for their activities in uniting the opposing viewpoints of the different sections of the state in support of an acceptable and adequate plan of financing future highway construction.

The new program will result, within a reasonable time, in a state highway system that will adequately serve traffic, so far as it can be anticipated, for at least the next decade. The one-cent gasoline tax is estimated to raise approximately $123,000,000 during the twelve-year period.

SOUTHLAND EXTREMELY ALLURING TO MOTORISTS OF WORLD.

July witnessed a tremendous increase in the auto tourist invasion of California South, according to figures reported to the Automobile Club of Southern California touring bureau by the State Department of Agriculture. Where 9,772 automobiles transporting out-of-state tourists entered through the various border gateways during July 1926, 13,455 cars were checked in at the border stations during July of this year.

That California South continues to be extremely alluring to motorists of the world is indicated by the steady increase in the tourist invasion during the last few years. Motor travel into the southland increased 28 percent during 1926, and the same gain was made in auto traffic from the East into the entire state. A total of 177,619 cars were counted last year as they were driven across the borders of the state, 23,015 more than the total of 1925.

For the first seven months of this year, Yuma station reported the largest count of incoming out-of-state cars, with a total of 32,675. Daggett station reported a count for the period of 26,722 automobiles, while Blythe showed 2,964 cars entering there.

Eliminate Narrow Roads—The necessity for eliminating narrow roads at points in the state highway system bearing a heavy flow of traffic is being stressed by the California State Automobile Association.

Use Care—Tire chains should not be adjusted too tightly, as this will result in damage to the tire.

ANOTHER ROAD-HOGGING FORM WHICH MUST BE ELIMINATED.

One form of road-hogging that is coming in for considerable condemnation at the present time is that of utilizing the highway as a repair shop when something goes wrong with the car. It is a type of carelessness which presents a very definite hazard and is one that every motorist should make an especial effort to avoid, declares D. E. Watkins, secretary and general manager of the California State Automobile Association.

Many motorists apparently are oblivious of the danger. When a tire goes flat, instead of pulling entirely off the road they are content to stop on the highway and make the change. In the case of a carburetor adjustment or other minor repair to the engine this is dangerous enough, but when a tire is to be changed it is doubly hazardous because the operation requires considerable moving around and the use of several tools. Even if the car itself is over on the edge of the road, if the punctured tire is on the left side it means that the motorist will be working out in the line of travel.

Drive your car entirely off the road before attempting to make repairs.

NOT NECESSARY NOW TO RENEW OPERATOR'S LICENSE CARD.

Motorists are not required to renew their operator's license card at the present time. Nor must cards be turned in, under the law which became effective July 29, until such time as the State Division of Motor Vehicles issues an order to this effect, covering licenses of certain year's issuance. Only the new applicant for an operator's license is required to take an examination. This is mandatory now.

The State Division of Motor Vehicles is given authority to cancel all operator's licenses outstanding three years or more, and before renewal may subject motorists to examination. Exercise of this authority is optional with the division. No order to this effect has yet been issued.

The purpose of the new law is to permit the state to "weed out" incompetent drivers and to clear the records of "dead" cards. But it has not yet been applied, and motorists may rest easy that due notice will be given before any order of cancellation is issued by the division.

ONE-MAN VIEWPOINT RISKY.

Don't place too much confidence in the advice of other motorists regarding motor routes and road conditions. One-man touring information is always risky.

The danger in taking a friend's advice regarding road conditions is the possibility that his tastes and judgments may differ materially from yours. The man with a low-priced, poor-riding car will frequently report normal roads as being very rough and may encourage the taking of another route which may be marred by detours. On the other hand, if the advisor drives a car that rides unusually easy he may raise hopes to a point where the trip will be a keen disappointment.

So many different factors can influence an individual when he drives over a road, that the report he gives may be far from accurate. Why be the victim? Consult the touring bureaus of the auto clubs.

CRACKING PROCESS AID TO GASOLINE.

Gasolines produced by various cracking processes frequently are superior to gasolines obtained by straight distillation from crude petroleum as far as knocking in an engine is concerned, according to a statement of the Federal Bureau of Standards, made following experiments. Information has not been available, however, as to the relative merits of these two types of gasoline in engine starting.

The results of the investigation indicate that aside from volatility there are no appreciable differences between the various kinds of motor fuels as far as engine starting is concerned.

Keep Headlights Adjusted—Motorists who find night driving one of summer's greatest pleasures owe it to themselves and to others to observe the law and see that the headlights upon their cars are adjusted so as not to be glaring and yet, at the same time, present adequate illumination of the highway.

Get the Safety Habit—Safety in motoring is a habit which should be developed. All drivers should practice safety until the fundamental acts of good driving become automatic.

Keep Windshield Clean—A clean windshield is the world's best non-glare device.

CHILDREN'S SAFETY TRAINING DEVELOPING CAUTIOUS CITIZENS.

Schoolchildren of California [illegible] are being thoroughly trained in the safety precautions upon streets and highways, not only in school but on the way to and from their homes. Instruction in safety is now reaching at least [illegible] children in school of the thirteen southern counties, it was estimated at a dinner meeting of junior high school safety committee representatives recently held at Automobile Club of Southern California headquarters.

It was pointed out that the safety campaign inaugurated in many junior high schools of the southland about two years ago is now established in similar institutions in practically all of the principal cities of this section. More than 75,000 children in the junior high-schools alone are now being instructed through various means in safety principles, it is considered.

Conclusions are advanced that this safety training in the schools is developing citizens who will be cautious drivers and pedestrians, knowing the hazards of traffic, and also that southland school youngsters generally are even now more careful on the streets than are the adult pedestrians.

SUCCESS FORCES AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY PIONEERS TO EXPAND.

Following closely the news of other great developments in the automotive industry in California South, which bid fair to establish the Western supremacy in this field in Los Angeles, is the announcement that a $300,000 expansion program of the United States Spring Co., Inc., and the United States Bumper Co., Inc., both of Los Angeles, is now under way in the new unit of the Central Manufacturing District.

The expansion program was begun three years ago, when Philip Riedele, one of the founders of the two companies and at that time president of both firms, went East to purchase machinery for the new plant. Unfortunately, he was taken suddenly ill enroute and passed away, thus delaying the expansion until the present time.

These companies are pioneers in the automotive industry in California, Philip Riedele and John B. Rauen, secretary and treasurer, having started operations in 1911. Constant increase in the volume of business of these closely allied firms has made it impossible for them to continue in the quarters now occupied, Rauen declares.

The new plant will be built to provide for almost five times the production of bumpers and springs as was possible in the old plants. Whereas in the present quarters a combined tonnage of 250 to 300 tons per month represents capacity production, the new plant will be capable of turning out from 1,250 to 1,500 tons of finished products per month. Floor space in the old plants totaled 25,000 square feet; the new unit will provide 66,500 square feet.

Investigation reveals that the United States Spring Company and the United States Bumper Company manufacture standard or optional equipment and replacements for many nationally-known automobile, truck and trailer firms both in California and the East. Branches to provide satisfactory service and to further sales of the products are maintained in San Francisco and Seattle.

SIMPLE SAFETY RULES THAT WILL LESSEN ACCIDENTS.

With the touring season in full swing throughout California and vacation centers thronged with cars, there are a few outstanding safety precautions of driving on mountain roads which all motorists should observe. That the toll of accidents may be lessened, the California State Automobile Association has issued a bulletin reminding motorists of these few simple safety rules:

Keep to the right on curves; use horn on curves—warnings prevent collisions; use compression descending hills and save all the efficiency of brakes for emergency; don't permit camping equipment or luggage to extend over the left side of the running board, it is dangerous as well as illegal.

Courtesy Helps—Courtesy counts as an accident prevention factor. Every motorist should be courteous to other drivers.

Look Out for "Kids"—Drive slowly and cautiously when passing children, for one never can tell what they will do.

Inspect Headlights—The headlights of a car should be carefully inspected after even the most minor accident. They may be thrown out of focus, which only a test will demonstrate.

LONG BEACH TYPIFIES SPRING

FASTEST GROWING U. S. CITY---WHY?

A. A. Miller
(SECRETARY PUBLICITY BUREAU LONG BEACH CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

LONG BEACH! THERE IS A DISTINCTive ring to the name! One conjectures days of extended pleasantries, a paradise strip along a mighty ocean's shore. Happy hours, many of them! A city of homes, of happiness and recreation, with facilities to provide every comfort and convenience for guests. That is Long Beach By-the-Sea, California's all-year-'round city.

But there is yet another side to this Southern California community. It is not only a playground, but a hustling, busy, growing, substantial workshop. There is much enterprise in Long Beach, which accounts for the phenomenal progress of the city.

To the visitor who seeks pleasure, Long Beach affords a continuous round of amusements and enjoyments. To the visitor on business bent, Long Beach extends the hand of commercial opportunity. Long Beach is a thriving youngster. With a foundation of hardest stone, its future is assured.

If you seek a monument to the enterprise, progress, substance and future of Long Beach, you will find here an atmosphere pregnant with potentialities and vibrant with activities that claim attention. This city has taken its place among the leading communities of the West. It is here to stay and to continue that growth for which Southern California is known the world over.

Long Beach is "a city for your children." The schools have long enjoyed a national reputation. There are thirty-four public-school buildings and sites, the valuation of which is over $10,000,000. There are over 25,000 pupils enrolled, and the staff is composed of 1,135 teachers. Nearly fifty percent of the 145,000 inhabitants are home owners, and sixty-five beautiful churches of diverse denominations grace the city. A spirit of civic responsibility and high moral influence is in evidence everywhere.

Long Beach affords the business man of ability unusual opportunities. Its remarkable natural facilities, abundant supply of water, oil, gas, power and well-located harbor complete the solidity of the foundation of Long Beach—

THE FASTEST GROWING CITY IN THE UNITED STATES—WHY?

The adjectives "mighty" and "magnificent" are mild and inadequate in expressing the glory and grandeur of Greater Long Beach, the most beautiful, populous and important of Southern California's coastal cities and one of the principal metropolises of the entire state, in fact the fourth.

Due to an aggregation of Nature's bounties, of which the scenic charms and climatic conditions head the list, and the vast natural resources of the soil in mineral and vegetal wealth, the great city by the sea has had a growth unprecedented in the annals of city building. In consequence, it is rated the wonder city of the West in its rapid development and municipal achievements, considering the brief quarter of a century that has elapsed since it was but a diminutive seaside village, where the pleasure lovers of contiguous towns and cities and the visitors from afar congregated to enjoy the surf bathing in the warm waters of the Pacific beneath the gentle beams of a semi-tropical sun, or participated in the entertainment features of the concessions along the strand and amusement zone that has grown into "The Pike," a paved pedestrian path as famous and popular as the "Board Walk" of Atlantic City, bordered on either side by a multiplicity of odd and attractive shops and amusement devices of every conceivable kind and character.

The speedy upbuilding and phenomenal growth of Long Beach, if accurately told in story, would read like a tale of the Arabian Nights and require volumes of space, lacking which it is in the province of the writer only to present herewith a brief narrative of the varied attractions possessed by this beautiful City-by-the-Sea.

Located on one of the most important harbors of the Pacific Coast twenty miles south of Los Angeles, sharing that city's advantages, while escaping its congestion, Long Beach is served by all modern methods of transportation and is easily accessible from all parts of the United States. The transportation systems include hundreds of steamship lines, three steam railroads, efficient electric railways and numerous bus lines. As a unit on the famous Southern California state highway system, Long Beach is conveniently reached by automobile; the roads make motoring a pleasure.

Convention delegates and other visitors to Long Beach are assured an enjoyable and pleasant time because of the variety and number of available amusement places. Long Beach takes its name from the gentle-sloping strand, a full seven miles in length, bordering the calm, semi-tropical waters of the Pacific Ocean. So fascinating is this tumbling, refreshing surf that tourists and home-seekers are lured here from all parts of the world.

Year 'round surf bathing brings wholesome recreation to countless thousands, irrespective of wealth or position. Three hundred and fifty days in the year the sun shines. It is never too hot or too cold—the average temperature for summer being 65 degrees and for winter 55 degrees. Pier, surf and deep-sea fishing are every-day diversions. Yachts, fishing dories and other crafts churn the waters between Long Beach and Catalina Island over huge kelp beds, where avid anglers combat with the never-failing game fish, bringing in gigantic catches daily. Deep-sea fishing boats are on daily schedule from Pine Avenue Pier for the sportsman who is out after the big catch.

LONG BEACH SKYLINE, SIGNAL HILL OIL FIELD IN BACKGROUND.

Within the city limits there are more than seven miles of smooth water in Alamitos Bay, and the Recreation Park channels and lagoons. Here, pre-Olympic water sports are held each year. Sailing, motor-boating, aquaplaning, canoeing and still-water bathing are year-round attractions.

For sixteen years Long Beach has been maintaining and operating a municipal band 365 days in the year, at a cost to the taxpayers of approximately $133,000 annually. In its ensemble are fifty men, recruited largely from the great symphony and philharmonic orchestras and bands of the country, under the direction of Herbert L. Clarke, well-known bandmaster. No musicians in America work under happier auspices. For fifty weeks in the year they pursue the even tenor of their way, playing six afternoon concerts and five evening concerts each week.

The attendance at each concert runs from 2,000 to 3,000 and is one of the many major attractions along the ocean promenade. It is estimated that the band has played to approximately 1,000,000 people during the year, present in person at the concerts, and to untold thousands over the radio. This musical organization of fifty pieces is conceded to be one of the finest bands in America, and is the only municipal band in the country in twelve months' service.

SMALL PORTION OF LONG BEACH'S EXTENSIVE OCEAN FRONT.

Extending one mile along the magnificent beach front, the Long Beach Amusement Zone is one of the foremost attractions in Southern California. Jutting out into the ocean are two large piers. One of them, the Silver Spray, ranks with the largest amusement piers in the country, providing six acres of ground space abounding in high-class attractions. Along the famous "Walk of a Thousand Lights" palatial dancing pavilions, skating rinks, racing coasters, chutes, fun houses, rides, trained animals, aquarium, games, shows and various sports vie with each other in furnishing "Coney Island" thrills and amusements. In the heart of this pleasure zone stands an imposing million-dollar bath house, one of the most luxurious indoor salt-water plunges on the Pacific Coast. Here, from early morning until late in the evening, thousands enjoy indoor swimming and water sports. The Amusement Zone August 21 was the scene of the great Long Beach bathing beauty parade, with more than 300 contestants on exhibition. This was one of the largest affairs of its kind ever held in this city, a crowd of approximately 30,000 people swarming to the Amusement Zone to view the extraordinary event. It is a yearly affair, attracting people from far and near. To gain some idea of the great size of the Amusement Zone, it is interesting to note that 1,229 people are employed, with an average weekly payroll of $43,000. Taxes paid yearly by the various concessions total $77,582. Paid admissions average $4,000,000 yearly.

While Long Beach stands supreme because of the natural location, seasonal climate and splendid bathing beach upon the shore of the beautiful Pacific Ocean, visitors and convention delegates will find all the varied out-of-door sports indulged in under ideal surroundings, among which may be considered the most popular—golf, roque and yachting.

In a climate which makes golf possible twelve months of the year, and on fairways cooled by ocean breezes, the golf enthusiast will find the game at its best here. Two sporty golf courses are situated within the city limits, one the Virginia Country Club, a private club, but which extends its courtesies to members of the out-of-town clubs, and another the Municipal Park course, open to the public. Both of these clubs are within ten minutes' ride from the center of the city. Within a half-hour's ride is the Palos Verdes Golf Club, without doubt the most picturesque and majestic course to be found anywhere. Its proximity to Long Beach has made it a very popular course with local golfers. The Long Beach Country Club has a beautiful little course on a hundred acres of land lying a few miles east of Long Beach. These four courses provide ample opportunity for thousands of golfers to try out their shots annually and make Long Beach truly a golfer's paradise.

On fairways within sight of the Pacific Ocean covering the sides of a mighty hill like a green blanket, the Muncipal Park course is without doubt the most popular and sporty course to play. Only a trifle over 5,000 yards in length, it is a delight to the average golfer, and typically a course for the come-and-go golfers. The man who is not on very good speaking terms with par will get a great deal of real enjoyment playing these fairways, for all pars are easy and there are but two five-par holes on the card. Present plans provide for enlargement of this course to over 6,000 yards with grass greens and a small nine-hole course for women and beginners.

Long Beach today may be said to be the center of the new American sport, roque, a combination of billiards and croquet which requires more skill, technique, steadiness of nerve and head work than any other known game before the American public. It has been said that roque is croquet with a college education. The game appeals to both young and old, as it affords light exercise and diversion. The walking about the court, bending over and shooting give good muscular exercise, and mental alertness is required in planning the game, studying your opponent's style, finding his strong and weak points and his reactions to the different situations. Shots do not allow more than one thirty-second of an inch variance, and require all the skill of a sharp-shooter, the nerve and poise of an archer, the thought and concentration of a chess player, and, at the same time, afford a wonderful amount of mild exercise. The game is played on well-packed and smooth courts, 20x60 feet, surrounded with a cement border, and vulcanized hard rubber balls are used. Arches are narrowed so that balls have a clearance of only one-eight of an inch. The cement borders give the game a resemblance to billiards, in that the player uses them in banking to hit a wired ball, to drive the object ball to a desired position or to make position for the playing ball, and the best players make shots of two to five rails with remarkable accuracy.

Long Beach has nine of these roque courts in the downtown district located in beautiful Lincoln Park, flanked by many varieties of beautiful trees, shrubs and flowers. The courts are shaded by giant eucalyptus and are electric lighted for night playing. Confortable seats surround the courts, and many spectators are there from early morning till nightfall witnessing the game. The proximity of the courts to the main business districts enables the average businessman to go to the courts during the noon hour, within a few minutes of his business, and play a round or two as a relaxation from his work, and be back at his business well repaid. The average game requires over two miles of walking and plenty of stooping, and stands out as an excellent technical and physical outdoor diversion for young and old alike.

Yachting is more than a sport—it is a form of living, combined with recreation and adventure. "Homes afloat" has become more than a mere expression—today it is a national fact. There has been a general belief that yachting was entirely a sport for millionaires, but the price of a fairly good automobile can secure a cabin cruiser whose upkeep is no more than that for an automobile. Yachting leads the way to an economical, sensible and healthy life, free from the congested highways, restful to the nerves, adding new strength to the body and bringing one in close touch with Nature in all her moods.

Long Beach, situated as it is upon the shore of the Pacific Ocean, with thousands of miles of navigable water, has always been more or less of a yachting center, and many of its citizens make its broad waters their playground. "Life afloat," whether in the little inexpensive outboard motorboat on a day's fishing trip, or in the fast runabout, a roadster of the sea, or with wife and the kiddies for week-ends in the comfortable cabin cruiser, is steadily increasing in popularity as our population becomes more amphibious in their sport and recreation.

Yachting and speedboat racing have gained much impetus in Long Beach waters during the past year, which has been marked by a notable increase in the interest displayed in sailing and in the thrilling sport provided by the popular 151-class hydroplanes. Weekly sailboat races are staged during the summer at Alamitos Bay, an ideal aquatic playground with seven miles of protected inland waters. With the development of these waterways, Long Beach will be particularly well equipped to bid for the 1932 Olympic water sports.

Off shore, upon the blue Pacific, the yachtsman is not troubled with sudden thunder storms and squalls. The winter season here is ideal. Santa Catalina, San Clemente, San Nicholas, Santa Cruz, Santa Rosa, San Miguel are the largest in the group of channel islands nearby, and nearly all have well-charted and protected coves and bays awaiting to greet an inquiring bowsprit. They are always a joy and offer the objective for many a power or sailing cruise for Saturday afternoon, a week-end, a week, a month, or for the summer.

A city's record of hospitality may be judged by its club and social life. Long Beach's excellent clubs and active branches of national fraternal organizations speak well of the friendliness and co-operation of the citizens of this city. This spirit of good-will likewise is manifested by the cordial welcome given to visitors.

The majority of the better-known fraternal societies have branches with paid secretaries in Long Beach. The Federation of States Societies, representing every state in the union, and some four or five foreign countries, comprises the largest social organization in Long Beach. These state societies conduct weekly picnics attended by thousands, where the newcomer is made to feel at home. Out-of-town guests are made to feel at home by a visit to these places.

Many luncheon clubs, branches of national bodies, meet weekly and are happy to have out-of-town members as guests. The city also has a splendid athletic club and several beach clubs, a Chamber of Commerce, and, last but not least, Taubman's Bible class, the largest attended Bible class in the world.

California is becoming one of the most popular playgrounds of the nation. Long Beach may be said to be the gateway to this vacationland, for within two hours' ride of this city one may enjoy all the diversions of mountain life, gather oranges in the fragrant valleys, or play snowball upon nearby mountain tops. Motor trips offer inviting diversion over a score of fascinating routes down the coast highway, or back to the picturesque inland towns through perfume-laden orange groves or fruit-laden vineyards. Ocean excursions to Catalina Island, San Diego or the northern ports—trips that are free from the storms and rough seas common elsewhere—hold an irrestible allure for thousands of visitors.

To those who wish to take their vacation while attending a convention, no city is surpassed by Long Beach, because of its opportunities as vacationland's gateway. Excellent hard-surfaced roads through beautiful countrysides lead to hundreds of alluring places within a short ride of Long Beach.

Comfortable and spacious hotel accommodations are necessary for any city seeking to entertain convention delegates and visitors. In this respect, Long Beach is well equipped. It has more than 850 hotels and apartment buildings, with facilities to accommodate 25,000 persons. The majority of these hotels and apartments are conveniently located near the business section, and many overlook the ocean. Accommodations cover the widest range. Every taste may be satisfied, whether the preference is for the quiet, unpretentious and yet thoroughly comfortable hotel, apartment or bungalow, or for the fashionable resort hotel.

The world over, spring is the beloved time of the year. The world loves spring. Long Beach typifies spring. The air is balmy and the gentle blue of the Pacific washes its sands that glitter and invite beneath semi-tropical skies. Its air, the aroma of its flowers, the verdant wonders of its yards and parks, the rapidity with which the soil is transformed into a beauty spot, convinces the newcomer that here it must be always spring. The feeling is in the air. The tired and worn-out become invigorated; they are ready to plunge anew into business ventures; they are optimists as to the city's future; they feel as they do on a balmy spring day when the blood seems to course anew through their veins.

Everything grows in Long Beach—the people, the plants and trees, and the city itself. There is boundless enthusiasm. Holding the world's record for population growth for cities of the larger size during the past twenty years, Long Beach is bounding along at a rate that astonishes even its older residents. The spirit of springtime growth is here evident. Everything is life, hum, activity. As a result, Long Beach today offers every advantage of an ideal city, with the added advantages of ideal climate, working conditions and opportunity in a business way.

CENTRAL MEMORIAL PARK SERVES CITIZENS OF MANY COMMUNITIES.

Central Memorial Park, convenient to Long Beach, Santa Ana, Anaheim, Wilmington and other communities totaling about 300,000 people, is a beautiful park used as a burial ground for loved ones who may repose amidst living monuments of ornamental trees, flowering shrubs and velvety lawns.

The park was designed by men rich in years of experience in planning works of the kind. It is considered a masterpiece by five of the most noted landscape engineers and artists of the United States who, in 1924, awarded the plan first prize at the art exhibit of the city planners of the Pacific Coast, held in Los Angeles.

Permanent beautification of the property has been provided for at a minimum price to the investor. Burial plots possessing ideal appointments are available.

NATIVE SONS ADD TEN.

Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. initiated a class of ten candidates August 17, among the number being Paul McFadyen, youngest son of Edgar McFadyen, a charter member of the Parlor. There was a large attendance from Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 (San Pedro), the following officers of that Parlor exemplifying the ritual: Willard Buchanan, president; Clyde Foote, first vice-president; Stanley Wheeler, second vice-president; Vincent Hopkins, third vice-president; Ural Griffin, marshal; Joe Brannon, inside sentinel; Edward Baldwin, junior past president; William Durr, senior past president.

Directly following the ceremonies Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell addressed the initiates and told them of the aims and accomplishments of the Order. Wm. R. Wilson, one of the candidates, was appointed by President Charles E. Crowell pianist for No. 239. Speakers of the evening included Captain J. D. Loop, W. B. Van de Car, Albert Mackley and D.D.G.P. William F. Durr. A Dutch lunch was served at the gathering's close.

Long Beach Parlor has named Dr. S. T. Luce, recording secretary, Edgar C. Crowell, past president, and Charles E. Crowell, president, as its representatives on the Interparlor Committee, Southern Jurisdiction. It will participate in the membership contest for the silver loving cup promised by Grand President Charles A. Thompson, and September 17 plans to hold a beach weiner bake, to which all Natives are invited.

Secretaries to Meet—The annual convention of the National Association of Secretaries of State will be in session at Sacramento City, September 6, 7 and 8.

Frank McNanny, employed in razing the historic Abel Stearns residence in Los Angeles City, was crushed to death by a falling section of the three-foot-thick adobe walls September 1. His was the first body interred in Evergreen cemetery.

A passenger named Freland aboard the steamboat "Whipple," enroute from San Francisco to Sacramento, suddenly aroused from a drunken stupor struck and knocked overboard a young man named Cohen, who was drowned.

As the result of the killing by Chinamen, bent on robbery, of Sargent, Louis Oder and his wife, on the Sargent ranch near Rocklin, Placer County, September 3, a cavalcade of citizens rounded up all the Chinks employed between Roseville and Auburn and compelled them to leave Placer County.

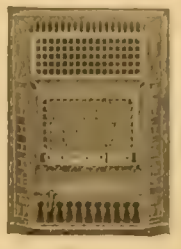
At a San Diego City dance September 20 an intoxicated man named Sparks took a shot at a woman who refused to dance with him. The bullet missed her, went through a board partition and killed James Murdock, passing in the hallway.

Fritz Weitzel, a farmer living near Los Angeles who had been involved in several altercations, none of which were of his seeking, was killed from ambush September 1 while driving to town. Pat Connolly and his sister and a man named Gaines were arrested and charged with the crime.

At Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, September 26, G. L. McCoy took a shot at Judge A. Thomas, attorney for Mrs. McCoy in a divorce action. He was sent to San Quentin for ten years.

Dennis Harrington, a 12-year-old Grass Valley, Nevada County, lad, was let down a mining shaft by a rope to recover a bucket September 22. The foul air caused him to let go his hold upon the rope, and he was drowned in the sump.

A new boy went to school in Los Angeles City and, returning home, his mother inquired how he liked it. He did not like it, and pressed for an explanation, responded: "There are four boys in my class that I can't lick or beat playing marbles, and it is out of the question to try."



STATE WILL CONTRIBUTE MILLIONS TOWARD EDUCATION.

Toward the support of the public schools, California will contribute during the current school year $23,652,267. This is the greatest apportionment in the state's history and reflects the tremendous growth of the state educational system, according to State Superintendent of Public Instruction William John Cooper. The apportionments will be made in September 1927 and February 1928.

Of the huge total, $17,912,698 will go to the elementary schools, $5,430,768 to the high schools and $308,800 to the junior colleges. The apportionments, made to the several counties, are based on the average daily attendance for the school year recently ended—597,223 in the elementary schools, 181,037 in the high schools and 2,888 in the junior colleges.

Los Angeles County, with its thousands of public-school children, will receive close to one-third of the total to be apportioned—$7,821,367. Alameda County's share will be $1,931,781, San Francisco's $1,853,856, and San Diego's $814,-953.

Ventura Fair—The annual Ventura County Fair will be held at Ventura City, September 14 to 18. Visitors may camp or picnic upon the beach adjoining the fair grounds. A bathing girls' review will be a closing-day feature.

CALIFORNIA'S ANNIVERSARY DAY—AN ANALOGY

May Himes Noonan

(GRAND PRESIDENT, NATIVE DAUGHTERS GOLDEN WEST.)

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, ONE OF the pioneer American writers, in his inspiring story, "The Great Stone Face," today recognized as one of the literary classics of America, offers an analogy for California's anniversary day and the emotion the anniversary evokes, which I will present as my message for Admission Day.

The story tells of a mother and her small son, Ernest, who were seated at the door of her cottage discussing the Great Stone Face, profiled upon the perpendicular wall of the mountain, far above an extensive valley which was well populated, the inhabitants representing divers modes of living. All were familiar with the Great Stone Face which for many centuries had been an inspiration for these people, who daily gazed upon this masterpiece of Nature. Its features were noble; the expression was fascinating in that it seemed to radiate an infinite amount of kindliness, gentleness and affection for all mankind. Its was the belief of many that the valley owed much of its productiveness to the presence of this enormous giant which was acting as a sentinel.

The small boy while gazing upon this countenance remarked to his mother that he wished it could speak, for its appearance was so very kindly that he felt its voice must be pleasant. "If I were to see a man with such a face," he said, "I should love him dearly."

"If an old prophesy should come to pass," answered his mother, "we may see a man at some time or other with exactly such a face as that." "What prophesy do you mean, dear mother," eagerly inquired Ernest. "Pray tell me all about it." So his mother told a story which had been told to her by her mother when she was but a child, and which had also been told even in the days of the first settlers in this section.

The gist of the prophesy was that at some future day a child would be born in the locality who was destined to become the noblest and greatest personage of his time and whose matured countenance would bear an exact resemblance to the Great Stone Face. Many of the old inhabitants, together with some of the young, still cherished their faith in this old prophesy, while others who had seen more of the world had wearied watching without beholding a man with such a face.

"Mother," said Ernest, "I hope that I may live to see him." "Perhaps you may," said his mother, in her eagerness to satisfy the youngster.

Ernest never forgot the story his mother told him, with the result that it seemed to shape his character into a mild, quiet, unobtrusive boy. His intelligence developed far beyond the average of many lads who had been taught at famous schools, notwithstanding the fact that Ernest had no teacher, except the Great Stone Face, which constantly inspired him. At last he imagined that the vast features recognized him, and gave him a smile of kindness and encouragement. While doubtless all others could have received the same benefit, the secret was that the boy's tender and confiding simplicity saw what others could not perceive.

On three occasions during his lifetime rumors were current that the personage resembling the Great Stone Face was about to return to the valley, and in each instance there was an unusual reception attending the home-coming. But, after the festivities were concluded, the people could not recognize the resemblance which they had previously assured themselves existed.

Ernest, although enthusiastic, on each homecoming was greatly disappointed in that he immediately saw no resemblance to the object which had given him inspiration. He felt that the men who were honored did not possess the characteristics which he believed they should possess to resemble the Great Stone Face—peace, wisdom, a desire for doing good and making people happy.

By the time the third individual had been given an ovation, Ernest was an old man, but not in vain had he grown old. "More than the white hairs on his head were the sage thoughts in his mind, his wrinkles and furrows were inspections that Time had graved, and in which he had written legends of wisdom that had been tested by the tenor of a life." He had become a preacher of note; great statesmen, college professors and men of learning from far and near came to see and converse with him. He seemed to be inspired by the angels. During his conversation his face would light and shine upon them. His guests when leaving would look at the Great Stone Face, imagining they had seen its likeness in a human countenance, but could not remember where.

Finally, a poet who had heard of Ernest called. He did not disclose his identity, but simply sought a night's lodging, which was gladly given him by Ernest, who incidentally had been reading some of the poems of his guest. They became warm friends and Ernest, realizing that his guest was a man possessing an unusual mind, asked him to tell who he was.

The poet accompanied Ernest to an assemblage of the neighboring inhabitants. He listened to his discourse and was thrilled. He then immediately recognized in Ernest the likeness of the Great Stone Face and suddenly remarked, in exclamation, that the old prophesy had been fulfilled and the man resembling the Great Stone Face was standing before them. All of the people gazed in astonishment, and realized that what the poet said was true. But Ernest, having completed his discourse, took the poet's arm and walked homeward, still hoping that some wiser and better man than himself would appear, bearing a resemblance.

MRS. MAE HIMES NOONAN.

Here we have the lesson of environment and its value. Here we have the analogy for our state's natal day. There is an opportunity for every creative artist in California; there is everything here to inspire. The literary world looks to California for greater and broader literary artists. The art world of California is already being recognized in Europe, some of the etchings of California artists having been given permanent places in the Salon in Paris. Science has developed in California, and particularly is recognized through the marvelous achievements of Luther Burbank. But we, as Native Daughters of the Golden West, are artists or creators in an entirely different field. We are the moulders and creators of character, of a California ideal. And, as Ernest was unconsciously being influenced by the dignity and nobility of the Great Stone Face, so we may, in turn, be remoulded by the beauty of the surroundings in which we live.

Those fortunate enough to live in this happily favored state have everything to inspire—sunshine, fruits and flowers, productiveness of soil, and the gold of California. Nature has provided objects of extensive beauty and great inspiration.

If you have ever driven through the Santa Clara Valley in blossomtime and seen the buds eager to burst forth into full bloom that they may more quickly become the finished, ripened fruit, you have been impressed at once with the valley's productiveness. In addition to the almost ethereal delicacy of the pastel blossoms, one feels a strong emotion, hope, anticipation, even prophesy, for a richer, brighter future.

Mount Shasta, with its snow-capped peak and its sculpturesque and rugged slopes, immediately suggests beauty and great inspiration. It appears to be reaching up for spiritual values, it seems to have attained a loftier position, it impresses as does Gothic architecture, and reminds that we should be constantly seeking higher levels, searching for more sublime characteristics.

The picturesque high Sierras, stretching for miles, give a sense of expansiveness. We look down upon one fertile valley and then upon another, which reminds of the limitless advancement possible in our own lives. Even though we have cultivated the qualities of honesty, kindness, gentleness and patience, there is still room for great improvement. There are limitless potentialities in our inner selves which we have not yet discovered.

We view the pathless, mysterious Pacific Ocean with its irregular and sand-washed coastline and are immediately reminded of its power. Even with its restlessness, a stability exists in that as it ebbs it also flows. And so with all of California's products, there is the permanency, there is the fullness, there is the completeness of the yield. We are reminded of this when looking over the vast expanse of the Pacific, which washes our rich shores as if to protect and nourish them for future and greater harvesting.

If there are moments of despondency or seemingly moments of depression, or times when our Order does not seem to be growing, flourishing or expanding, then we must remember that just so long as it is linked with the country, as varied in its resources, bordered by the massive body of ocean, we should always feel the confidence which is as unvarying as the incoming tide.

All who have visited Yosemite Valley have been awed not alone by its grandeur, but by the mystery of its formation, its precipitous cliffs, its majestic, towering mountains and its magnificent waterfalls. What a stretch of imagination it takes to conceive of the mighty glacier that must have hewed that glorious valley into the form in which we now behold it. After the upheaval it left in its wake only beauty, and we have this beauty in the trees, the rushing Merced River, and the green meadows where the denizen of the forests abound.

And even at this time, the very effort to ignore our glorious holiday by having all business houses remain open on Admission Day, may have the value of making us more interested, more loyal, more effective in our efforts to show respect and loyalty to the state which gave us birth, so that through this temporary symbol of destruction we may recognize even a greater beauty strengthening itself in the hearts of our membership.

And so, on this Admission Day, we should feel that it is the birthday of a new hope. New ideas are being created, new impressions are arising in every heart and, with the constant influence of the hope of the Santa Clara Valley, the beauty of Mount Shasta, the expansiveness of the high Sierras, the power of the Pacific Ocean and the grandeur of the Yosemite Valley, we too may expect, aye believe, that, even as Ernest became the noblest and greatest personage of his time, a higher, nobler character may be the glorious future of every member of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West.

NATIVES FIND GOOD HOME FOR ABANDONED BABY GIRL.

San Juan (San Benito County)—A baby abandoned some time ago in a local service station and taken in charge by the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Central Homeless Children Committee has grown to be a strong and healthy child and been placed in a good home for adoption, according to an announcement of Bertha A. Briggs, Past Grand President N.D.G.W.

Every abandoned child received by the Orders is given a name, and the little San Juan waif was named Juanita Fremont, in honor of San Juan and its historical surroundings.

The Native Daughters and Native Sons commenced the work of finding desirable homes for abandoned children twelve years ago and have placed 3,007 children in good homes for adoption. The children are under the organizations' supervision for a long time before they are allowed to be legally adopted.

CALIFORNIANS ROUND THE WORLD

Rockwell D. Hunt, Ph.D.
(DEAN OF THE GRADUATE SCHOOL, UNIVERSITY SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.)

THE WORLD IS A BIG PLACE, BUT Californians are to be found all over it. As the sun never sets on representatives of the British Empire, so it may be said the moon never ceases to shine on tourists from California. A charmed word is that—California! the name of a romantic spot of fascinating history, of the land of heart's delight, of the state that everybody loves. On the good ship "Emka" of the British India Company, for the delightful voyage from Colombo to Suez, there were eighty-nine first-class passengers. Of these—without malice aforethought or combination of parties—thirty-three were from California alone.

One of the richest by-products of travel abroad to a Californian is a clearer recognition and keener appreciation of the matchless heritage that is his. It is sometimes necessary to go away from the homeland and look back at it from a distance to be brought to a realization of its worth and charm. So it is with Californians, especially native sons and daughters who have always lived here.

In Asia alone dwell more than one-half of the human family; multiplied millions are in dire want; the Pacific borders in the Far East a vast ocean of poverty. The Orient looks more and more to the Occident for help and guidance in this new day of revolution and renaissance.

California owes it to the world, and finally to herself, to extend a helping hand to her neighbors across the common ocean. It is reasonable that this help—which is, in fact, no new thing—shall take several different forms. I suggest three or four:

(1) TRADE AND COMMERCE: One of the greatest benefactions that can be bestowed upon the backward nations of the Orient is the legitimate expansion of wholesome commercial relations and the corresponding stimulation of their own trade and industry. If we can assist in speeding their industrial revolution—which, in truth, is inevitable—while mitigating the sharpness and suffering incident to the transition and adjustments, that itself will be a genuine service.

(2) GOVERNMENTAL PRINCIPLES: Co-incident with the industrial revolution is the political revolution. The world is greatly concerned with the newer aspirations of these awaking peoples; and it is natural that they should look to us for encouragement and sound counsel in matters of governmental policy. It may be of vast concern in days to come what answers are given the tough political riddles now confronting the great Asiatic countries.

(3) RELIGION: The Orient is very religious, but probably in no realm of thought and activity is there greater need of real help and wise guidance than precisely here. The Christian missions have not failed; neither have they wholly succeeded—or at least their work has not yet been completed. The term "mission" will perhaps gradually disappear; but the spirit of Christianity will not fail to grow. Many American missionaries may prove to be dispensable, but their good work will continue and expand through native organizations, strengthened and inspired by the West's wisest counselors.

(4) EDUCATION: There have been this year about 2,500 select Chinese students attending American colleges and universities, and the number of Japanese students exceeds 1,000. Perhaps a half of the too-meager educational facilities of all India are afforded by Christian missions. The industrial revolution of the Orient cannot be achieved without general and technical education. Representative democracy is unthinkable where nine-tenths of the people are illiterate; spiritual goals cannot be reached in countries where schism and bigotry and ignorant superstition are so prevalent, except through the enlightening process of intellectual development and emancipation. What I am saying is, that in the long vocabulary of the needs of the backward nations of the Far East there is no stronger word than "Education!"

My travels have taught me how deeply appreciative the Orientals are of even small favors bestowed; how serious-minded are their students, as compared to many of our own; how anxious they are to be friends, if we but show ourselves friendly. Never have I beheld truer exhibitions of loyalty to an institution than was repeatedly shown to the University of Southern California by Japanese and Chinese alumni who welcomed me as its humble representative in their own homelands. The truth of the old adage which states that he who would have friends must show himself friendly has been demonstrated afresh—though I would go further and apply it to nations and to peoples as well as to individuals.

SANTA BARBARA'S SPANISH DAYS FIESTA DRAWS THOUSANDS.

Santa Barbara's mission rededication and Spanish days celebration were attended by thousands. The Old Spanish days celebration turns time backward with an easy grace to that period of California's history when life was lived leisurely and fiestas flourished as the flowers.

Santa Barbara is festive, and celebrates as she lives, genuinely because of her heritage. The historic adobe where the Native Sons and Native Daughters held open house during the celebration is the old casa Covorrubias, in whose patio many questions of state were settled.

With the booming of guns and the fanfare of trumpets, the mission rededication program began, and the mission bells called the populace together. A memorial tablet, placed upon the front wall of the building, reads: "Santa Barbara Mission—Dedicated December 4 1786, Destroyed by Earthquake June 29 1925, Restoration Completed August 10 1927." Speakers included Father Augustine, John Stephen McGroarty, Senator James D. Phelan, Joseph Scott and Dwight Murphy.

The fiesta parade of the following day depicted the history of Santa Barbara through the Spanish, the Mexican and the American periods. Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 N.S.G.W. was represented by a float showing the raising of the Bear Flag at Sonoma, while Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W. had a float introducing Saint Barbara de Senna, Miss Nelson depicting the character.

The fiesta closed with week-end parties in homes and centers, a days of '49 camp and a night pageant.

In the course of his remarks, Judge Thompson said that he would give a silver trophy cup to the county Parlor outside Los Angeles City which would show the greatest gain in membership, the Parlors interested to arrange the contest details.

On Santa Monica Bay's behalf Undersheriff Eugene W. Biscailuz presented to Deputy Grand President Witkowski a silver cigarette lighter, in appreciation for the efforts he had expended in the Parlor's behalf. Through his leadership the large class of candidates was made possible. Previous to the initiatory ceremonies No. 267 entertained at supper the candidates, the ritual team and the grand officers, and at the meeting's close served lunch to everybody.

LOOKING AHEAD.

The City of Los Angeles will celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its founding September 9, 1931, and one of the features will be an Admission Day pageant staged by California's Native Sons and Native Daughters.

That they may begin now to prepare for this monster event, the Interparlor Committee has addressed a letter to every Parlor of both Orders. Responses from several, that they will participate, have been received.

ANNUAL BEACH OUTING.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. had its annual beach outing August 21 at the Los Flores Canyon home of Howard G. Bentley and everybody had a good time. The automobile tire and tube were awarded to Mrs. Roland F. Nichols and the autograph folding camera to Lee Smith. The anticipated baseball game between teams of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 and of No. 45 could not be pulled off because of lack of grounds.

August 4 there was an after-meeting gathering at Herbert's in honor of Ray Lemoine, recently retired president, and there were numerous short talks for the good of the Order. Great plans are being made for the old-timers' night to be featured by the Parlor September 29.

There is much rejoicing in No. 45 over the defeat, by a 12-to-9 score, of the indoor baseball aggregation of Ramona Parlor No. 109, July 28. W. W. Ross was the star player for Los Angeles, and other members of that team were: L. W. Smith, R. F. Nichols, Walter Fisher, Joseph Brenton, Julius O. Leuschner, W. E. Snyder, H. B. Gaston.

FORTY-NINER NIGHT.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. will open its "winter" activities with a '49er night September 23. A large class of candidates will be initiated, the officers of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 exemplifying the ritual. A program that will create no end of fun is promised by the committee in charge, and the occasion will come to a close with a big "feed."

BLUE AND GOLD TO COMPETE.

At its August 17 meeting Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. inaugurated a membership drive, the active members being divided into two teams, the Blue and the Gold, captained, respectively, by W. H. Floyd and R. M. Meek. To add interest, the winning team will be banqueted at the expense of the losing one. Through this campaign the Parlor hopes to win the Grand President Charles A. Thompson silver cup.

Glendale's September calendar includes, in addition to business meetings the 14th and the 28th, initiation and refreshments the 7th, and a card party the 21st.

TEARS OF JOY.

There was a large attendance, including many visitors from Glendale, Long Beach and San Pedro, at the public installation of officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. July 27. D.D.G.P. Kathryn Ronan conducted the ceremonies and Jennie D. Raymond became the new president. Annie L. Adair, for the Parlor, presented the retiring president, Calista De Soto, with a beautiful emblematic ring—a golden bear set in onyx—and the recipient was so overcome that she could only express her delight in tears.

Through D.D.G.P. Ronan, President Raymond's mother presented her with a Native Daughter pin, and Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer delivered a congratulatory address. Refreshments were served and then dancing was in order.

August 17, Past Grand President Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen was a visitor and made a splendid talk. Florence Dodson-Schoneman delightfully told of the Santa Barbara Spanish days fiesta, and Past Grand President Stoermer spoke of Santa Clara Mission, to the restoration fund for which the Parlor has donated $105. The $100 pledged for the new building fund of the Native Daughter Home has been forwarded.

Doris Willis had charge of the August 10 card party, and Helen McAnany of the dance August 24. Grand President Mae Himes Noonan will officially visit the Parlor September 21 and a delightful evening is anticipated. The regular monthly card party and dance will be held, respectively, September 14 and 28.

DELIGHTFUL MEETING.

Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. of Glendale had a delightful meeting August 2, President Clytelle Hewitt presiding. Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas and D.D.G.P. Mary McAnany were among the many visitors. A special feature was a presentation by Margaret Davis. Refreshments were served.

August 20 an open card party was sponsored by the Parlor and was a success in every particular.

LOS ANGELES HAS SPRING WATER.

Peter H. Muller of Hollywood Parlor No. 196, prominent both in the Native Sons and the Elks, has recently been appointed general manager for the Elysian Springs Water Company for the northeast district.

The Elysian Springs Water Company is the oldest of its kind in California, having been established for more than thirty-four years. The water is bottled at the springs, at 1530 to 1540 Baxter street, Los Angeles, and delivered fresh daily by a fleet of twenty trucks operated by the company.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Josephine Jones (Los Angeles N.D.) was a visitor last month to San Francisco.

Fred J. Burmester (Los Angeles N.S.) viewed the grandeur of Yosemite last month.

William Ashe (Ramona N.S.) has returned from a business trip to Washington, D. C.

DON'T MISS IT.

Much has been said, pro and con, as to what ingredients make the perfect "box office" combination for a motion picture and, considering the extent of argument carried on relative to this all-important question in motion-picture production, it is not surprising that producers and directors are showing keen interest in the box office sensation now showing at the Carthay Circle Theatre, "7th Heaven." After weeks of study the "dope" on "7th Heaven," as the film experts view it, is as follows: Unselfish love, human courage and unswerving faith, all happily highlighted by genuine, chuckling humor, are the emotional factors responsible for this big Fox production being a hit.

And, it is the powerful simplicity with which these elemental emotions are portrayed by Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, under the direction of Frank Borzage, that has shot this production into the constellation of bright stellar attractions produced in the last ten years. The public renders its report on why it likes "7th Heaven" without technical terms: "It's great! Don't miss it for the world." Which is expressive, and laconically American.

BRILLIANT OPERA SEASON AHEAD.

There will be seven debuts made the approaching season under the aegis of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association. One will be a daughter of California, Francisca Peralta, long a soprano favorite at the Metropolitan Opera House.

For out-and-out brilliance, the casts for the October grand opera season have never been equaled. The single seat sale, which opened recently, continues unabated. The largest and tallest scenery ever built for any stage has been completed for "La Cena Delle Beffe" and "Turandot," according to George Leslie Smith and Merle Armitage, and work is now proceeding on the beautiful production of "Romeo and Juliet."

U. S. C. REOPENS SEPTEMBER 19.

"AEneas Hall" is carved over the entrance of the new men's dormitory of the University of Southern California, which is to be occupied for the first time with the opening of the fall semester. "AEneas," recalling the undaunted Trojan warrior, was chosen by President von Klein-Smid and endorsed by William Henley, president of the student body, as the name most significant of the Trojan spirit, and therefore most suitable for the men's living hall just erected upon the university grounds.

AEneas Hall will be opened for occupancy during freshman week, which begins September 13, according to Warren Bovard, vice-president of the University of Southern California. The fall semester opens September 19.

Los Angeles Fair—The annual Los Angeles County Fair will be held at Pomona, September 20 to 24. A rare bird show will be among the attractions.

MAGNETO-LIGHTED AUTOS MUST NOT OPERATE AT NIGHT.

A final warning to motorists, that automobiles lighted by means of current derived from a magneto which has not been approved by the testing laboratory of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, will not be permitted to operate at night upon the highways of California after August 31, has been issued by the division.

The order is in compliance with a law passed four years ago by the State Legislature setting September 1, 1927, as the final date on which magneto-lighted cars would be permitted to operate. The law was passed in the interest of safety, as it has been determined that cars so lighted give little light when running slowly and are apt to glare when traveling at higher speeds.

SAN PEDRO THE GREAT
HARBOR of the GRE AT SOUTHWEST

HISTORIC LANDMARK TO DISAPPEAR

(STANLEY A. WHEELER.)

WITHIN A FEW WEEKS GIANT steam and electric dredges will begin to gnaw away little Deadman's Island, historic landmark at the entrance of San Pedro Harbor. It must give way to the Federal Government's plan for widening the channel of the port.

The little island, upon which Richard Henry Dana declares a ship's mate buried a dead sailor "without ceremony" and upon which, according to an Indian tradition, a great chief was laid to rest, will furnish some 35,000 cubic yards of earth toward a new sixty-two-acre area of reclaimed land.

Deadman's Island now stands at a point where the main channel of the Port of Los Angeles will be widened 400 feet. Upon the reclaimed land, made with sand and silt taken from both the island and from other parts of the channel, the government will eventually erect new immigration and quarantine stations.

Cabrillo Beach, near Point Fermin, is now complete as far as the filling in of sand is concerned. Dredges operating under government contract have been deepening the main channel from thirty to thirty-five feet and depositing the sand upon the site of the beach. Now that the fill has been completed, and with nearly a million more cubic yards of earth to be taken from the bottom of the channel, the long silt pipes have been shifted to the site of the proposed reclamation area which Deadman's Island will help to make.

San Pedro's new $600,000 city hall building is in process of construction. It will house branch departments of the city government in the Los Angeles Harbor district. The building has been designed and is being erected under the direction of Charles O. Brittain, Los Angeles City's superintendent of construction and a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W.

Seven stories will be included in the structure, which will occupy the site of the old San Pedro city hall, erected in 1907, two years prior to the annexation of San Pedro and Wilmington by Los Angeles. At least two floors will be occupied by the harbor department, while the main floor space will be largely taken up by police and fire department forces. Courtrooms, an emergency hospital, inspectors' offices and the city health department will fill the rest of the available floor space.

'49 STUNT AMUSES NATIVE SONS.

There was a large attendance at the August 11 meeting of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. to witness the initiation of several candidates. Los Angeles No. 45 and Ramona No. 109 were represented by large delegations. Speakers of the evening included Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell, President Julius Leuschner of Los Angeles and Past President Dwight Crittenden of Ramona. Clyde Foote, Jeff Jamar and Robert Wayne put the candidates through Sepulveda's "49 side degree," to the amusement of the assemblage. A splendid repast, prepared and served by some of the members of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W., was enjoyed.

Sepulveda's officers, headed by President Willard Buchanan, officiated at the initiation of a class of candidates for Long Beach No. 239 August 17, and September 23 they will conduct the initiatory ceremonies for Ramona No. 109. Three members of the Parlor, recently returned from long trips, have delighted the membership of Sepulveda with interesting accounts of their travels. James W. Mee, who attended the Lions' national convention in Florida, and J. C. Swinford and L. S. Anderson, who were delegates to the Rotary convention at Ostend, Belgium. Past President "Bill" Reuter has been hobbling around with a broken foot. James V. Carroll, the genial former recording secretary of the Parlor and general agent in the harbor district for the Union Pacific, has been transferred to the Riverside division as general agent.

LANDMARK WILL BE MARKED.

August 14 was past presidents' night at Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W., Hazel Boston presiding and being assisted by the following, in the various stations: Katie Ross, Carrie Lenhouse, Lottie Sandstrom, Margaret Dever, Rudecinda Dodson and Charlotte Bennett. Jean McKelvey favored with songs and dances, and refreshments were served by the following committee: Letitia Sarciaux, Lydia Boreham, Carrie Rogers and Josephine Cappelle. D.D.G.P. Kathryn Ronan was a visitor August 4.

September 15 Rudecinda will feature a pioneer night under the supervision of the history and landmarks committee—Margaret Kaveney, Lottie Sandstrom and Modesto Contos. The public will be welcome. Grand President Mae Himes Noonan will officially visit the Parlor September 23 and during her sojourn in the southland Rudecinda, in her honor, will mark historic Drum Barracks, in Wilmington, with a bronze plaque.

CEMENT FENCE POSTS.

Cement for fence posts should receive more attention from farmers. Costing perhaps more initially, the longer life and the freedom from trouble more than compensate for the greater first cost. A good concrete post costs around 50 or 60 cents. It should have four quarter-inch square steel bars for reinforcement, and these should be covered with at least three-fourths of a ninch of concrete. A square or round post will be found best; and the mixture should be dense, in the proportion of about one part cement, two parts sand and three of fine gravel. The molds should be good, and metal is better, although a carefully made wood form will do. Such posts should last a century, if carefully made.

SKIRTS RETAIN THEIR BREVITY

IN SELECTING YOUR WARDROBE FOR the first autumn days, give careful consideration to a problem that is sure to arise at this time of the year. One is just a bit tired of the sports clothes that have been worn all summer and needs things that are a little warmer for a welcomed change. Many women believe gray to be unbecoming or difficult to wear, but gray exists in so many shades that when exactly the right shade is chosen a gray ensemble can be the epitome of distinction and chic. Two shades of the same color are always smart. Seal brown zibeline broadcloth, with a long shawl collar of broadtail to match, makes a smart coat.

Perhaps the most important item in any woman's wardrobe is the black afternoon frock. Velvet and crepe-de-chine are always a smart combination for autumn. Two of the important fabrics for a combination frock are a collarless jersey blouse and a printed velvet skirt.

There are three different lengths for autumn coats,—full length, three-quarter length and the sleeve length of the tailored coat.

The popular furs of the new season will include skunk, caracal, nutria, badger and fox. Fox is newest in the blue and cross variety and especially smart with shades of brown.

The different uses of fur determine the coat silhouette. The collar that is away from the face, the off-the-shoulder capelette band between the elbow and the shoulder, and the fur band that continues in a diagonal line down the full length of the coat are still notes of fashion.

Pile woolens, but without a high pile, velveteen and some broadcloth fashion many of the smartest coats. Angora wool jersey is the outstanding new fabric of the season for suits and blouses.

The angora jersey blouse, the novelty jersey blouse and the hand-knitted blouse have supplanted the crepe-de-chine blouse in chic. The velveteen suit, with a box coat and an angora jersey blouse, is importantly new.

Velvets printed with small designs, especially polkadots and broken dot patterns that follow the youthful feeling of the printed crepes of summer, are very important for afternoon. Colors for daytime dresses are the same as those for coats.

The new georgette velvet is by far the most important of evening fabrics. It is a transparent weave almost as light as crepe. This velvet is delightful when used by itself. The black velvet gown bids fair to outrival all others.

Evening gowns are, first, all white and all black, but there are many new blue shades that are intense, yet soft, and also some nile-greens. Mauve raspberry is an innovation among evening colors.

Skirts, in general, retain their brevity, with no change from the length of last year, except the down-in-the-back movement and the transparent length.

Waist lines indicate no change from those of last season.

At the present writing, hosiery continues to accent the series of light and beige shades, featuring the colored heels in pastel shades, also subdued colorings in diamond patterns and conservative designs. The latter weaves appear in repeated lines for fall and are consistently mentioned in the appropriate weights usually developed for this season of the year.

Silk and wool hose, rayon and wool hose, in the mixture types, flat cashmere and underhose of lightweight french angora are referred to as the favored hosiery mediums for the coming season. Outstanding style features are clox, appearing upon all types and in all forms.

The introduction of embroidered designs upon narrow stripes in fishnet weaves and fine imported hosiery which were worn with summer frocks for dinner and dance wear, support the opinion that this weave may attract attention for fall wear.

The colored heel hosiery, in the estimation of one factor, is likely to continue where the intention to suggest an illusion of sheerness is desired. Delicate pastel shades are shown for evening wear and somewhat darker tones for daytime.

Practically all new fall accessories, such as handbags, footwear and belts, are developed along contrasting lines, attained sometimes by color blending. The highly successful results are obtained by reproducing reptile markings. The bolder markings, which have been so much favored during the summer season, are formed principally in cobra and python.

Summer, which always gives a free rein to fads and fancies, must give way to autumn, more rigid always in its demands for careful costuming, thus costume jewelry of lighter moods must vanish, and in its place appears jewelry of extremely decorative character to brighten up more sombre colors.

Semi-precious stones are used lavishly for colorful notes. Pearls remain the aristocrat of costume jewelry. For formal wear, a string of pearls and rhinestones is new.

Evening bags favor the elaborate types achieved through delicate color and fabric blending.

The snug "hipline" is everything. We no longer have older women; there are larger women, perhaps, but all efforts are bent on creating youthful effects. This youthful note is reflected in terms of simplicity.

The large, open neckline is another feature. It makes a frame for the face and does not interfere with the wearing of jewels. Frocks must be designed with this in mind. If a frock is embroidered, the decoration should be placed below the bustline, and for dinner wear the frock should reveal nothing above the table in the way of decoration.

Jewels should have no competition. General utility clothes must be modishly simple.

The snug hipline is everything in the modern style picture that expresses youth and another highlight to be kept in mind.

Fabrics for school clothes are correct only when they are suitable and serviceable. Wool crepe passes these tests and takes its place in the higher grades of the junior mode.

Jersey is another fabric that has a high standing at school and does well in the classroom, but is an especial favorite of youthful outdoor life.

One of the smartest junior coats to go to school in is of navy blue homespun, which also makes a feature of a velvet collar and cuffs and is fastened with a narrow buckled belt.

The combination of red and gray makes a smart school dress.

Fur is of prime importance as trimming for coats.

BLIND COMPOSER APPRECIATES NATIVE DAUGHTERS' ASSISTANCE.

At the Modesto Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West last June, A. Edward Buckingham, a blind composer, was given permission to present his song, "Queen of the West," and many copies were disposed of. The following letter from the composer has been received at the office of Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler:

"I wish to express the great and everlasting appreciation that I feel for your wonderful kindness to me in affording me the opportunity of presenting my song, 'Queen of the West,' at the recent convention of the Native Daughters of California.

"I would deeply appreciate it if there was any way in which I could through you thank all of the delegates for their wonderful reception and kindly applause of my poor efforts to please them, for they surely gave me a fine sendoff and I am hoping that it will prove the forerunner of my success with this song.

"Although I am on a hard trail, it is such kindness as that given me in Modesto that brings a great deal of life's sunshine to me in the darkness and keeps me forever trying to make good with my songs. I am ever striving to write better ones, and such kindly encouragement puts in zest which I should otherwise lack.

"I mention this to show just how deeply such appreciation sinks into my heart, never to be forgotten, and I sincerely hope that my Heavenly Father will bless and prosper the Native Daughters just as He has our Golden State."

MERCERIZED COTTONS HAVE AN ABUNDANCE OF GOOD QUALITIES.

Will the sheen stay on mercerized cotton fabrics after they are laundered? Textile experts of the United States Department of Agriculture say it will, if the fabrics are really mercerized. True mercerization renders cotton fibers stronger and gives a gloss that will last as long as the fabric. Sometimes the cotton yarns are mercerized before weaving or the cloth itself may be given this treatment. In either case the result is the same. The cotton acquires a silky finish and yet is just as easy to wash and iron as plain cotton and wears even better.

Mercerized cottons are being woven into damask and towelings which look much like the linen fabrics. These mercerized cotton tablecloths, napkins and towels, however, do not have the smooth feel and ability to absorb moisture that makes linen one of the most highly prized textile fibers for such articles. Nevertheless, the mercerized cottons are just as good for many purposes and the lower cost makes them attractive. For summer dress goods, coolness and easy laundering qualities of mercerized cottons make them difficult to equal.

VANDALS ARE DESECRATING KIT CARSON MONUMENT.

People interested in the preservation of the California landmarks are incensed over the desecration of the Kit Carson monument, located at the highest point in the Sierras, at an elevation of 8,600 feet. Tourists and campers who stop to view the monument have scratched the face of the bronze plaque by striking matches upon it.

This monument was erected a few years ago by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, and was dedicated to the memory of the famous Kit Carson with impressive ceremonies. The plaque, imbedded in a granite boulder, gives a facsimile of the carving upon the tree and marks the spot where Kit Carson blazed the trail for John C. Fremont.—Amador Ledger.

SANTA BARBARA—JUST AT THE CLOSE of the day July 26 members of Reina del Mar No. 126, with the newly appointed district deputy, Jane Vick, as guest of honor, gathered in the picturesque garden of the Old Historic Adobes, as guests of Anna E. McCaughey. Small tables were set in the patio, where a typical California supper was served, while old Spanish airs were played upon violin and guitar by the Calderon brothers. Many of the members wore Spanish shawls, adding to the beauty of the setting. After supper Miss McCaughey spoke a few words and bestowed upon the new district deputy the insignia of her office.

President Florence Belt announced that the history committee of the Native Sons and Native Daughters would hold open house at the studio of Miss Elizabeth Mason August 6, in order that members might learn more of the work being done by Miss Mason, who has obtained many facts of the early history of Santa Barbara and is now constructing clay models of the early inhabitants and the lay of their lands. President Belt also announced that the Parlor had been awarded a special prize and a thirty-five-dollar check for its entry in the Fourth of July parade. Reina del Mar's entry was six open automobiles, decorated with asparagus ferns and crepe-paper poppies, made by the members. The past presidents and presiding officers who rode in the cars were dressed in white and carried parasols covered with four large crepe-paper petals to represent the state flower.

Anna McCaughey was presented with an old-fashioned bracelet by President Belt, on behalf of the Parlor. Mamie Harrison and Evelyn Eby, delegates to the Modesto Grand Parlor, gave their report and an account of their doings as a dialogue; their announcer, Edna Sharpe, stated the time and place of each scene. While the tables were being rearranged from patio to within the Old Historic Adobe antique shop, Hortense Maguire favored with several English-California songs, after which some played bridge and others five hundred, and not a few stayed near the musicmakers to enjoy the old-time dances. Everyone had a good time, for Anna McCaughey knows how to do things properly.

Listen In.

San Jose—The Santa Clara County Admission Day Committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Clara A. Gairaud of Vendome No. 100, will broadcast a program the evening of September 5 from 9 to 10 o'clock from station KQW (San Jose). Judge Charles A. Thompson, Grand President N.S.G.W., and in all probability Mae Himes Noonan, Grand President N.D.G.W., will be heard in five-minute talks.

The eight Parlors of Native Daughters and Native Sons in Santa Clara County will contribute the musical numbers, and the Bird Seed Warblers, Vendome's glee club and soloists, will also be heard. All Natives and their friends are asked to listen in.

Assisting Mrs. Gairaud in arranging for the publicity are: Anna Farnsworth (Vendome 100), Mary Frances Mitchell (San Jose 81), Louise Berryessa (San Jose 81), Wayne Chandler (San Jose 22), R. R. Hamilton (Observatory 177), Virginia Rue (El Monte 209), R. Pearson (Mountain View 215), and representatives of the Palo Alto Parlors.

Reception for Grand Secretary.

Oakland—Aloha No. 106, their home-Parlor, tendered a reception to Grand Secretary Sallie Rutherford-Thaler and Assistant Grand Secretary Dorothy Derrick. A delightful program was presented, Past President Irene Printzlow officiating as toastmistress, and many talented members of the Parlor participating. Vendome No. 100's "Bird Seed Warblers" journeyed from San Jose to assist in the evening's festivities, and charmed with several spirited songs, one of which was written especially for "Sallie." Beautiful tokens were presented Mrs. Thaler and Miss Derrick.

A delicious repast followed the reception, and there were addresses by Past Grand Presidents Addie L. Mosher and Sue J. Irwin, Supervising Deputy Gertrude Morrison, District Deputies Mildred Brant, Clara Gairaud and Augusta Huxsol, Grand Secretary Thaler and Assistant Grand Secretary Derrick. Visitors were present from San Francisco, San Jose, Berkeley and Grass Valley.

Morada, in conjunction with Modesto No. 11 N.S.G.W., will have a float in the Santa Cruz Admission Day parade. About forty members will participate. The Parlor has received many letters of congratulation for the efficient manner in which it cared for and entertained the Grand Parlor.

Surprise Shower for Organist.

Hollister—Anne Smith and Irene Kelly, charter members of Copo de Oro No. 105, were honored guests at a pleasing evening July 28. As they were about to leave for an extended Alaskan tour they were recipients of dainty memorandum and address books, accompanied by messages from each of the members present, these to be opened and read on the days designated upon the envelopes. The honored guests were seated at a table appropriately decorated, the centerpiece being a fully-rigged boat, "The Anne-Irene." Whist followed the serving of appetizing refreshments.

Organist Harriet Hooton, past president of the Parlor, was the motif of a happy surprise shower at her home August 2, arranged by the officers and past presidents. Answering an alarm at the door she found upon the doorstep a dainty pink basket filled with a varied assortment of toilet articles. A twine wound about trees and through shrubbery finally led to one of the cars parked in the driveway, wherein was found an electric cooker. Past President Josephine Winn was the winner of the high score at bridge. Sandwiches, coffee and cake were served by the unexpected guests.

Grand President Visits.

Sutter Creek—At a joint meeting held here July 27 Grand President Mae Himes Noonan paid an official visit to Amapola No. 80 (Sutter Creek), Forrest No. 86 (Plymouth) and California No. 161 (Amador City). The ritual was exemplified in a very creditable manner by a picked team from the three Parlors, with Gladys Noce of No. 80 presiding.

Grand President Noonan gave an inspiring address and installed the officers of Amapola, Solena Maire becoming president. On the Parlor's behalf Mrs. Noonan was presented with a lunch-

(FRANK M. LANE,
Grand Trustee N.S.G.W.)

FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS FRESNO Parlor No. 25 N.S.G.W. and Fresno Parlor No. 187 N.D.G.W. remitted as their contribution to the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Committee on Homeless Children sums ranging from $65 to $435. The average for eleven years was $143 a year, a sum of money, for such a purpose, inconsistent with the size, population and material wealth of Fresno and its environs. In 1921 the Fresno Parlors, desiring to make a contribution more in keeping with the situation, set about to devise some means by which more money could be raised.

After several methods of raising funds had been submitted, it was decided a "Poppy Day," a day devoted to selling the state flower, would be the best. There being no certainty as to the exact time when the wild poppies would be in bloom, it was obvious that paper flowers would have to be made. Material was procured, a typical flower or pattern was designed, and the pupils of the art department of the Washington junior high school in Fresno, under the guidance of Miss Eda Kusch, cut out and made 10,000 poppies.

A time being set for holding "Poppy Day," permission for selling the flowers upon the streets was obtained, publicity was given in the local papers, the schoolgirls volunteered and went upon the streets and realized $890 from the sale of the poppies. Subscriptions, a dance and other activities brought the amount sent to the central committee to $1,627.37. The members of the two Parlors were much elated over the success of this first "Poppy Day," and have held one each year since.

For several years E. M. Russell of Fresno No. 25 N.S.G.W. was chairman of the local homeless children committee. He improved very much the system of manufacturing the poppies. The selling of the paper flowers upon the streets has been done by the schoolgirls from the grammar and high schools, the chairman of the committee having arranged with the city superintendent of schools to have the girls' assistance in disposing of the poppies. The putting together and completion of the poppies has always been done by members of Fresno No. 187 N.D.G.W. The Native Daughters have also taken charge of the girls on "Poppy Day," directing and advising them.

During the year 1927, L. N. Barber of Fresno No. 25 N.S.G.W. was chairman of the local homeless children committee. The same methods of making and disposing of the flowers in vogue in the past were not only made use of by his committee, but were still further improved. So now the Fresno Parlors have developed a good system of manufacturing, advertising and disposing of the state flower for a "Poppy Day" sale.

Under the direction of the chairman for this year splendid publicity was given to "Poppy Day," its aim and purposes. Many well written articles bearing on the question were printed in the two daily papers, pictures of little orphans were run in the several theatres in Fresno, representatives from Fresno No. 25 N.S.G.W. appeared before nine luncheon clubs, one women's club and the Executive Council of Federated Churches, and gave talks on what the Native Sons and Native Daughters are doing for homeless children. Letters were addressed to the ministers of the various churches, and talks were also made to the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist brotherhoods. To all these persons and organizations was given a general idea of the "homeless children work" of the state's patriotic Orders, the number of children taken care of, that all homeless children are cared for, no matter what may be the nativity of the parents or their own nativity, so long as they are within the confines of California, the method of selecting future homes and observing the treatment of the children in the new homes, the treatment of the religious phase, and the further fact that all moneys raised by the "Poppy Day" sale, except for necessary materials and incidentals, go to the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Committee on Homeless Children.

The first eleven years that the Fresno Parlors contributed to the homeless children fund from 1910 to 1920, inclusive, before "Poppy Day" was held—$1,573.65 was sent in. For the seven years from 1921 to 1927, inclusive,—the years in which a "Poppy Day" sale was held—$4,709.37 was contributed to the fund. Taking the average amount raised per year, it will be readily seen that the miscellaneous methods used the first eleven years yielded $143 per year, whereas the average for the years when the poppy sales were made the principal method of raising funds was $672 a year—a convincing argument.

There are other reasons, however, for holding "Poppy Day." The children who are assisting in the work, and their friends, become imbued with the idea of charity. The great need of this work for helpless children is made known to everyone. It gives an opportunity of correctly placing before the people of a community the unselfish efforts of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West — that their aims and aspirations are for the future moral and material betterment of the State of California.

Sonoma No. 209 sent a beautiful floral offering with congratulations.

The program included the history of the Parlor, read by President T. Hein, several songs, and a skit by four of the charter members—Boggs, Stockman, Levinson and Jackson—which made a big hit. The banquet table was adorned with flowers and two birthday cakes. Speeches were made by the visitors and two of Eschol's brides were presented with gifts.

"Mysterious Bag."

Pescadero—Ano Nuevo No. 180's officers were installed July 29 by D.D.G.P. Harriet Nelson, Mildred Granger becoming president. Among the visitors were Past Grand President Margaret Grote-Hill, Supervising Deputy Anna Thuesen and D.D.G.P. Ida Mesquite, who were presented with flowers.

Delightful "eats" were served, and just before the assemblage broke up Supervising Deputy Thuesen was presented with a "mysterious bag."

Native Sons of the Golden West

SANTA ROSA—APPROXIMATELY 200 Native Sons gathered in Native Sons' Hall July 23 to witness the initiation of a class of candidates for the Sonoma County Parlors. The ritual was splendidly exemplified by the officers of Twin Peaks No. 214 (San Francisco). Among those who witnessed the ceremonies were the following grand officers: Grand President Charles A. Thompson, Grand First Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Second Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Richard M. Hamb, Frank I. Gonzalez, Emmet Seawell, J. Hartley Russell, Frank M. Lane and Harmon Skillin.

Grand Trustee Seawell presided as toastmaster at the banquet which concluded the ceremonies, and there were addresses by Grand President Thompson, Irving Shepard (Glen Ellen No. 102), J. F. Prestwood (Sonoma No. 111), William S. Borba (Sebastopol No. 143) and John Murphy (Petaluma No. 27).

The following day a crowd of 400, including the grand officers, gathered at Bates Grove, near the Bear Flag City, where the fortieth anniversary of Sonoma No. 111 was celebrated at a delightful affair, including an old-time barbecue. J. F. Prestwood, trustee of the Parlor, was chairman of the day and introduced four of the remaining charter members, Fred T. Duhring, Julius Poppe, Granville Harris and Louis H. Green; Duhring related the Parlor's history. Grand President Thompson told of the splendid accomplishments of the Order of Native Sons. Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington, in reviewing the history of California, stirred his hearers to greater reverence for the state of their birth.

As a fitting end to a perfect day, Chairman Prestwood, on behalf of Sonoma, presented to Louis H. Green, for thirty years the faithful and efficient secretary of No. 111, a beautiful gold watch with this inscription: "Presented to our worthy brother, L. H. Green, by Sonoma Parlor No. 111 N.S.G.W., July 24, 1927, for thirty years of faithful service." The gift was a complete surprise to the recipient, who was so overcome with emotion that it was difficult for him to express thanks.

San Diego Active.

San Diego—San Diego No. 108 will stage a masked ball at Mission Beach September 9 in recognition of Admission Day. John Howley, Joseph Switzer, Paul McHorney and Harold Stromberg compose the arrangements committee. A pioneer parade is also in prospect, and other plans are being worked out which will forcibly call to the attention of the people of this city California's natal day.

The Cabrillo monument is engaging the Parlor's attention and plans have been worked out for a monthly entertainment, the proceeds of which will go to the fund. A theater party was featured during July and a moonlight boat ride August 11. The committee believes its plans will win such support that the monument proposal may be carried to a successful conclusion.

The San Diego City Council recently entertained a proposal to lease city-owned lands to Japs for the purpose of raising vegetables. San Diego Parlor strenuously opposed this and, with the aid of Councilmen Dowell, Seifert and Maire, had the proposal withdrawn. In the course of a letter, the Parlor said:

"Our attention has been called to the matter of the application made for the leasing of the city pueblo lands for truck gardening, which we are informed is to be used and subleased by Japanese.

"We desire to call your attention to the fact that the laws of California do not permit the Japanese to own, lease or control any land in this state, and it is with the utmost sincerity that we appeal to you to use your efforts to stop the authorization of city lands being used by the Japanese. We feel that should one lease be made, others will follow and soon we will have a Japanese colony that is, in its existence, a violation of the intent of the law."

Proper Spirit Will Bring Success.

San Rafael—A big delegation from Mount Tamalpais No. 64 paid a fraternal visit August 10 to South San Francisco No. 157. On behalf of Phil Herold, Grand First Vice-president James A. Wilson presented a set of beautiful silk flags to No. 157. Herold said he had noticed the need of them; he promised to carry one of the flags in the Santa Cruz Admission Day parade and in future parades so long as his health will permit.

Among the visitors was Newman Cohn, membership director for No. 64, who was given an ovation. He addressed the assemblage briefly relative to their duties both to the Order as a whole and their Subordinate Parlors.

Grand Secretary John T. Regan, who is also the recording secretary of South Parlor, presided at the festivities that followed the meeting. Charles T. Redding, treasurer of Marin County, made a splendid address on bridging San Francisco Bay and urged all San Franciscans to get behind the movement; he predicted success, if the proper spirit is maintained. Other speakers were D.D.G.P. Lester R. Knutte, Monroe Label, Dr. Squires and Walter E. Grady. Vocal and instrumental selections were rendered by members of South San Francisco.

History Related.

Merced—The official visit August 8 of Grand Trustee Frank M. Lane to Yosemite No. 24 was the occasion for an exceptionally large attendance, including visitors from Fresno and Modesto. At the close of the meeting, which was addressed by Grand Trustee Lane, an entertainment program and refreshments were provided by the following committee: President L. J. Schroeder, Thomas V. Bell, D. K. Stoddard, Manuel Davilla, James Gleeson, Byron Hart.

While here, Grand Trustee Lane was the local Native Sons' and Daughters' guest at the Chamber of Commerce forum lunch, and gave an interesting recital of historic incidents relating to the adventures and trials of California's first White settlers. The occasion was featured by special entertainment arranged by Veritas No. 75 N.D.G.W.

Whiskerino Ball.

Arcata—In observance of Admission Day, Arcata No. 20 is arranging for a whiskerino costume ball September 10. Costumes of the gold-rush days will be featured, and a prize will be awarded for the best crop of whiskers.

Bowling Tourney Winners.

San Francisco—The recent state-wide telegraphic bowling tournament participated in by Subordinate Parlors was won by Quartz No. 58 of Grass Valley, whose score was 2,837. Team No. 1 of Piedmont No. 120 (Oakland) got second place and Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) third, their respective scores being 2,633 and 2,585. The winning team was awarded a trophy.

Other leading teams, and their scores, were: Castro No. 232 (San Francisco) 2,534, Fruitvale No. 252 (Oakland) 2,520, Twin Peaks No. 214 (San Francisco) 2,437, National No. 118 (San Francisco) 2,431, San Jose No. 22 (San Jose) 2,359, team No. 2 of Piedmont No. 120 (Oakland) 2,338, Stockton No. 7 (Stockton) 2,259.

Fresno May Get 1928 Grand Parlor.

Fresno—Fresno No. 25 has had an active summer season. September 2 a large class of candidates will be initiated, to be followed by a dove banquet. Pioneers of Fresno County will address the gathering.

If the desires of the Board of Grand Officers are carried out, the 1928 Grand Parlor session will be held in this city. The proposal is now being looked into by No. 25 and its neighbor, Selma No. 107.

Grand Officers Pay Surprise Visit.

Palo Alto—Grand President Charles A. Thompson, Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell, Past Grand President Louis H. Mooser and John S. Ramsay paid a surprise visit July 26 to Palo Alto No. 216. They praised the Parlor for its foresight in purchasing its own lodge building, now valued at $150,000.

But this is not the only project which indicates the Parlor's foresightedness. It has also been instrumental in the purchase of 121 acres of choice timber land in the Santa Cruz Mountains, for a playground open to all Native Sons.

These undertakings are making of No. 216 the outstanding fraternal organization in this community.

History Pictures to Adorn Home.

Saint Helena—Saint Helena No. 53 has appointed a committee composed of Walter Metzner, Thomas Street and Louis D. Vasconi to select suitable pictures of California history to decorate the walls of its home.

Barbecue for Grand Officers.

San Jose—In honor of Grand President Charles A. Thompson and Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Observatory No. 177 had a barbecue at the Salvatore Bernal ranch August 14. The day's feature was a baseball game between teams picked by Grant O'Neil and Arthur Navlet, the latter's aggregation winning by a 11-to-10 score. Horseshoe contests and swimming races were also on the program of events.

The committee in charge of the outing included James F. Cook (chairman), R. K. O'Neill, A. Forni, W. C. Kady and James Porteus.

PROMINENT NATIVE SON NOW ASSOCIATED WITH SAN DIEGO BANK.

Albert V. He is an active member of San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W., and greatly interested in protecting and developing the natural resources of California.

Mayrhofer, but 38 years of age, has for a long time been prominent in the civic, fraternal and political life of San Diego. No one has taken a more active interest in the development of San Diego County's water resources than he. He has "made good" in whatever he has undertaken, and has hosts of admiring friends throughout the state.

The quarters of the California Bank of San Diego are, incidentally, typical of California. Along with the Flag of the United States is prominently displayed the California State

DEFINITE CONSERVATION PROGRAM LAUNCHED BY CALIFORNIA.

Annually increasing pilgrimages of motorists to California's places of scenic or historic interest are largely responsible for the public demand for the launching by the state of a definite program of conservation of those attractions. With the approval by Governor C. C. Young of three bills passed by the last State Legislature, a program of state park development, which will return good dividends, has been provided for.

One measure places existing state parks under a commission empowered to preserve, protect and administer them. Another permits of a survey to determine what areas not now included in the state park system should be so included. A third will afford the voters of the state the opportunity in November 1928 of determining whether California should carry out a $12,000,000 program for the preservation of its outstanding scenic and recreational areas, through the voting of a $6,000,000 bond issue to be matched with an equal amount raised by subscription.

Next to its fertile soil, California's greatest single asset is the opportunity the state offers for outdoor life. Excepting only agriculture, no industry puts as much money into circulation as do the hundreds of thousands of visitors who come here seeking after health, recreation, sport and out-of-door life generally. Californians have come to realize that preservation of present recreational areas and historic monuments, and the acquisition from private ownership of others, is sound business.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

SAN FRANCISCO
THE CITY THE WORLD LOVES

Benning P. Cook

(PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, SAN FRANCISCO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

SAN FRANCISCO HAS BEEN CALLED BY many endearing names, and it is with pride that the City by the Golden Gate lives up to each title. Since the days of '49 San Francisco has been recognized as one of the most important of the world's ports. Centrally located on the Pacific Coast, resting on the Pacific Ocean on the west and the Bay of San Francisco—the largest land-locked harbor in the world—on the north and east, the city is the gateway to the Orient and the Antipodes. It is through the Golden Gate that the greatest volume of goods to and from the Orient and the South Seas pass.

Strangers will find a climate free from extreme heat, in San Francisco, though with an abundance of sunshine and the air most invigorating. Light wraps and coats are comfortable during the evenings. San Francisco's climate is said by world-travelers to be the richest, both from a healthful and an industrial point of view. There are no extremes, and it is always cool enough for man and woman to turn out more work than is possible anywhere else; and, incidentally, men, women and children can enjoy outdoor exercise with less fatigue than is possible where climatic extremes are experienced.

With ships flying under a hundred flags making this a regular calling port, and with five railroads operating north, south, southwest, east and northeast, San Francisco is the transportation center of the Pacific. In addition, there are boatlines reaching into the interior of California—into valleys which in richness are surpassed nowhere on the globe.

San Francisco attracts the buyer, the retailer and the wholesaler, whereas manufacturers are steadily increasing in numbers and importance. In January of this year San Francisco's population was estimated at the conservative figure of 733,000, while within a few miles are numerous cities containing an aggregate of 700,000 people.

San Francisco is the fifth port in the United States in value of its foreign trade—$397,214,000 in 1926. If we include the Hawaiian trade of San Francisco with its foreign trade, the total value for 1926 will be $548,214,000 and volume 4,199,570 tons. As compared with the figures for 1925, the value of the total foreign trade of San Francisco expanded from $379,808,000 to $397,214,000, an increase of $17,406,000. Imports increased $13,552,000 and exports increased $3,733,000.

In bank clearings, San Francisco led every city west of Chicago, also in bank deposits, stock and bond sales and insurance business. It is the headquarters of the Twelfth Federal Reserve District, and has the highest percapita wealth of any large city in the United States.

And, San Francisco is romantic. Far back in 1775 the ship "San Carlos," commanded by Don Juan Manuel Ayala, came through the Golden Gate into the San Francisco Bay. This, to best knowledge, opened up the gate to world travelers for the first time. Previous to that, however, Sir Francis Drake, the English explorer, came near locating the bay, but failed by a few miles, his ship, the "Golden Hind," landing in Drake's Bay, just north of the Golden Gate, in 1579. Sir Drake's chaplain, however, had the honor of holding the first religious service in the English language on this continent. San Francisco Bay was discovered from land. In 1769 Don Gaspar de Portola's men glimpsed the shining body of water from nearby hills.

San Francisco might easily be called the "City of Parks," for there are no less than forty-two, with new ones being constantly added. In addition to the municipal parks, the Federal Government controls extensive reservations which are thrown open to the public. The largest man-made park in the world—the Golden Gate Park—is worth a trip around the world to see. Here man has created mountains, waterfalls and lakes, to say nothing of wondrous forests, flower gardens and stately buildings—all of which add to the beauty of the 1,013 acres of playgrounds within its borders.

The Presidio—the San Francisco headquarters of the United States Army—comprises more than 1,500 acres. The old Spanish red-brick fort still stands, while the old adobe house of Don Jose Arguello, who commanded the Spanish troops stationed there in 1806, is in a state of good preservation.

San Francisco boasts of one of the best preserved missions of the days of the padres. This is Mission de los Dolores, founded by Father Junipero Serra in 1776, and located in the heart of the city.

Golf courses abound. They are easily reached from all down-town hotels. Hotels, restaurants,

San Francisco's public-school system is one of the city's greatest assets. The total value of buildings and grounds is about $25,000,000. There are 98,000 pupils enrolled. In addition, there are numerous private schools.

In and near to San Francisco are some of the country's well-known institutions of learning, such as the University of Saint Ignatius, University of California at Berkeley, Saint Mary's University in Oakland, Mills College for Women in Oakland, Leland Stanford Junior University at Palo Alto, and the University of Santa Clara at Santa Clara. Any one of these institutions may be reached easily within an hour from San Francisco.

Churches have always played a prominent part in the history of the city since the founding of the Mission Dolores in 1776. Almost all denominations are represented in the church directory.

San Francisco's retail district is famous. The stores and establishments have competed and won over those of all other cities. San Francisco's establishments take pride in knowing that they follow none, but set the styles for all.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED FOR ADMISSION DAY'S CELEBRATION.

The San Francisco Joint Admission Day Celebration Committee of Native Sons and Native Daughters has completed arrangements for the city's participation as a unit in the Santa Cruz Admission Day parade. Heading this unit, which will make up several divisions, will be the San Francisco municipal band accompanied by details of local policemen and firemen. The Board of Supervisors will provide a float characteristic of San Francisco's industries.

The various Native Son Parlors have secured headquarters in Santa Cruz and will maintain "open house" during the festivities. Seventeen of them have combined and secured joint headquarters in the Casino dance pavilion, the largest available place in Santa Cruz.

The Native Daughters are actively participating in the celebration plans. All Parlors expect big turnouts and they will be escorted in the parade by the Native Sons.

Enthusiasm is increasing day by day, and as usual, the San Francisco Natives will make a creditable showing at Santa Cruz on Admission Day, September 9.

Officers of the joint committee are: Jesse H. Miller, chairman; Willard Spelman and May R. Barry, vice-chairmen; Harold J. Regan, secretary; Mrs. Troy, assistant secretary; Charles A. Koenig, treasurer; Virgil Orengo, sergeant-at-arms; Bertha Mauser, assistant sergeant-at-arms. The parade committee is composed of:

Harry W. Gaetjen (chairman), Fred Ehlers Jr., Thomas M. Foley, Herbert De La Rosa, George Batchelor, Eugene Herzog, John J. Barrett, Charles T. O'Kane, Maurice Borden, Casper Hare, Frank M. Buckley, H. T. Ritter, Louis F. Erb, Willard Spelman, D. D. Gibbons, David F.

NATIVES' HOME FINDING AGENCY RECEIVES GENEROUS DONATION.

C. W. Gibson of 386 Sixty-first street, Oakland, appreciating the splendid work of the Native Sons and Native Daughters in the placement of homeless children, sent in a check for one thousand dollars with a brief note saying he hoped it would "do some good." This gift with the several generous bequests which have come to the home-finding agency are an indication that its work is being appreciated and better understood each day. Acknowledgments were made to Gibson by Chairman Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel and Secretary Mary E. Brusie, the latter, among other things, writing:

"In accepting your generous donation we assure you that we have many avenues in which 'to do some good' and are reminded that your ideals and ours are so closely in harmony that 'competition' cannot exist between two child-placing organizations. I think, perhaps, that much as we need this one thousand dollars your appreciation of our work and the sending of your blessings for further usefulness mean quite as much."

GRAND PRESIDENT N.D. VISITS.

August 17 Mae Himes Noonan, Grand President N.D.G.W., paid her first official visit in San Francisco, Golden State Parlor No. 50 being the one accorded the honor and pleasure of entertaining her. The meeting hall, beautifully decorated with greens and flowers, was filled to overflowing with interested members who desired to greet the Order's head and to extend to her their encouragement and good wishes.

Among the visitors were Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustee Vida Vollers, Grand Organist Lillian Troy, Past Grand President Margaret Grote-Hill, Supervising Deputies May R. Barry and Gertrude Morrison, twenty-two district deputies and representatives of thirty Parlors. Two candidates were initiated and the Grand President commended the officers for their perfect rendition of the ritual. Tokens of silver were presented Mrs. Noonan, Miss Troy and D.D.G.P. Dorothea Thiele. Light refreshments were served at the meeting's close.

ACTIVE TERM OUTLINED.

Miss Stella Elizabeth Mackintosh, recently installed as president of Buena Vista Parlor No. 68 N.D.G.W., at the August 5 meeting outlined the term's program. She hopes to make it an unusually active one, socially as well as in the serious projects of the Order. Past President Laermann, whose marriage was recently announced, was given a reception and received a gift from the Parlor.

Vernon Holt and Ray Nolan entertained with vocal and piano numbers following the August 19 meeting. A theater party during August was very successful. A whist tournament will begin in September. There will be prizes for each party as well as for the series.

PUBLIC WHIST DRAWS.

An energetic committee, under the chairmanship of Past President Linda Gross, conducted a public whist party for Dolores No. 169 N.D.G.W. August 5. Through the members' co-operation thirty-eight tables of players comprised the party, and the forty prizes were donated by the members. A large embroidered centerpiece, made and donated by the mother of two of the members, was disposed of and an attractive sum realized. This proved to be a very successful party, both socially and financially, and thanks are due the committee and every member.

The Parlor has completed plans to participate in the Santa Cruz Admission Day parade. At-

FORMER N.D. GRAND SECRETARY PAYS "CITY" PARLOR A VISIT.

Laura J. Frakes-Toman, Past Grand Secretary of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, from Upper Lake, Lake County, sent the editor of The Grizzly Bear this message, dated August 17: "I am sending you a little article on account of my first visit to a city Parlor in fifteen years. . . . However, I'll spend my time fifty-fifty hereafter. . . . Continued success to you and your splendid work." The article follows:

"Recently it was our pleasure to be in San Francisco and while there we called up our old-time friend, Past Grand President May C. Boldemann, La Estrella Parlor No. 89. After the ohs and ahs had subsided and the usual friendly greetings were exchanged, she informed us that it was Parlor night, and invited us to go. a reading of Grand Parlor reports, social and official, and a birthday party, if you please.

"'Now, you will come, won't you, Laura J.? We'll call for you on our way to meeting. The girls will be so surprised and so delighted.' It was but a short while when, arm in arm, could be seen a trio of happy N.D.G.W. hastening along Mason street, toward that old familiar meeting place, Native Sons' Hall.

"Was it possible that fifteen years had passed since last we crossed its threshold? Ah, me, what changes had taken place since then! As we entered the lodge room, apparently a stranger, there was a hush for a moment, then all at once some one recognized us. 'O, there's Miss Frakes!'—and such a rush our way. We were fairly smothered with greetings, all wanting to be first. Of all the exclamations you ever heard —'She hasn't changed a bit!' 'Doesn't she look natural?' 'Isn't it good to see her here once more?' 'Just like old times,' etc.

"Then there were introductions—first one and then another bringing forward a younger generation who seemed to be most active for the Parlor's welfare. 'This is my daughter-in-law,' said one. Another, 'This is my daughter.' And we had to be told all about the 'darling' grandchildren—nothing like them, 'the sweetest' ever. Then there were others who, like myself, had changed their names not so very long ago and we had to congratulate ourselves and extend a few greetings. 'Tickled to death,' of course, and that's that.

"There was Dr. Lillie Boldemann, not a whit changed—as usual the life of the party. Surely time had dealt kindly with the doctor. Sister Alice was there, too, bubbling over with wit and humor. Sister Thierbach, one of the old guard, greeted us with a heartiness not to be misunderstood. 'And this is Sister Thierbach'—the laugh was on us, for she, too, had changed her name.

"May Regnier, who had been away for some time, had just returned and no one was more affectionately greeted than she. She reminded us of the many times she had acted as escort to Hotel Argonaut, after the late official visits. Dear little Birdie, the faithful secretary, whose minutes read like a story, was at her desk, prompt as usual. She, too, gave us an old-time welcome, as did so many of the sisters. To mention each one, individually, would be impossible, but this we will say, each and every one did her share toward building up this most harmonious Parlor and keeping it so.

"A glance at Sister Carley's picture, which hangs upon the wall above the president's chair, reminded us of the organization of this 'star' Parlor, for La Estrella means the star. We can hear her now, admonishing the members to be harmonious, to remember the teachings of the ritual and to live them. We believe they do. The harmony that existed then, still exists and, we believe, always will.

"Here we saw the new regalia for the first time. Very pretty, indeed, but we wonder if they convey to the members all that the original ones did—the red, the white, the gold. There is nothing that thrills a true Native Daughter like a well-equipped lodge room—banners, flags, regalia, everything pertaining to the ritual work —and then to listen to letter-perfect instruction and well-delivered charges. Yes, it makes us glad to be a N.D. of the G. W. and a member of this grand organization. We were happy to be there and glad to be a part of it all.

"The banquet in honor of all was one delightful affair. Many pretty speeches were made and gifts were presented to Sisters Boldemann and D.D.G.P. Alice Lane. It was a pleasure to note the high esteem in which these two faithful workers are held. Sister Boldemann's verbal account of Grand Parlor proceedings was most interesting and at times quite humorous. The reports of the delegates, too, were both instructive and enjoyable. The ritualistic work was above criticism, and for that D.D.G.P. Lane was given great credit, as well as the officers, who faithfully followed her instructions. With reluctance we parted from those sisters, wishing them every joy and continued prosperity and harmony."

TATE AUTO ASSOCIATION CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

The California State Automobile Association, vith headquarters in San Francisco, marked two ecades of service and accomplishments for morists of this state in the celebration of its wentieth birthday, August 17.

"Gasoline buggies" were still a new fad, rattling over unsigned, dust-deep, rutted roads when a few pioneer automobile owners gathered in a downtown San Francisco office August 17, 1907, to share a vision of organized motordom and found the State Automobile Association.

The transition of the individual "automobilist" of early days, struggling against the odds of prejudice and neglect that beset his path, to the status of a motor traveler-de-luxe whose every motoring demand is met by the service of organized motordom is marked by the past two decades, according to Burton A. Towne, president of the association.

"Reviewing the twenty years of the association's service, protection and savings to California motorists," said Towne, "one can read the romantic story of good roads development in California and the meteoric rise of the automobile in this state.

"California is truly a state on wheels, leading the world in the individual use of motor vehicle transportation, pioneer of the paved highway and possessor of a most splendid highway system and a natural wealth of resources and scenic grandeur that make this state the motoring paradise of the nation.

"Twenty years of continuous endeavor by the association for the California motorist attains a peak of perfection on this anniversary in complete motoring service that brings a maximum of motoring enjoyment. Twenty years of accomplishment in improvement of motoring conditions finds organized motordom still 'at the wheel,' headed along a route that opens to new vistas of prosperity and new goals of achievement."

A BIT O' FARMING

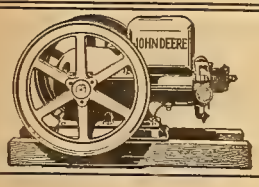
PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

CALIFORNIA FRUITSHIPPERS WIN VICTORY

FRESH FRUIT SHIPPERS OF CALIFORnia have at last won their battle, or part of it, at least, for the reduction of freight rates from this state to Eastern markets. The reductions are not as great as had been asked, nor do they go into effect until October, when most of this year's crop will have been moved. But they have been granted, and recognition has been granted the claims of the California growers.

It has been a long fight, and a hard one. The railroads raised prices when all commodities went up during and following the war. But when farm produce declined in value, the rates were left at peak prices, and there they stayed despite all the efforts of the shippers to dislodge them. The Interstate Commerce Commission for years could not see the case from the point of view of the fruit producers, and it was considered by many almost a lost hope. Still fighting, the growers brought up their arguments again this year, and won.

The order means savings of millions of dollars to growers in this state, but it does not mean that these growers will abandon their fight for still lower rates, until the roads charge tariff proportionate with the value of the farmer's dollar.



Another victory won over the railroads that means much to the farmers is that of the reduction of refrigeration charges in intrastate shipping. The first of September brought into effect an order of the Railroad Commission whereby charges were reduced from a maximum of $50 a ton to a new maximum of $21. California shippers now will enjoy lower rates than those charged for refrigeration services in any of the neighboring states.

SELF FEEDER FOR HOGS.

Let the hog feed himself. Hand feeding and hand watering of swine long ago was discarded in the corn belt of the Middle West, but here in California the idea has not taken hold as well. It has been felt that the hog would make a hog of himself, that he would eat more and cost more per pound of pork than if hand fed.

However, it has been proved by agricultural experiment stations of the Middle West, notably at Iowa and Nebraska, that the hog cafeteria not only saves labor but puts the pork industry on a more solid financial basis. Hand feeding and hand watering in one recent experiment were found to decrease the rate of daily gain by two-tenths of a pound per pig per day, and decreased the profit per pig by 31 cents. This does not include the cost of the labor in hand feeding. Let the pig eat when he feels like it.

BUILD BULL PENS RIGHT.

It is not at all an uncommon occcurrence to read of some dairyman, workman, or a member of a family being injured by a bull. The bull should be housed in a pen so constructed that it will not be able to reach any person at any time. The pen should be about twelve feet square, with a feed alley at one end and a breeding rack at the other. A yard of about a quarter-acre should be provided for exercise. The gates should be operated by ropes, so that even when the bull is to be put in service, it will not be necessary to get near it, or in the same enclosure. Plans for such a pen may be secured from the United States Department of Agriculture, and no dairyman can feel secure that he has a "good bull." All bulls are good until they become bad, and the turn may come without warning, and at any time.

CULL THE FLOCK NOW.

Don't let the boarder hens get by the fall and into the winter. Cull them out. Hens that have yellow legs and bills have not had to put any color into eggs, and they haven't put any profits into production. Keep the hens that are white in the shanks and bill, that have their tail feathers worn away by frequent sitting on the nest, that eat heartily and exercise well. Weed out the over-fat and over-thin ones, and don't keep a sick hen in the flock at all. Trapnesting is the only sure method, but there is not a flock in the state that can't speed up production and profits by intelligent sifting out of the ne'er-do-wells.

ELECTRICITY ON FARMS.

One-fifth of the electricity used in agriculture in the United States is furnished to farmers of California. Some 62,000 farms in this state use electricity for power, more than any other two states can show. This represents 45.4 percent of all the farms in the state, and gives a pretty fair idea of why California is looked up to as a leader among the agricultural producing states of the nation.

PERMANENT COVER CROPS.

There has lately been much discussion of permanent cover crops for orchards. The merits of the case are on the surface and there is really little room for argument. If water is plentiful, and cheap, the cover crop is excellent. So, too, it is excellent when growth is to be retarded, as in keeping down too luxuriant branching of pear trees with consequent danger of pear blight invasion.

Some permanent cover crops, alfalfa, for instance, are deep rooted, and open up the soil so that water goes into the soil much more readily. But more water is taken under these conditions, by two or three times. When the water supply is scanty, clean cultivation is necessary.

Winter cover crops, when moisture is abundant, will aid in fertility, and other fertilizers and humus must be added. Permanent cover crops are not likely to be useful unless water is cheap and abundant. Better use seasonal cover crops, add manure and, above all, watch the performance of the trees closely.

SEEDLINGS NOT SAFE.

Seedling trees appear around the farms and there is a tendency to let them grow, particularly if it is known that they came from a particularly fine fruit. Seedlings never are safe. Although they may have sprung from the seed of some most desirable fruit, the danger of cross pollination makes them usually worthless. Once in a thousand times, or less, a desirable hybrid may be found, but in the other 999 instances the fruit will be worthless. Keep the seedling, if a tree is wanted; but bud it or graft it with the scion of the desired variety, and the results will be sure.

CROP BOUND CHICKENS.

When the crop of a chicken becomes full and hard, and is not naturally emptied, try feeding a dose of castor oil or olive oil. Then knead the crop until it is soft. Hold the bird by the legs, head down, and continue to work the crop with the fingers. Usually the contents will be discharged through the mouth. If this fails, an operation will be necessary.

Pull the feathers where the incision is to be made, moisten those around the cut, which should be about an inch long in the outer skin. A shorter incision follows in the wall of the crop. The contents then may be removed with a button hook or the finger. Wash out the crop with warm water, and sew up the cuts with No. 60 white silk thread, using round stitches. Rub the skin with vaseline, and feed only beaten eggs and milk for two or three days.

BANKERS ENCOURAGE CLUBS.

Every boy and girl who completes a project in agricultural club work in California this year will be presented with a gold pin by the California Bankers' Association. These pins, known as the "Four H," are in use in many states in the United States, and have the shape of a four-leaf clover. One year's work gives a green leaf to the white pit, two years two green leaves, and when four years are completed, the pin is entirely of green.

Five thousand pins will be awarded this year, it is estimated, and the bankers in each community will make the presentations. This is not only a gracious recognition of good work on the part of the bankers; it is a business proposition, for good club members mean good farmers and good farmers mean a prosperous community and money in the banks.

BANKERS AND FARMERS.

This is not the only sign of interest shown in the farmer by the banker, without intending any put on the note coming due. Santa Cruz County bankers backed a county tour this summer, when 125 farmers and businessmen went out and found out what kind of crops were being raised, and how. Orange County had 110 on a similar tour, Yuba 32, San Luis Obispo 125, Ventura the same number, and Tulare 44.

In every case the city men were a bit surprised. They have asked for more tours and the farm advisors in practically every county are arranging them. It is merely another indication of a very sane attitude on the part of the bankers; and it is a clear tendency toward closer relations between city and country.

DOUBLE POULTRY YARDS.

Where there is plenty of land available, provide double runs for the hens. Keep green feed started in one, while the hens are eating it down in the other. The soil will be kept clean if it is turned over at each change, disease will be eliminated, the green feed problem solved and the production as well as the health of the flock will be improved.

CARE OF HORSES' FEET.

Monthly care should be given to the feet of horses, if they are to give the best service. Their feet should be trimmed so that the fore pastern has an angle of about 45 degrees and the hind pastern about 50 degrees. The toes grow faster than the rear portions of the foot, and need more cutting. If the horse has been shod, a look at the old shoe will show where the need is greatest. If the horse runs and works barefoot, then trim down the heel, clean out the frog and then level the foot to the toe. A barefoot horse should have the edges of the hoof rounded with a rasp, to prevent cracking and splitting. A rasp, pincers and a knife are the tools needed; but it is conceded to be poor practice to use the knife in the frog of the foot.

TO CONTROL HEN LICE.

Watch for lice on the hens. Mites do not live on the bodies of the chickens, but come out at night from dirt and cracks to take their toll from the fowls. Crankcase oil and thorough cleaning care for the mites. Lice, however, are parasitic on the fowls at all times, and control must be applied to the bodies of the chickens. Sodium fluoride, dusted around the vent, on the back and under the wings will get the lice. So will blue ointment applied under the vent. Nor can lice stand dust. Furnish the hens with a dust bath and there will be no trouble with lice.

DISBUD THE KIDS.

Horns have no economic place on the farm. This is as true of goats as of cattle; and the careful goat breeder disbuds the kid at the age of about a week. Clip the hair all around the horn down close to the eyes and around the ears. Rub in grease well so that the caustic will not spread. Moisten a piece of caustic potash and run it on the horn bud until the skin begins to break. Hold the kid so it cannot rub the spot for half an hour and the horn never will appear. It is better, of course, to breed out the horns, and with this in view, the owner will do well to find hornless bucks. This is usually easier than to disbud the kids later.

BULK HANDLING OF GRAIN.

Twenty years ago a movement was started in the Pacific Northwest to abolish the grain bag and handle barley and wheat in bulk. Reams were written by buyers of grain and sellers of bags, to show why this practice, always prevalent in the Middle West, could not obtain in Oregon, Washington and Idaho. But today practically all the grain there goes to ships in bulk.

California is about fifteen years behind. Farmers still buy sacks and throw them in with the wheat; and these sacks are ripped open when the grain is shipped. Less labor, less waste, less handling, less danger of spoiling and less cost are a few of the advantages of the bulk handling of grain that will come to California eventually, as it did to the Pacific Northwest.

SHEEP IN ORCHARDS.

One way to cultivate orchards is by the use of sheep. Here is a practical means, used in many parts of the state, where the operation of weed control not only does not cost the farmer anything, but actually pays him dividends. One farmer last year just about broke even on his orchard operations, but the band of sheep he ran among his trees showed a handsome profit in wool and lambs; and the added fertility of the soil is to be reckoned as worth while.

Sheep get into the corners, they get all the weeds, and they pay their way. There are few California farms, large or small, that could not profitably handle at least a small band of sheep. In addition to keeping orchards clean, they will keep irrigation ditches, fence corners and other neglected spots free of weeds. And they pay a profit not to be overlooked.

HISTORIC LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA PIONEER MOTHER

LELL HAWLEY WOOLLEY, BORN AT Martinsburg, New York, September 23, 1825, arrived at Hangtown (now Placerville), El Dorado County, September 10, 1849. In 1852 he returned to Vermont, and at Cincinnati, Ohio, April 6, 1853, married Lydia Jane Sawtelle, born at Ludlow, Vermont, January 21, 1821. Mr. and Mrs. Woolley departed for California, via Nicaragua, in 1854, arriving in San Francisco October 31 of that year.

In 1855, at San Francisco, a daughter, now Mrs. Emily Woolley-Page of Oakland, was born to this Pioneer couple. From her The Grizzly Bear has received a copy of a letter written by her mother to a sister, Mrs. Cordelia Long, then residing in East Boston, Massachusetts. Mrs. Woolley passed away March 24, 1906. The letter follows:

"San Francisco,
"November 15, 1854.

"Dear Brother and Sister:

"We were aroused yesterday morning by the announcement that the 'Golden Gate' had arrived, news that caused many a heart to thrill with delight, many expecting to meet with dear friends, husbands expecting to meet wives from whom they had been for years separated; and thousands like ourselves expecting to hear from the loved ones at home. It is ever cheering to the absent one to hear from friends, from kindred, though he be not far away; to know one's self thought of, remembered, is pleasant, but on a foreign shore, thousand of miles from home, you cannot imagine with what emotions we peruse, or with what eagerness we look for tidings from those dear friends we have left behind. I thank you for so faithfully fulfilling your promise to write to us, and hope we shall often hear from you. We also received a letter from Emily. We arrived here the last day of October; we were twenty-seven days from New York; detained two on the Isthmus. It was very pleasant when we set sail from New York; we sat upon deck and gazed upon our native land as it fast receded from our view. I could not help dropping a tear or two as the last speck disappeared in the distance. These lines of the poet came to mind:

" 'My native land, adieu, adieu,
My course is o'er the sea,
I sail upon its waters blue,
Far, far away from thee.'

"The first part of the voyage was very rough, it was very rough indeed. Crossing the Gulf Stream I was really afraid we should be wrecked; the waves broke over the upper deck and stove in one or two of the port holes; several ladies got very wet, the water ran all over the cabin floor. Lell and I were in our berths at the time; I heard the crash but did not know what had happened till the steward came and closed our port hole. The hatches were all shut down, the ports closed, the weather exceedingly hot. Oh, it did seem as though we should all die for want of air. Lell was very seasick and couldn't get out of his berth. I was sick, but not as bad as he. I lay until I could not endure the heat any longer and so I crawled into the cabin and reclined on a sofa, thinking I could make myself more comfortable there for the night, when the ship pitched suddenly and over I went with the sofa on top of me. I was jammed between the sofa and table and my leg hurt badly; it pained me all night and was very black and sore for a long time; for several days I was very lame. They picked me up and carried me to my stateroom, put me in my berth and there I lay all night. Oh, it was an awful night. The deafening roar of the sea, the puffing of the engine, the clashing of machinery, the rattling and thumping of chains and cordage, the creaking and groaning of the ship as she rolled from side to side, and the dashing of the angry waves which threatened every moment to engulf us, were enough to appal the stoutest hearts. I lay awake all night thinking of all the horrid disasters I had ever heard of at sea and I thought too of my next door neighbors, whales, sharks, alligators and all the horrid monsters of the deep.

"It was a long night, but morning came at last. It continued rough for two days and nights. The next night Lell and I slept, lay rather, on our blanket on the cabin floor part of the night, but the heat was so intense we could not stand it any longer, and towards morning we went on deck where we could get a breath of air. In the morning it was tolerably calm and the hatches and port holes were opened. Oh, I did suffer so much for water. They had plenty of ice on board but would not let us have any. People said they were saving it for their homeward trip; they wanted to keep their credit good in New York. The water was awful tasting and so warm it really sickened me to drink it. We had rather hard fare, very different from what I expected. We had a pretty hard time crossing the Isthmus. Those little steamboats are miserable things; no accommodations at all. Two nights we were out all night and had to lie on the floor.

"The scenery on the San Juan River is the most delightful of any that I ever saw. There were cocoanut, buttonwood and palm in great abundance, and many other trees covered with beautiful foliage, the names of which I do not know. There were beautiful clustering vines hanging thickly over the trees and dropping most gracefully down to the water's edge. They are covered with a very pretty blossom, resembling the morning glory but much larger. In some places they had twined themselves into delightful little arbors that looked so cool and inviting I wanted to go on shore and cool myself in their shade. Native huts were scattered along upon the shore and when they stopped to wood up, we went on shore and examined one. They are made of bamboo and thatched with palm; no floor; fire in the ground. We saw some beautiful birds of rich plumage, also parrots, paroquets and others which I did not know. Monkeys were playing about in the trees, and we saw several alligators in the river. They told us the river was full of sharks and alligators.

"We saw the ruins of Greytown; it lies at the mouth of the San Juan River. Just as we were camping for the night, on Lake Nicaragua, there came up a heavy thundershower. I had heard that thunderstorms were most terrific in the tropics. The lightning was very vivid and I never heard such thunder before. It was a most novel and interesting yet awful scene, one for the painter, aye, poet too. The heavens seemingly on fire with the lurid blaze, the billows in wild commotion, the rain pouring in torrents, the noise of the machinery, the beating of the waves against the boat, children crying, women fussing and fretting, men swearing about their places to camp, deafening peals of thunder which for the moment drowned all other sounds, people stretching themselves on the floor in all directions. But I will stop and let you finish the picture you can better imagine than I describe. I should like to see the picture, however, in 'Gleason's Pictorial.' We had miserable fare on the Isthmus, nothing fit to eat. We had to pay a dollar a meal. Oh, those filthy natives. It was the rainy season and everything was so wet and mouldy.

"At Virgin Bay was another interesting scene. There is where they take land conveyances. The village consists of a few Indian huts and some three or four hotels—so called. Ravens were flying about in all directions, mules coming in from all quarters to take the passengers and baggage; the natives in their best attire coming in with nets of oranges, limes, bananas and cocoanuts in abundance to sell; the hustle and grumbling and fussing and squealing at getting started. Having no little responsibles to look after, I sat and watched the rest until my mule was ready, then we mounted and were off. We had some luggage along which Lell packed on his mule, then spread on the blanket, and when it rained drew it up over his shoulders and kept all dry. I carried the umbrella. I couldn't help laughing to see how comical we looked. You can have no idea how easy it rains there. The sun would shine one minute and rain came the next. I saw a great many cactuses and other plants we cultivate with care at home. Logwood grows there in abundance.

"At San Juan we had to wait two days for the steamer; she had gone away to coal. It was so warm and everything was so wet and mouldy and musty it did seem as though we could not stand it any longer. We were delighted when the ship hove in sight. You can have no idea what filthy creatures those natives are. It did seem as though we should starve. I cannot think of that horrid Isthmus even now without feelings of disgust. While there we felt the shock of an earthquake.

"The 'Cortez' was a nicer ship than the 'Star of the West.' In some respects we fared better but the water was worse. They might have got good water at San Juan, but they caught rain water while they were coaling to save the expense of filling their casks, or hiring them filled at the Isthmus. I should think they dipped it out of mud holes, it smelled and tasted so bad. Lell and I lived mostly upon gruel and dry toast. I was glad I had the graham flour; we used every bit of it. There were a great many sick on the Pacific side and several of our number died and were buried in the sea. They have no coffins; the body is sewed in canvas, with weights to sink it, the burial service is read and the body committed to the deep, there to remain until the arch angel trumpet shall arouse the sleeping dead; then will the sea also deliver up her dead. I saw one poor man buried, a sight I never wish to see again.

"Lell was sick nearly all the time. The last part of the voyage he was so poorly that I was really alarmed about him, and he was quite discouraged about himself. But I nursed him up the best I could and tried to keep up his spirits. It was well for us that we were so near land. I do not think he would have lived many more days at sea. Some died very suddenly; a man walked the deck one afternoon and was buried before light next morning. Several of the passengers have died since they came on shore. I endured the voyage, considering all things, better than I expected although I was sick and suffered a great deal; had the headache most all of the time and felt dizzy and bad. But I think in some respects I am better than when I left home. I am not as lame and I think a little stronger. Lell is pretty thin but much better than when we landed. I have lost some flesh, but when I get to housekeeping I think I shall flesh up again.

"I have written so much at random and so badly and so disconnected, I do not know as you can make anything out of it at all. The truth of the matter is I have had so many letters to write I have got so tired and sick of writing that I just scratch along, as you will perceive, without taking any pains at all. Don't let anyone see it. Well, I must stop. Lell has commenced writing. I don't know whether he will have time to finish and send by this mail or not. Do not forget your promise to write often. Tell him I felt sorry to disappoint him but my health was such I was not able to make any calls.

OUR REDWOODS

(JUDGE IRA A. THOMPSON.)

THE NAME CALIFORNIA IS TRULY A name to conjure with, including within its connotation, as it does, such a great variety of the marvelous works of Mother Nature. Great as are our Sierras, our Yosemite, our southland, and so on through the list, there is not, to my mind, anything greater than the Redwoods, originally stretching from just below San Francisco to just above the Oregon State line, and varying from a mile to forty miles in width, depending upon the belt covered by fog, which there sweeps in from the Pacific.

The name "Redwood" has come to be applied to these giant trees along the coast, on the west slope of the Coast Range, although the Redwood is related to the big trees found on the west slope of the Sierras in a much more restricted and inaccessible area. The big trees, not quite so tall, and perhaps a little larger at the butt, have been preserved to us in the National Sequoia Park, as well as by the fact that they were largely inaccessible and not so well adapted to commercial purposes.

The Redwood, or Sequoia Sempervirens, is especially valuable for commercial purposes, and therefore apt to be all but obliteratel unless the people manifest a desire to save some portion thereof in a national park. The State of California has already purchased several acres, to which must be added donations of additional acres. But the total acreage is not at all sufficient in size. For several years there has been an organization known as the "Save the Redwood League," with headquarters at Berkeley, the aim of which is to preserve a large tract of primeval forest, acquiring the groves by purchase.

Words cannot picture the matchless heritage which we of California enjoy in the Redwoods. First of all, they are the oldest trees known to man. Countless thousands of them were great trees before the Founder of Christianity was upon earth. All traces of trees of a similar size or variety have been completely obliterated, except in California. The Redwood is the monarch of them all. The British oaks, the German Black Forest, the Alpine fir, the cedars of Lebanon, all sink into insignificance when compared to Nature's wonders in California.

Prior to 1905 I lived among the Redwoods in Humboldt County, and a few years ago determined to take my family into Mendocino and Humboldt Counties for the purpose, among others, of giving them an opportunity to become acquainted with this particular beauty spot. And I recall that, before we started, I tried to give my daughter an idea of the great size of these trees, but I failed, because the mind does not grasp the size of a tree reaching 340 to 350 feet into the air and measuring, as did one out on the Bull Creek flat, sixty-four feet around as high up as we could reach.

And when standing in the midst of a forest of such trees, so close together that the sun strikes earth only in occasional shafts, one is inspired to a greater reverence for the Deity and His manifestations. The earth is grown man high with mammoth ferns, giant trees run fifty, sixty and one hundred feet high without a limb, and end in long, graceful spires 200 or 240 feet above the first limb. One realizes that here is the nearest demonstration of immortality yet unfolded by Nature, and there creeps into one's mind a silent, unspoken wish that he might stand like one of them, and live on and on.

You first really enter this wonderful Kingdom of Nature on the Coast highway north of Willits, Mendocino County, and do not leave it, except where lumbering has removed the evidence, until well north of Eureka, Humboldt County. Verily, it is a Paradise of Nature. I use the words "it is;" perhaps I should say "it was," because inroads are being rapidly made. But where forests stand, it is yet incomparable with any other sight in California. Those of us who love California from Siskiyou to San Diego, and from the Sierras to the sea, would like to see a really representative acreage of these wonderful trees saved, to be viewed by our children and our children's children. They cannot be grown again successfully, if at all, for hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years.

Reforestation of Redwoods is a subject of active investigation and research, and of great contrariety of opinion. But it is a subject upon which we could well spend a great deal of time as a protection to our rainfall and water supply. In the meantime a visit to the Redwoods will inspire one to greater courage, greater devotion and greater love of all mankind.

What I mean is this, that nobody can stand in the midst of these trees and consider their marvelous age, their enormous size and their wonderful beauty without being inspired to a firmer conviction in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and by that reason imbued with a greater love for all mankind.

INVERTED REFLECTOR FOR BROODER.

The ordinary brooder for baby chicks is cone shaped. The reflector for the heating element usually is the same shape, placed beneath the brooder cone. This has not proved satisfactory, but it has been found that if the reflector is inverted, a much more nearly even distribution of heat is effected. When a piece of wire screen is placed about half-way down the brooder cone, the distribution is just about perfect. This plan will eliminate the crowding of chicks into warm or cool places, and the attendant loss of stock through trampling. Also, more vigorous and stronger chicks will result.

REJOICING CUT SHORT.

Despite reports of the devastating Panama disease, which is laying waste banana plantations in Central America, Prof. R. W. Hodgson of the University of California finds that new plantings are being made much faster than the old ones are destroyed. The old land will be used for the planting of new crops, avocadoes for instance. These new crops are not in competition with California products, because of the fruit fly quarantine; but any rejoicing on the part of California orchardists that bananas may recede from American markets is cut short. Every fruit competes in some measure with another. California fruit growers must meet competition by better quality of fruit produced at less cost than before.

CALIFORNIA DESCRIBED BY A NEWCOMER

LONG BEACH HAS A HARBOR IN THE making. It is so near completion that ocean steamships can now enter it from the sea through its own entrance channel. Outgoing and incoming cargoes can now be accommodated. Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbors are often spoken of or put in print as Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor. The corporate limits of the two cities touch each other, so the harbors are practically one and are connected by a deep-water connecting channel. Officially they are two harbors, and each city owns and controls its harbor. There is a movement to combine the two harbors under the control of a harbor commission, each city to have an equal number of members on the commission. The arrangement is both popular and unpopular and may never be accomplished.

Sixteen years ago Los Angeles was an inland city and aspired to become a port. The cities of San Pedro and Wilmington, both located at tide water and having undeveloped harbors, were annexed. Miles of open country separated the two cities from Los Angeles, so the latter annexed a strip of land and called it the shoestring. The string tied Los Angeles to San Pedro and Wilmington, and Los Angeles became a port. Many millions of dollars have been expended in developing Los Angeles Harbor. Outgoing and incoming tonnages rank next to New York Harbor.

These harbors have a depth of water from thirty-two to forty feet and the easy accessibility from the open sea greatly favors them. There are no obstructions of any kind. Ships can go from the entrance to the outer harbor to their berth in the inner harbor in fifteen minutes.

We are in a favored location with half or more of the population of the world at our door, just across the Pacific, in Japan, China and the Philippines. True, we are more widely separated from these people than is New York from the great populations of Europe, but that only means a few days more sailing.

Japan, with military and naval successes, is developing into a progressive nation and is recognized as one of the great powers. We think the progress of the Philippines is safe in our hands. But what is wrong with China? With an area exceeding that of the United States and a population three times as great, together with great natural resources, China is a hundred years behind the times. As a political, military and naval power China is weak, and the preservation of its integrity, insofar as territory is concerned, is a world problem. Only for the intercession of the powers much of China's territory would have been parceled out long ago.

The needs of the hour in China are many. Two outstanding and very necessary ones are education and christianity. These are basic principles necessary to progress. It matters not what we as individuals think about it, nor whether we are believers or unbelievers, the great fact remains that christian nations are progressive, prosperous and are advanced in modern ways. Nations under the influence of Buddhism, Mohammedism and other such religions are the reverse. Culture is for the few. The great masses of the people are illiterate and live in depravity and want.

China's leaders need the higher education to fit them for work in every walk of life. The masses need an elemental education and an education along progressive and industrial lines. Emerson said the world exists for the education of each man. Intelligent people are the most efficient workers. They produce more, want more and consume more. Illiterates produce less, want less and consume less. Intelligence, production and consumption build the commerce of every progressive nation.

China is a small consumer of world-wide manufactured goods and prior to about 1850 rigorously opposed foreign trade. China's foreign trade today would be as nothing, if compared with that of the United States. Remove today, if it could be done, the christianity upon which the forefathers founded this nation, also our educational system, and tomorrow we would revert to the conditions existing in China.

Some day China may awaken from her lethargy, see her needs and take a place among progressive nations. When the awakening-day comes, California and all of her ports will have abundant reason to hope and expect that a great maritime commerce can and will be developed with the Orient. In addition we now have a large coastwise trade and the intercoastal trade of the west coasts of North and South America is capable of being increased. Through the Panama Canal we have easy access to our Atlantic seaboard and Europe.

California became a possession of the United States seventy-nine years ago, when it was thinly settled and not well known. Had it not been ceded by Mexico at the time it was, no doubt it would have been ours by conquest in a very short time. Almost immediately after the United States assumed authority, gold was discovered and California became famous. In population and progress this state has outclassed many of the older ones. It may be surprising to know that California still ranks first in gold production. The fact recalls the truth of this little verse, in print in olden days:

"Gold to fetch and gold to send,
Gold to borrow and gold to lend,
Gold to keep and gold to spend,
And abundance of gold in futuro."

Long Beach had its beginning in 1881 as Willmore City. The name was changed to Long Beach in 1884. When the town was twenty years old the population was about 2,000. In 1910 it was 17,000, in 1920 55,000, and the estimated population today is 140,000. In 1920 the city was known principally as a Pacific Coast resort. In 1921 oil was discovered at its door and the largest oil field in the state has been developed here. Population doubled in about two years after the oil came. Long Beach is getting too large to be a resort only. In conjunction with its deep-water harbor a comprehensive industrial development plan is now under way. The harbor, industrial district and oil field are all well separated from the beaches, resort features, business and residential districts.

Long Beach has always been a decent place to live. It is a church city and many denominations are represented. The schools are the best. It has one of the finest beaches on the coast, and from May to October many thousands are here to enjoy the surf. Long Beach has a fine back country with many interesting cities and towns, fine paved highways and the mountains twenty-five to fifty miles distant.

CALIFORNIA AND FLORIDA COMPARED.

It has been my privilege and pleasure to have taken extensive motor tours in both California and Florida. Comparisons will be made by stating facts and what was observed. California is more than two and one-half times the size of Florida. In position, Florida's northern boundary lies on the thirty-first parallel of north latitude. California's southern boundary is between the thirty-third and thirty-fourth parallels of north latitude, hence Florida lies entirely south of California.

Both states are mild, yet the climate conditions are different. California has a good all-year climate, Florida has not. Florida is hot and humid six months of the year. The winter is agreeable to those seeking a warm winter climate. Florida has ideal conditions for breeding mosquitoes—plenty of still water. I spent the worst night of my life fighting them in Palm Beach.

California has a dry atmosphere and no matter how hot the sun is, the air has a bracing quality. What humidity there is along the coast, with the ocean breeze, is invigorating rather than prostrating. These characteristics apply to those localities where our tourists live. California, with its mountains, hills, canyons, valleys, rivers, streams, lakes and sea coast is scenic everywhere. Florida is low and flat and not scenic in the sense that California is. The highest elevation in the state is probably not over one hundred feet above the sea.

Both states have water problems. Our water sources are usually high, where the water is stored. It is easily brought to a lower level for irrigation. The other source is from rainfall during the rainy season. If there is ever any excess, drainage soon takes care of it. Florida must get the excess water off the land in some way. The source of water is from heavy rainfall—fifty to sixty inches annually. Drainage is difficult. Rivers are sluggish and much of the timber stands in a foot or more of back water. Many small lakes are fed principally by rainfall. There is water by the side of the road—water everywhere. The engineer wisely tells us water will not run up hill. There is no down hill, so the drainage problem is a difficult one.

California excells Florida in the richness and diversity of soils. Florida has many beauty spots. The state is a large producer of citrus fruits, vegetables, pineapples, strawberries, etc. Cocoanuts and bananas are grown in the southern part, though not extensively. California is so far in the lead in quantity production of citrus and deciduous fruits, nuts and vegetables that any comparisons are a waste of time. Florida has the advantage in one respect: it is nearer to the dense populations of the East and the Middle West and can be reached in less time and at less cost.

I have asked many people who have spent some time in both states, which they preferred. The answer is, almost invariably, California. A well-known writer stood at the rim of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, in Arizona, looking down a mile into its depths, then he wrote: "It is folly to try to describe the scene. Come out and see it."

An Irishman on his first trip over, witnessed a sunset on the Atlantic, when near the end of the voyage. Almost immediately the moon came up and he could not forget the spectacle. On arrival in New York he wrote a friend on the other side, saying: "Pat, America is a great country. When one sun goes down another comes up. Come over here."

Words cannot adequately describe California. Come out here and see it!

A Sojourn to the Fairyland Isle—Catalina—Aboard a Palatial Ferry-ship!

Across twenty-five miles of blue Pacific, calm as a mill-pond, in the summer's sun sparkling as with a myriad of jewels, and to Catalina Island!

There is music as the S. S. "Catalina" is boarded at the Catalina Terminal at Wilmington. Seductive notes float out to greet the vacationist as the family autos driven into the garage in the terminal building to be left until the return from the island, and the red Pacific Electric cars drawn up alongside the spacious depot, unloading their hundreds of passengers.

"Here comes the bride," as the note struck several times during the embarkation as treacherous friends tip off the orchestra and a shower of rice deluges the happy couple. The final blast from the deep throated whistle of the S. S. "Catalina" and passengers throng to points of vantage to see the sights enroute, colorful Japanese umbrellas lend a picturesque touch to the upper deck, as the great vessel steams slowly through the canal and on past Dead Man's Island and the lighthouse to the open sea. Enroute are seen the great lumber vessels and oil tankers unloading their cargo at what the guide on board announces as the second greatest shipping port in the world.

In the outer harbor is anchored the Pacific Fleet, the gigantic grey watch dogs of Uncle Sam. A magnificent and inspiring sight worth coming across a continent to see. Thirty destroyers form the first line of defense, auxiliary ships are at anchor nearby. A personnel of fifty thousand man the ships. As the S. S. "Catalina" passes the "gobs" signal greetings. Further out some of the destroyers may be seen at target practice, or the periscope of a submarine slowly emerging or disappearing from sight.

Music floats from the spacious glassed ball room of the S. S. "Catalina," and dancing feet are tempted to trip the light fantastic, the while the eyes would feast on the wonders of the sea. Porpoise play along the prow of the great vessel as it smashes into silvery spray the blue waters ahead. A school of tuna, the great game fish of the Pacific, are sighted, further on a giant broadbill swordfish is seen to break water, the huge tail and dorsal fin appearing like two periscopes along the surface of the water. A commotion attracts the passengers to the other side of the boat where a gigantic black fish has leaped into the air, his black body measuring seventy five feet and more, capulting back into the water. A cry of whale, and off in the distance, and sometimes quite near, is seen a spout of water and a huge hulk floating on top of the sea. All along the twenty five mile wonder trip flit the winged flying fish, sapphire like butterflies they seem, equipped with gossamer wings; hither and yon they dart, ever a fascination to the sight-seer.

Almost all too soon Catalina is sighted and soon is heard the whirr of welcoming sea-planes overhead and the shouts of laughter from onrushing speed-boats, manned by merry vacationists shouting greeting. The little cruisers dash around the incoming ship, leaving a trail of foaming sea, and convoy the S. S. "Catalina" into Avalon Bay. Here a myriad of craft of every description, private yachts, sport-fishing boats, excursion cruisers and glass-bottom power boats, ride at anchor, all gaily bedecked with flags. Chimes peal forth their welcoming notes, the bay front is a-flutter with gay bunting. The great ferry ship slowly glides alongside the dock at Avalon under the guiding hand of Captain Arthur Morris on the bridge.

A description of the first glimpse of Catalina, as one leaves the pier, and of the many things to do on this play isle, must be left for future articles, for newspaper space is far more limited than the joys of this fairy-isle, to which special excursions are run from Long Beach each Thursday, at reduced rates. Tickets may be secured at the Catalina Ticket Office, Pacific Electric Building.

ELIZABETHTOWN

PLUMAS COUNTY "GHOST CITY" SITE MARKED BY MONUMENT

QUINCY (PLUMAS COUNTY)—AT Elizabethtown, once a populous center of Plumas County, Admission Day, September 9, Plumas Pioneer Parlor No. 219 N.D.G.W. and Quincy Parlor No. 131 N.S.G.W. dedicated a monument, the inscription upon which reads: "Dedicated to the Pioneers of Plumas County, to the Founders of Elizabethtown and Elizabeth Stark Blakesley, for whom this town was named September, 1852. Erected by Plumas Pioneer Parlor No. 219 N.D.G.W., Quincy Parlor No. 131 N.S.G.W." President Edith Gill-Kerr of Plumas Pioneer Parlor made the welcome address, in the course of which she said:

"We welcome you to participate, with us, in honoring the Pioneers of our great state, California, by dedicating this monument today upon the site of one of the earlier settlements of our county. It is fitting and appropriate, in dedicating this monument, that the flag used be one of pioneer days.

"The first authentic history we have of the flag veiling the monument is, that it was raised at Nelson Creek, July 4, 1854, by the late John W. Thompson. This flag remained the property of that pioneer family until 1923, when it was presented to Plumas Pioneer Parlor by Miss Rhoda A. Thompson and was placed in our cabinet of relics in Memorial Hall.

"It is also most appropriate on this occasion that this monument should be unveiled by Mrs. Zetta Blakesley-Clark, daughter of one of our honored and respected Pioneer Women, Elizabeth Stark-Blakesley, for whom this early and historic settlement was named, and I take great pleasure in introducing Sister Zetta Blakesley-Clark, who will now unveil this monument."

The main address of the occasion was delivered by Senator W. W. Kellogg of Quincy, a California Pioneer who first visited Plumas County in 1858. In the course of his remarks, which follow, he gave a most interesting resume of the history of Elizabethtown—a history which is identical with that of numerous "ghost cities" of California's gold-mining counties:

"You would scarce expect one of my age to attempt to make a speech in public and especially so before such a large assemblage of people as are gathered here today—in fact, it is somewhat of a surprise to myself. I had come to the conclusion a long time ago that my public speaking days had passed; thought I had served my time in that particular capacity and had permanently enrolled in the membership of that very ancient and numerous brotherhood of the 'has beens.' But when I received the invitation from the committee of Plumas Parlor Native Daughters of the Golden West, who had charge of the arrangements for this dedication or celebration, to make a short 'spiel' at this time, and with the added suggestion that I give a short or condensed review of the early history of Elizabethtown in particular and Plumas County generally, I concluded to break the silence and accept of the invitation, with the hope that I might be able to add my mite in making these dedication ceremonies interesting and enjoyable by relating a few of the many historical facts connected with the history of the county.

"As I was not one of the days of '49 or spring of '50 Pioneers, it must be taken as granted that the incidents, facts and statements I may make have been gathered partly from recorded history, but much more from hearsay, that is, from the 'tales as told by' those who were here during those times and should be supposed to know what they were talking about. I have listened for many hours to old-timers rehearse the 'yarns,' tales and legends of that very eventful past.

"It is an admitted fact that the first White men who came to American Valley came in by the way of La Porte (then called Rabbit Creek), Onion Valley and Nelson Point. They were a few of the thousands who came from the mines in Yuba, Nevada and Butte Counties, up the Middle Fork route in search of the fabulous Gold Lake.

"In 1849 and for several years after Onion Valley was the largest and most important camp or town in the county. It was the headquarters for all of that section of southern Plumas. In 1850-51-52 it is claimed that it had a population of 2,000 or more. The miners on Poorman's, Hopkin's and Nelson Creeks secured all of their supplies at Onion Valley. The placer gold deposit upon Poorman's Creek was in shallow ground and extremely rich. The mining was mostly by ground sluicing, and more large nuggets were found there than in any of the other nearby camps.

"Hopkin's Creek was also a good gold producing locality. Nelson Creek was doubtless the best paying diggings ever worked in that part of the county. The first sawmill was built upon Independence Bar by Sherwin & Co. A number of the farmers and ranchers who located in and became residents of American Valley made their 'stake' at Nelson Creek or in that vicinity.

"Where was the first discovery of gold in paying quantities made in American Valley? That is a mooted question and one which has never been positively decided. Whether here in Tate's Ravine, upon Mill Creek or at Nigger Gulch, the earliest prospectors never agreed; possibly each of the discoveries was made the same day, hence the disagreement. It is certain, however, that Alexander and Frank Tate, who first settled upon and owned the ranch upon which the county hospital now stands, discovered gold in this ravine in the spring of 1852.

"The pay streak in Nigger Gulch was struck about the same time. That was one of the richest paying pockets ever found; it was not more than one-fourth of a mile long and about 500 feet wide. No gold was found above a certain line upon the hill, or upon the side of the gulch outside of the limit named, but thousands upon thousands of dollars were taken out. That so-called pocket gravel mine has been a puzzle to all of the scientific mining sharps who have visited the place; where the gold came from is still a mystery.

"Soon after the finding of gold in Tate's Ravine was reported, the rush to the new diggings commenced. In a few days there were several hundred anxious goldseekers upon the ground. Claims were limited to forty feet square. The ground proved to be rich, many large nuggets being found ranging from one pound up. The largest is reported to have weighed thirteen pounds. Nearly all of it was solid smooth-surface gold or, as the miners term it, 'washed gold.'

"The value of the gold taken from the Elizabethtown section runs into the millions. Many 'home stakes' were made but, as is always the case, some were unfortunate or unlucky, went broke and always kept broke, and in that respect conditions up to the present time have not materially changed.

"When did the first covered wagon come into American Valley? During the spring and summer of 1852, when one of the largest and best equipped wagon trains that came across the plain in that year was slowly winding its way along the banks of the Truckee River, it was met by that noted pathfinder and frontiersman, James P. Beckwourth, and a few of his companions. At the camp that night Beckwourth informed the party of his discovery of the pass through the Sierra Nevada Mountains which has ever since been known as Beckwourth Pass. He offered to pilot and conduct the train through the pass and thence to American Valley in California. There were thirty or forty families in the train, with a generous supply of extra horses, oxen, cows, poultry, etc., and a large stock of supplies.

"After consultation the heads of ten or fifteen families concluded to accept his proposition. The following day the train separated, the larger number going on the beaten path by the way of the Donner Lake or the Hangtown or the Placerville route and the others following the leadership of Beckwourth.

"They came through the pass, skirted the north edge of Beckwourth Valley, to the mouth of Grizzly Creek, at which place Beckwourth had established a trading post. It has been somewhat of a mystery as to where Beckwourth obtained his supplies. The train then went up Grizzly Creek to the ranch now known as Lovejoys, thence followed the summit of Grizzly Mountain to the long ridge that reaches down to Spring Garden. In going down that hogback there was one grade so steep the emigrants had to fall trees and attach them to the rear of the wagons, to act as brakes. Spring Garden was reached in safety. From all accounts the road between Spring Garden and American Valley was the roughest encountered during the whole trip, but they made it all right and were the first covered-wagon emigrants that ever entered the valley. They were at the end of their journey; they had reached the end of the trail; a majority of them became permanent residents and spent the remainder of their days here in Plumas County. As a matter of course a majority of them engaged in mining for gold; some were successful, others made failures. A few located land and became pioneer farmers and ranchers. Many of their descendants are with us here today.

"When the Palefaces first came to American Valley they found a population of several hundred Indians, generally known as Diggers, and said to be the lowest in the scale of intellectuality of any other tribe in California. They were peaceful and friendly; in fact, never caused any trouble. They had two large camps or villages; one, the largest, was upon the ridge in the center of the valley near the ranch known as the Finlayson and north of the Welden and the Lee ranches. The other was upon the flat on the east of the so-called Pocket bridge. They had their large sweathouses, campodas or wigwams, campfires and dancing grounds. The bucks occupied their time in hunting, sleeping, gambling and resting. Wild game, deer especially, were plentiful, traveling at times in droves of a hundred or more, and with their bows and arrows the Indians could easily procure all the meat required. The females, called squaws or mahalias, performed all of the manual labor.

"With their woven willow baskets they caught great quantities of fish, as all of the streams were stocked with trout, and gathered the required supply of acorns, grass seeds, grasshoppers, berries, etc. A large basket of soup was ever ready to appease the appetites of the hungry. One campfire at least was never allowed to go out, the mahalias always furnishing the needed supply of bark and wood to 'keep the home fires burning.' The culinary requirements were very simple; they had no occasion to use any tried and approved cookbook recipes. Bucks and squaws preferred to have the meat and the fish served in the style you may often hear ordered at restaurants at present, namely, 'rare, very rare done.'

"In this connection, I refer to the fact which is a regrettable one, that no person has ever compiled or written a history of the Indian tribes of Plumas County. Possibly some Native Daughter will undertake the literary task of making a 'write up' of those Aborigines.

"It has always been the common belief or understanding that when the gold-seekers first entered Plumas County it was a trackless wilderness. That is a mistaken idea; there were well-beaten Indian trails in all, or nearly all, of the mountains and valleys—trails that had been in use for hundreds of years by the native sons and daughters. The first party to reach Rich Bar,

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

UNEMPLOYED WORKINGMEN OF SAN Francisco held numerous sand-lot meetings during October 1877, but nothing of moment transpired until the evening of the 27th when, led by Dennis Kearney, more than a thousand of them went to the top of Nob Hill and had a mass meeting. In his most vindictive manner, Kearney addressed the crowd; he designated Thanksgiving Day as the time for a parade which would wind up at Nob Hill, where a "spite" fence erected by Charles Crocker would be pulled down. The crowd unanimously adopted a resolution demanding that the employment of Chinese cease in ninety days. The gathering brought about unexpected results during November.

The "spite" fence referred to by Kearney was built by Crocker as high as Haman's gallows, or seventy feet, upon the boundary-line of his lot to prevent a neighbor from peeping. It aroused considerable resentment and criticism, so Kearney's proposal to tear it down met with general approval.

At a mass meeting of unemployed in Sacramento City October 2 inflammatory addresses by a number of "orators" received tumultous applause. Resolutions against the so-called American aristocracy dominating the nation, and against Coolie labor were heartily adopted.

At its annual session in San Francisco October 11 the California Grange adopted resolutions designed to right everything wrong in the universe.

The Pioneer Bank of San Francisco failed October 8; it had 2,468 depositors, $1,236,401 liabilities, and $966 cash on hand. W. T. Duncan, a stockbroker who also failed, was in control of the bank and had used its funds in his speculations; he was arrested and charged with various offenses. Following the bank's failure Thomas Gray, president, issued this statement:

"I don't want to say anything about the officers of the bank. I don't know anything about them. I never did know anything about them. All I know is that when I was hard up for the necessaries of life I was made president of the bank at a salary that would about feed a dog. I went in there, sat at a desk and drew my salary and that's all I ever did. Duncan never told me anything about it. No one paid any attention to me. I did not know anything about how matters stood and I supposed everything was as usual until this morning I got a note from Duncan telling me not to go to the bank. I did not know but what I had been fired until I saw in the papers that the damn thing was busted. Now, where do I get my feed?" Further financial dismay was occasioned by the failure during the month of Phil. Dideshelmer, who owed $565,000 to San Francisco creditors.

Santa Clara County's annual fair opened October 1, and that of Siskiyou County October 3.

MAMMOTH BUNCH GRAPES DISPLAYED.

The Los Angeles County fair opened October 2. Stephen M. White was the orator. A Chinese baby was refused entry for the baby show.

A slouchy-looking laboring man walked into a Vallejo, Solano County, shooting gallery and, picking up a gun shot five times at a target, hitting it once. Several onlookers commented and an ensuing argument resulted in the stranger offering to bet he could hit the bullseye nine times out of ten. The onlookers clambered over each other to put up their money, several $20-pieces going into the pile. The unknown then fired ten shots, hit the bullseye every time and walked out with all the coin.

At the annual shutzenfest of the Los Angeles Verein October 7 enough beer was consumed to float a battleship. A hilarious time was had.

Miss Kate Lorence, a pedestrienne of some fame, won a 100-mile walk in San Francisco October 1 in 27 hours and 40 minutes.

N. Lastreto, a Pioneer who had the distinction of bringing to Stockton, San Joaquin County, from Chile the material for constructing one of the first houses there, died in that city October 7.

B. C. Horn, a Pioneer of '49 who made his mark as a San Francisco tobacco merchant, died at San Jose, Santa Clara County, October 23. He began business with a box of cigars.

A sealion, followed by a litter of little ones, was seen disporting at the mouth of the Napa River.

An asbestos vein, twenty-five feet wide in places, extending from the Mokelumne River to the Stanislaus, was being traced over hill and vale and causing excitement. Locations were being made in the counties crossed by the vein. Asbestos had a value of $100 a ton at this time.

General Shields was the champion pumpkin-grower of California South. He had 3,000 acres in bearing and was selling the product upon the ground at $2 a ton—making a net profit of 50 percent.

Over 250 artesian wells were in operation in the Compton district of Los Angeles County. From the "boss" one water was pouring at the rate of 30,000 gallons an hour—sufficient to supply a city of 15,000.

One of the incipient industries that did not mature was the development of a coal vein discovered in the Santiago Mountains south of Anaheim, Orange County.

What was claimed to be the world's mammoth bunch of grapes, rivaling that brought from the Valley of Eschol by the spies of Moses, was on exhibition at San Francisco. It was brought from Santa Barbara. The cluster, culled from a 16-year-old vine, was 3 feet long and 6 feet in circumference and weighed 125 pounds.

An extra fine quality of grape syrup was being sold in Napa and Sonoma Counties at 50 cents a gallon. From it growers were netting $20 a ton for their grapes.

Clarence S. Martin of Los Angeles, trying his hand at introducing one of the world's rare fruits, was importing the chirimoya tree from Peru, believing he could successfully produce the "fruit of the gods." The experiment apparently was not a success, for but one tree is known to be growing in Los Angeles now—on Hillside avenue. The interior of the chirimoya resembles uncolored ice-cream in appearance and consistency; by some it is referred to as the custard-apple.

EDITRESS SEVERELY BEATEN.

During October fifteen vessels left California with cargoes of wheat for Great Britain. They carried 507,587 centals, valued at $1,447,485. So far this season but thirty-five vessels loaded with wheat had cleared, as against 160 in 1876.

During the twelve-months period ending October 31 steamers landed 9,302 Chinamen from their native country in San Francisco, and 5,487 had departed. The previous year the arrivals exceeded the departures by more than 10,000.

The first substantial rainfall of the season came October 22, when .69 of an inch fell.

A collision October 18 upon the Sacramento River, at Three Mile Slough, between the steamboat "C. M. Small" and the schooner "Angel Dolly," resulted in the drowning of the 17-year-old wife of the captain of the schooner, who jumped overboard.

The steamboats "Clinton" and "Petaluma" collided upon San Francisco Bay October 27. The former was wrecked and the latter badly damaged.

Patrick Regan, eating supper in a Sacramento City hotel, became violently ill from choking and commenced to turn purple. A physician who was summoned made an incision into Regan's throat, from which he extracted a piece of steak eight inches long which Regan had attempted to swallow. He died while the operation was in progress.

Belle Lynch, editress of the Ukiah, Mendocino County, "Dispatch," who was engaged in a personal-attacks controversy with a rival editor, T. L. Carothers, was severely beaten by the latter October 20. An extremely abusive article in the "Dispatch" was assigned as the cause of Carothers' rancor.

Arrangements were being made to subdivide and sell to settlers the 20,000-acre ranch of P. B. Reading in Tehama and Shasta Counties.

A state-wide judicial election October 17 was a very dull affair.

The "Boys of '76," a Sacramento baseball club, and the "Californians" of San Francisco played a championship game October 7. The latter won by a 14-to-5 score.

Ah Chung, a Chinaman employed in Los Angeles City by Dr. J. DeBarth Shorb, was given a $151 check October 15. He immediately raised it to $951, cashed it and vamoosed.

AUTO VISITORS' NUMBERS INCREASE MONTH BY MONTH.

Nearly 100,000 persons entered California by automobile during August of this year, it is revealed in a report of the first actual count of passengers in automobiles crossing the state borders. A total of 99,657 passengers were counted in 33,572 motor cars entering the entire state during August 1927. For the first time in history the number of passengers in the incoming tourists' cars were counted by officials at the various border stations under orders of the State Agricultural Department.

Since no check has ever been made heretofore on the number of persons that come into the state in automobiles, no comparisons can be made, but a substantial increase in the number of incoming automobiles is noted in the August figures for 1927 and 1926. During August of last year 10,005 automobiles were counted entering over the transcontinental routes, as compared with 13,022 for the same month this year, an increase of more than 3,000 through the eastern boundary. A total of 26,433 cars were checked during August 1926 into the entire state, but the figure was raised to 33,572 for August of this year.

EARLY COMPLETION LINCOLN HIGHWAY APPEARS ASSURED.

With the settlement of a nine-year controversy over rival routes through western Utah, early completion of the Lincoln highway, the second great transcontinental motor artery leading into the northern and central sections of California, now seems assured, according to C. C. Cottrell of the California State Automobile Association.

All interests in Utah, Nevada and California appear united behind a plan to close the uncompleted gap by the construction of a connection between Ely, Nevada, and the Wendover cutoff. The decision was reached at a meeting in Reno of the Lincoln highway committee of fifteen of which Cottrell is chairman.

After studying for six months the feasibility of three possible routes between Salt Lake City and Ely, this committee recommended re-routing the Lincoln highway via the Wendover cutoff and the construction of a new road from Ely to Wendover. The Lincoln Highway Association will be asked to officially ratify this plan, and Cottrell was delegated to place the merits of the plan before officials of the association at Detroit.

DRUNKEN AUTO DRIVERS ARE MENACE TO EVERYBODY.

Driving while intoxicated was the cause of over half of the forty-one recent revocations of licenses to drive automobiles, according to a report of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. The motorists who lost their licenses for driving while drunk numbered twenty-one, resulting in a total of forty-one revocations within a period of two months.

A special effort is being made by the state vehicle department to eliminate drunken drivers from the highways. Autoists who drive while intoxicated not only cause tremendous danger to themselves, but also to the lives of innocent persons.

LEATHER COVERED AUTO ON MARKET.

An automobile of Swedish manufacture, its body covered with artificial leather instead of paint, has been placed on the market, according to information received from Stockholm by the Automotive Division of the Federal Department of Commerce.

A closed model has the backs of the two front seats arranged to be folded back, forming two sleeping places or only one if it is desired to use the car as an ambulance.

LOSS OF LIFE FROM TRAFFIC YEARLY IS MORE DISCOURAGING.

Only in certain communities, where definite plans for traffic regulations have been adopted, is there any improvement in the automobile fatality figure. Reports reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California indicate that the loss of life the country over, due to traffic, becomes more discouraging with each passing year. The only encouraging note is found in those cities where insistent and determined effort has been made to reduce accidents and deaths.

Recently one-fourth of all the lives lost in all kinds of accidents among insurance policy holders during the first half of the present year were found due to automobile casualties. It is also noted during this same period that 30 percent of the death toll involved the lives of children.

California South is one section of the country that has decreased the death expectancy among children of school age through education in the public schools and organizing the children into safety committees outside of their school work. This plan was inaugurated about six years ago by the Automobile Club of Southern California, and during the past five years the child death rate in this section has been reduced to 15.2 percent as compared with 26 percent for the nation at large.

Beginning in September, when school work was resumed, the California Public Safety Conference inaugurated a state-wide campaign to reduce traffic accidents and the co-operation of all organized agencies will be enlisted in a consistent effort to minimize injury and death from automobiles.

MORE'N YEAR REQUIRED TO MOTOR OVER CALIFORNIA ROADS.

How long will it take to motor over all the roads in California? This casual inquiry, coming usually from out-of-state tourists, brings vague answers. Frequently the visiting motorist announces that he will be in the state for two or three weeks and wishes to see all he can in that time.

Figures of existing roads in this state, compiled by the California State Automobile Club, show that a motorist traveling 200 miles a day would require 385 days to traverse every road once. The total road mileage is 77,000.

Should the motorist decide to make the trip merely over the state highway system, the tour could be accomplished in approximately 33 days, as the total state system is 6,591 miles.

TO TEST "GAS" SUBSTITUTE.

An intercolonial competition of gasogene vehicles—motor vehicles operating with the aid of self-produced gas—will be held in October in North Africa under French government auspices. The purpose of the competition is to determine among gasoline trucks the models most worthy of purchase.

It will include tests for endurance and regularity of operation, followed by an examination of the principal parts of the engine after the tests are completed. This competition is an evidence of the interest in France in possible substitutes for gasoline, practically all of which it has to import from foreign countries.

SPARK PLUG TROUBLE.

Lack of efficiency of spark plugs may be traced to a number of causes. The wires leading to the plugs may be oil-soaked. The plug points may be fouled. The porcelain may be cracked or porous. There may be improper spark gap. The plug may be coated with oil.

To have a smooth-running motor, hitting on all cylinders, it is important that the spark gap should be properly spaced, that the terminals are tight, that carbon is cleaned from the firing points, and that there is a perfect porcelain on each plug.

KEEP TAIL LIGHT LIT.

For cars which have the dash and tail lights on the same circuit there is a simple method of keeping the tail light burning when one of the globes has burned out, and no low voltage lamp is available. Short the wires in the broken globe by twisting them together, put this globe in the dash light socket, and the good globe in the tail light.

TO LOCATE SHORT CIRCUITS AT NIGHT.

Short circuits or leaky wires in the electrical system on a car may be easily located at night or in the dark. With the motor running, raise the hood and move the wires, watch where they come in contact with metal, especially in the conduit or tube carrying wires from the distributor to the spark plugs.

PROTECT THE CHILDREN BY OBSERVING THE LAW.

The California Public Safety Conference calls attention to the requirements of the law designed to prevent traffic accidents to children.

Whenever there is a child within a marked crosswalk on your side of the street, you are required to permit this child to pass in front of your machine before you may proceed over the crosswalk. The rule applies when either adults or children are within the crosswalk.

At unmarked crossings, the motorist's duty is the same as at those marked, if the pedestrian raises his hand to indicate intention to claim his right to cross. Also, it is unlawful to pass a machine at a crosswalk which has stopped to permit a person to pass in front of it.

The conference is eager that California establish a new low record for traffic accidents involving school children. Careful observance of these provisions will accomplish this.

MOTORISTS REQUIRED TO APPLY BRAKES TO PARKED CARS.

Set the brakes when leaving a motor vehicle standing. The state Motor Vehicle Act, which became effective in July, makes it mandatory to stop the engine in a standing car when left unattended. Unintentionally many motorists are, it is said, violating this law, which provides:

"No person having control or charge of a motor vehicle shall allow such vehicle to stand on any public highway unattended without first effectively setting the brakes thereon and stopping the motor of said vehicle."

This provision of the new state law is largely a safety measure. Many accidents have been caused by cars, parked upon declines, being set in action through some slight disturbance. Merely putting the car in gear is not enough, according to the law, which demands that the brakes be set wherever the car may be standing.

SCENIC ATTRACTIONS OF VICTORY HIGHWAY TO BE EXPLOITED.

Opening a new era of development for the Victory highway, the California State Automobile Association has launched a nation-wide campaign to exploit this transcontinental motor tourist route to California.

The association's plans for bringing the merits and attractions of this highway before millions of motorists throughout the nation includes, among other features, a nation-wide publicity campaign featuring the scenic attractions and touring possibilities of the Victory highway.

Keep Tires Inflated—Do not run the regular cord, or high-pressure, tire under-inflated to secure balloon-tire results. The working of the fabric will crack the side walls and separate the cord layers from the rubber that holds them together. Friction between the cords will cause blow-outs.

Rural Districts Lead—The auto is most popular in small towns. Here are the percentages of the nation's motor-vehicle registrations: Communities of less than 2,500 population, 39; cities between 100,000 and 500,000, 11.7; over 500,000, 11.4.

Tiring Remedy—Some auto drivers tire on long trips because the seat is low and legs do not rest upon the cushion. Place a piece of wood about an inch thick under the front end of the cushion.

Keep Posted—Motorists should keep continually posted on the law governing ownership and operation of motor vehicles. Periodic review of local and state traffic regulations is the duty of every driver.

Auto's Average Life—Technologists estimate the average "life" of an auto around seven years. They say, however, that every car will not be in operation at the end of that period; less than 90 percent are likely to survive the first three years.

Keep Headlights Adjusted — If motorists would give the same attention to the condition of the auto's headlights as they give the gasoline tank and the crankcase, the glaring headlight evil would be considerably diminished.

Be Prepared—Keeping the car stocked with the necessary items of equipment that may be needed to make repairs on the road will frequently eliminate grief and delays.

U. S. Auto Country—81 percent of the motor vehicles in the world are owned in the United States.

STOCKRAISING IN CALIFORNIA

(MRS. A. S. C. FORBES.)

IN THE EARLY DAYS OF CALIFORNIA THE main business was that of stockraising. Thousands of cattle, sheep and wild horses roamed the range. But as meat was the chief food and desire of the Indians and also formed the main stay of the Spaniards, it took years before real herds of cattle and sheep were acquired. Horses increased much more rapidly because the padres did not learn, or perhaps realize, that the Indians preferred horse flesh to that of any other meat. And later, for some reason, the Indians were not allowed to gratify this desire. "Jerked" meat forms, even to this day, a diet preferred by untutored Indians to that of any other. The meat is chosen from the best parts of the animal, slit into strips and hung upon lines to sun-dry. This sun-cured meat is tasty and wholesome.

The first stock brought to California was by the overland expedition under command of Don Fernando Rivera y Moncada, captain of the armored company of the garrison of Loreto, Lower California. He came with this expedition in 1769 and brought cattle as part of the provisions. It is more than probable that very few of this first herd were preserved as breed cattle, as provisions became acutely scarce before the first settlement at San Diego became permanently established. But as milk was at all times the diet assigned for the sick of the early land expeditions, it can be relied upon that some milch cows were saved for that, if for no other, purpose.

By 1836, when Richard Dana visited this coast and left the rich account of his experiences in his book, "Two Years Before the Mast," we find that cattle, sheep and horses ranged from the Sierra Mountains to the sea. The cattle were not, even then, in vast herds as is generally stated, but were in reasonable numbers and hides were the main medium of barter. That is, hides and tallow of the cattle were. The hides were sundried and perfectly cured. The tallow was preserved in bags and the meat left for the elements, wild animals and scavenger birds to clean away.

Dana's vivid description of loading hides off San Pedro and the manner of conducting trade with vessels has rarely been equaled or surpassed in literature. He says they drew in and found the tide low and the rocks and stones covered with kelp and seaweed, lying bare for a distance of nearly an eighth of a mile. Just in front of the landing was a small hill. Going up the hill they found a small, low building with one room, containing a fireplace, cooking apparatus, etc., and the rest of it unfurnished, and used as a place to store hides and goods. Dana learned, to his dismay and surprise, that this desolate looking place was the best place on the whole coast for hides.

About thirty miles in the interior was a fine plain country, filled with herds of cattle, in the center of which was the Pueblo de Los Angeles —the largest town in California (and it still so remains)—and several of the wealthiest missions, to all of which San Pedro was the seaport. The next day the agent went up to the pueblo and the neighboring missions and in a few days, as a result of his labors, large ox-carts and droves of mules, loaded with hides, were seen coming over the flat country.

"We loaded our long-boat with goods of all kinds," says Dana, "and pulled ashore. After landing and rolling them over the stones upon the beach, we stopped and waited for the carts to come down the hill and take them, but the captain soon settled the matter by ordering us to carry them up to the top, saying that was 'California fashion.' So, what the oxen would not do we were obliged to do. The hill was low, but steep, and the earth, being clayey and wet with recent rains, was but bad holding for our bare feet. The heavy barrels and casks we rolled up with some difficulty, getting behind and putting our shoulders to them; now and then our feet slipping added to the danger of the casks rolling back upon us. But the great trouble was the large boxes of sugar. These we had to place upon oars and, lifting them up, rest the oars upon our shoulders and creep slowly up the hill with the gait of a funeral procession. After an hour or two of hard work we got them all up, and found the carts standing full of hides, which we had to unload, and also to load again with our own goods.

"Now the hides were to be got down, and for this purpose we brought the boat round to a place where the hill was steeper, and threw them down, letting them slide over the slope. Many of them lodged, and we had to let ourselves down and set them going again, and in this manner got covered with dust, and our clothes torn. After we got them all down we were obliged to take them on our heads and walk over stones and through the water to the boat. In this manner we brought on board about two thousand hides, when the trade slackened.

"The preparation of the hides and skins of the animal was done in strict conformity to tradition, also. The steer was killed in the usual ways, but once dead, the hide was cleverly cut in a complete circle about the neck, feet and from the belly and under to the tail. Then a horse-man hitched his riata or lariat to the neck of the hide, gave a hitch around the horn of the saddle and, with a quick run of his mustang, the steer was skinned. The hide was staked down to the ground and left until thoroughly dried, then doubled lengthwise in the middle and piled flat as a board, ready to be loaded on the great two wheeled carts or carretas.

"The hide-ships gathered hides all along the coast, then unloaded them at San Diego, where they were soaked in brine, scraped, dried again in the sun and well beaten with flails to soften and also to clean them of dust. Here they were stored, to await final shipment round the horn."

Dana says he came to the coast quite unprepared for such "headwork" as carrying raw-hides on his head from the shore to the boat. But providing himself with a thick Scotch cap, he soon became used to the only system used in California. After the men's heads got used to the weight and they had learned the true California style of "tossing a hide," they could carry off two or three hundred in a short time without much trouble. It was wet and rough work, and the beach was stony and hard for the bare feet. Then, after the hides were loaded, came a long pull of three miles with a heavy boat, which often took several hours.

Such was the beginning of the hide and stock trade in California. Very different, indeed, are the methods of today, when men are engaged in devising, manufacturing and operating machinery to do this head-racking, spine-splitting drudgery of "ye olden times."

HIJINKS, OCTOBER 27.

The annual old-timers' night of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. September 22 drew out a fair-sized crowd. There were many interesting talks, among the speakers being Joe F. Lyon, Andrew M. Stodel, William Coffey, Earl Lemoine, Herbert Coffey, Bertram Northrup and Henry Brodek. Refreshments were served.

October 27 the Parlor will feature a hijinks, in the nature of a '49 party, and an attractive program is being arranged. Eligibles are especially invited. October 20 is initiation night. Arrangements are being made for the anniversary banquet rally in November.

GRAND PRESIDENT N.D. VISITS.

Grand President Mae Himes Noonan paid her official visit to Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. September 21. The meeting was preceded by supper at the Women's Athletic Club, arrangements being made by Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer and Miss Grace Norton, who has been styled "the official hostess" for official visits. It was a delightful affair.

At the meeting-place, prettily decorated with flowers, were gathered, in addition to many members of No. 124, representatives of fourteen Parlors and the following grand officers: Founder Lily O. Reichling-Dyer, Grand President Noonan, Grand Vice-president Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Past Grand President Stoermer, Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas, D.D.G.P. Maud Klasgye and D.D.G.P. Florence Dodson-Schoneman. President Jennie Raymond and her officers initiated a class of seven candidates.

Grand President Noonan won all by her splendid, earnest talk, which was listened to with rapt attention. She complimented the ritual and the book officers of the Parlor for their work, the organist, Pearl Dwinell, for the inspiring music, Past Grand Stoermer for her help, Annie L. Adair for her homeless children endeavor, and the membership in general for interest shown in advancing the Order's ideals and interests. Brief addresses were also made by Founder Dyer, Grand Vice Heilbron, D.D.G.P. Klasgye, D.D.G.P. Schoneman, the presidents of the southland Parlors and Past Grand Stoermer, who concluded with: "This has been a happy, ideal Native Daughter evening, long to be remembered."

October 12 Los Angeles will have a card party, the proceeds from which will be used to purchase material from which to make garments

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

VELVET HATS BLOSSOM FORTH

CONTINUOUS TALK ABOUT THE lengthening of skirts, and yet out come the new dresses, gowns and wraps for fall and winter with skirts as abbreviated as ever, except where feminine wish is otherwise. In the case of the woman who long has longed for longer skirts, she, for reasons of her own, wishing to conceal rather than to reveal the fine turn of ankles or members slightly higher up, may choose elongation of skirts by means of panels or irregularities of the hem-line. It is doubtful if well-formed femininity will soon relinquish skirts of brevity, so becoming, so helpful in walking.

Reluctant to relinquish the sheerness of voile, many women are completing the winter wardrobes by the addition of little dance dresses of indestructible chiffon voile. That fabric is designed to add durability, while at the same time preserving the lightness and airy effect of the more perishable silks. The colors in this fabric are inexpressibly lovely, affording a full range of favorite tints.

Many of the new frocks for autumn and winter display the one-sided effect in drapery as well as in neckline, while the front drapery is possibly in the lead. Some very distinctive gowns have a way of attaining both the front fullness and that of the one-sided silhouette. The fullness of a set-on flounce across the front of the skirt furnishes the former, while elongated drapery adds the latter touch.

The blouse is a salient feature of the autumn costume, whether this separate top garment be in contrast or en suite. Sometimes the blouse is a regulation affair in cut and again it is of the jacket family. Many a smart little costume will appear with the jacket or blouse in velvet and a skirt of matching tone in one of the silken weaves. Gold metal brocaded georgette is chosen for the long blouse, with rhinestone buckles confining the drape at the side.

The separate skirt, especially sponsored in velvet for autumn, also occasions a selection of blouses in the wardrobe, adding to the prestige of the individual blouse of shimmering metal brocade on colorful georgette backgrounds, or on black to accentuate the brilliancy of tinsel and gold.

Velvet is emphasized for both day and evening occasions, and is also important for evening wraps and formal ensembles. Satin, too, is highlighted for day and evening.

Coat collections pay considerable attention to wrappy manipulations, with the flare introduced at the front or side. Furs are used in more than generous fashion, making huge cuffs and collars and always providing extremely flattering frames for the face. The tall travel coat continues to lead for general wear, though interest gradually increases in the formal types.

The tiny close-fitting hat continues to hold the center of the stage in millinery shops, with black growing stronger. Felt is favored in soleil treatments, and plain felts are combined with velvet, satin or grosgrain ribbon, either brimless or with tiny brims. These little hats cling close to the contour of the head and are generally simple in trimming. Felts cut out to show contrasting velvets or satins underneath are very popular, as are metallic stitched velvets, satins and felts.

Hats of velvet have blossomed forth like the flowers of autumn under the first California rain, but instead of being colorful, most of the new velvets are black and are in novel shapes, with somewhat high crowns. Scrolls, quaint animals or swirling effects in brilliants are, as a rule, the sole ornamentation to these first fall hats.

Fashion has chosen velvet even for those delightfully saucy and "don't carish" hats named "vagabond." Black is used for some, the new bright blue for others, and many are in the new browns and wine shades. In fact, whatsoever one's choice in costume, one may have a "vagabond" to match, with the only decoration a fancy pin.

Early last season the snug little turban had a drooping tuft of feathers posing on one side to fall over one ear. Next came the revived feather band set near the top of the round crown. Now the mode boldly brings forth the feather turban in all its old-time glory.

A fad for the coming season is the hat and scarf to match, and matched in a novel way. The hat of felt in beige, we will say, will seek adornment in an odd scrollment of brown velvet, while the scarf of velvet will be in the shade of brown which forms the trimming motif, and this will add a termination of like motif in beige felt. Of course, the felt put to use in this manner will be soft and pliant. The girl more faddishly inclined will add to her hat and scarf a matching handbag.

How fabrics and footwear and even skirt lengths will affect hosiery colors is a question which is brought up for serious consideration at the beginning of each new season. Evening hosiery colors give rise to little difficulty this season, the same shades and weights continuing. It is the unanimous opinion that the well-dressed woman will continue to select the very sheer chiffons in either the skin or moonlight tones.

Evening slippers are presented in rich brocades, bright colored satins and, of course, the gold and silver kids always preferred by some.

On the other hand, for daytime costumes a great deal of attention is given to matching shoes and hosiery, and women appear to be more exacting. Nothing could be smarter to wear with the new velvets than very sheer dark hose and black or dark brown shoes.

The dust shade, or bronze nude, is a very sheer brown, and when on the leg it gives the appearance of extremely sheer gun metal. This shade is worn with black shoes or the fancy trimmed types, and it seems to have a remarkable propensity for taking on the color of the costume or footwear. With black it appears black, and with brown it of course is a rich brown.

The trench, beige shades, white, [illegible] continued in favor during the [illegible] will also feature prominently in [illegible] and it is believed that these light colors will continue to attract attention along with the deeper ones. Fashion and good taste [illegible] women are using more judgment in choosing their colors than ever before.

A season so rich in new fabrics and so successful in the employment of them invites greater versatility toward costume accessories. The accessory this season is not merely the finishing touch of the ensemble, it is the climax of a symphony, the final expression of individuality.

Rhinestone jewelry is most important for evening, and is used lavishly for all types of buckles and ornaments. Both precious and semi-precious stones, such as amethyst, topaz and emerald, are employed in jewelry of the heavier type to add colorful notes to the costume, and each type of apparel must have accessories that are not merely in step but which reflect the personality of the wearer.

Fabric gloves take on all the delightful stitchery and appliques of their "kid" sisters, and are made to simulate suede, chamois and even dressier types.

Knit wear in heather mixtures is made in the same styles as the jersey frocks and suits. Two or three shades of the same color are blended to make a most fascinating frock in jersey.

A jersey blouse with a black velveteen skirt makes a most desirable frock, and when belted smartly is unusually attractive.

Clocks also appear in the smart new sports hose of silk and wool.

The flower is still upon the shoulder.

The fox fur piece should not be worn with a large-brimmed hat.

Among the long-haired furs, lynx is the first choice.

Velvet, and more velvet, is the slogan of fall fashions.

Footwear Simplicity—Simplicity in color and line, varied by hand-painted models in kid, is the latest trend in women's footwear, according to advices received by the United States Department of Commerce from Paris.

"Kids" Increase—At the opening September 12 of the Los Angeles City publicsschools 195,547 pupils were enrolled; the opening day a year ago the total was 179,090. It is predicted that by the end of the year the number will be around 245,000.

BOOK REVIEWS

(JENNIE RAYMOND.)

"BOLD BENDIGO."

By Paul Herring; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price $2.00.

The scene of this unusually good sporting story is England, during the middle of the nineteenth century. Bendigo, the dashing hero, is a young pugilist who battles his way to the heavyweight championship of the kingdom. It is based on the life of William Thompson, champion pugilist of England from 1839 to 1850. Bold Bendigo is encouraged by his mother, strong minded, the only woman in his life until he meets Cherry Ribbons, a Romany maid. Ever a clean, wily fighter, he incurs the hatred of a dishonorable "blood" rival for the love of Cherry, and the scoundrel stops at nothing to stop his rise to fame.

The story is picturesque in flavor, as the London fans shied their enormous beaver hats into the ring to indicate their enthusiasm, and the sturdy young blacksmiths and farmers' helpers vied with each other for the championships of their districts. It is somewhat repititious, a fault wholly excusable, due to the necessity of describing the numerous battles won by Bendigo before the title is his.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

AGRICULTURE PRINCIPAL INDUSTRY

CALIFORNIA IS AN AGRICULTURAL state, and despite those pessimists who see the decline and even the end of the farm industry here, agriculture is and always will be the principal industry. Nearly one-half the people of the state are engaged in agriculture or in some industry dependent upon it. Thirteen of the fifty highest crop-producing counties in the United States are in California. Every crop grown commercially in the United States is produced commercially in California, with the single exception of sugarcane. No other state has a higher income per farm, despite the too-zealous activities of real estate operators in some districts better left untouched for a while. No other industry in the state comes near agriculture as a source of new wealth created, not oil, or mining, or lumber. The gross revenue is anywhere from $650,000,000 to $825,000,000 annually. A big industry, too important to be neglected, deserving of what help other industries can give it.

It is not an industry without its troubles. No longer can a farmer produce and hope to get his profit from the increase in the value of his land. No longer can he merely sow and reap. He must be more than a farmer. He must first of all be an economist and know what to plant. He must be a farmer and know how to plant it. He must be a scientist and know how to protect his crop from pests. He must be an irrigation and soils expert to know how to handle his crops. He must be intimate with grading, standardizing and marketing. He must be an accountant to keep track of his expenses, his profits, his losses. A farmer is no longer a straw-chewing "rube," if ever he was one. He must be better trained, more keenly alert, harder working and more up to date than the successful man in any other line of business or industry.

That the California farming industry is succeeding speaks well for the quality and ability of the men engaged in agriculture, facing competition from those nearer markets, from countries where labor is cheap. The farmer is succeeding, though, and agriculture in California will continue to develop and prosper. The situation might be better; it could easily be much worse.

DON'T NEGLECT THE SOIL.

Trees must be fed, if they are to produce. In poor soil, lacking in humus, trees cannot yield and will not. If fertility is not maintained, and humus is not kept in the soil, there will be little fruit, and the quality will be poor. More than that, the vitality of the tree will be impaired and its resistance to disease and insect pests will be materially lowered. Turn under a cover crop or barnyard manure to add humus; use inorganic fertilizers if necessary.

Keep the soil up and the expense will be repaid many-fold. If there is a scarcity of water during the summer, cover crops at that time may not be advisable. But they should be sown in the fall and turned under in the spring. Perhaps they will not grow if the soil is in very poor shape, and fertilizers may have to be added first. This is a condition, strange to say, that obtains in many orchards where farmers complain of poor yields. Yet they would not think of expecting a dairy cow to produce good yields without proper feed.

FOR WINTER GARDENS.

Gardens planted now will produce vegetables that will be much appreciated this winter. These can be in most cases, of course, only hardy vegetables, but they will add variety to the diet and furnish materials needed by the body. Beets, carrots, radishes, cauliflower, green onions, spinach, turnips and such vegetables may be planted now.

Irrigate the soil well, plow or spade as the size of the garden may demand, work the seed bed down well, turning under some manure if possible, and plant a little deeper than in the spring. The soil is quite likely to be dry at this season of the year, and care must be taken to see that it is kept moist enough to produce germination of the seeds and to keep the young plants growing.

KEEP THE BEES WARM.

With the advent of winter, it will be well to see that the bee colonies are ready for the cooler weather, particularly in localities where low temperatures may be expected. First of all, the hives should be protected from the winds. Shelters of some sort should be provided against wind; a windbreak of quick-growing shrubs will accomplish this, if there is no natural protection. When the bee colony becomes cold, the bees become restless and waste their energy. At a few degrees below 60 Fahrenheit, the bees will cluster and fan to generate warmth. By spring the colony may wear itself out and the old bees will die rapidly. Both as producers of honey and as a means of pollinating fruit, bees are too valuable to neglect.

REPLACING THE OLD HENS.

According to a survey made by the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California, about 45 percent of the laying flock should be replaced every year. Cull out about that percentage of the old stock, taking those that give evidence of having done the least toward returning a profit, and replace them with pullets every year. It was found that this procedure gave the lowest death rate, the best production and the highest profit per hen. Where 22 percent of the hens were replaced, the flock showed a profit of $1.29 per hen; at 45 percent replacement, $1.53 per hen; and at 64 percent, a profit per hen of $1.51.

BRANDING TUBERCULOUS CATTLE.

The new law regulating the control of bovine tuberculosis is in effect. It does not require the testing of all cattle; but it does require that when a cow is tested, she must be branded if she reacts. No one but an accredited veterinarian may secure tuberculin, and no other may use it. There is no option to be exercised by the tester or the owner; if the cow reacts she must carry the letter "T" upon her jaw.

The only exception is in the case of purebred cattle, and that exception is made for but two years, purebreds coming under the law in 1929. Another provision is that all cattle shown at fairs, and all nurse cows, must have been tested and shown to be clean of disease.

LOOK OUT FOR RODENT ENEMIES.

Just before the fall rains come and while vegetation is driest, there is little feed for field mice, gophers and similar rodents. So watch out for the trees, the bark of which is likely to be chosen by these small animals for their diet. The trunks near the ground, and the roots, are likely to be attacked, and valuable trees may be lost. Use poison in carrots, parsnips, potatoes or ripe fruit to control the pests. Put it in their runways and keep away domestic animals that might get it. Don't let dead grass or rubbish collect near the crowns of fruit trees to furnish nesting and hiding places for the rodents.

SALT AND WATER FOR PIGEONS.

Pigeons require salt and water, and should have a supply of both at all times. Mix the salt with the grit, and keep it before the birds constantly. They require more salt than any other fowl, and must have it to thrive. So also they demand water. Fresh water and plenty of it will go a long way toward making the loft a success.

SPLIT FRUIT TREES.

It very often happens that fruit trees, particularly young ones, produce a heavier crop of fruit than they can bear. If they have not been started right, and have a bad crotch, they may split down. Unless the trouble is remedied at once, the tree is lost. If it is taken in time, however, the damage usually is not irreparable. Trim off jagged splinters and bring the exposed surfaces together.

Kill germs with a 500-to-1 solution of bichloride of mercury and tie the limbs back into place, as tightly as possible. Bore a small hole through the split crotch and bolt the pieces together, using washers, drawing them tight with the nut. Keep the tree roped or wired to prevent strain until the wound is perfectly healed and fill the cracks that may be left with grade "D" asphaltum to prevent the entrance of water. Paint the bark with grafting wax and a union should result.

YOUNGBERRY LOOKS PROMISING.

Backyard gardeners or commercial producers who wish to try something new in the way of a berry, will do well to obtain a start of the Young dewberry, or youngberry as it is becoming generally known. A cross between a dewberry and a blackberry, it appears in color a deep red, large and luscious. Apparently it is more resistant to disease than almost any other cane or trailer berry and holds up well after picking. B. M. Young of Louisiana bred the hybrid, gave it to nurserymen and quit the business. It has taken hold well where it has been tried, and gives promise of replacing many of the well-known small fruits now grown.

TREATING GOPHERED TREES.

The best treatment for a tree that has been girdled by a gopher, and the top allowed to die, is the tractor and a chain. But the top should not be allowed to die, if it is possible to prevent it, and usually it is. Plant seedlings of the rootstock desired, about three to a tree, and inarch them. Bridge grafting from the roots to the trunk above the injury can be used, if desired, but it is a more difficult operation; and nine times out of ten the orchardist wishes he had a different root, anyway. Saving a tree is important, for it takes years to get a new one into bearing. Grafting on root suckers that may be thrown up after the top dies is not generally advisable. Usually it is more profitable to plant a new tree.

THINNING STRAWBERRY CROWNS.

Where runners have been pinched from the strawberry plants during the summer, the crowns will become so large that they crowd, and the rows will mat. This has a tendency to increase production, but to shorten the life of the plant. Commercial growers plan to carry their plantings but three or four years, and the thinning is a time-taking process, so they usually let the plants go. However, if the patch is small, or if for other reasons longevity is desired, thin out the crowns so as to leave from three to six inches between the plants in the row.

BUD WALNUTS NOW.

If there is budding of walnuts yet to be done this fall, it should be done at once before the bark tightens up. Usually a liberal irrigation will loosen the bark so that it will slip and peel easily when the bud is inserted. Leaves should be removed from the shoots selected for buds about ten days before budding. Eliminate storage as much as possible by taking the wood from the trees as it is needed. The shoots may be stored in moist shavings for a week or ten days, but care must be used or they will heat or become waterlogged.

MARK THE SICK VINES.

Right now is a good time to look the vineyard over for evidences of black measles. Splotches on leaves and berries of old vines, which give evidences of going back, in all probability indicate the presence of the disease. If the trouble is not general, and appears only in a few vines, mark them by stakes or otherwise, and don't forget to spray them along in February or early March, when the buds are about ready to swell, using three pounds of sodium arsenate to fifty gallons of water. If the trouble appears to be quite general, treat all the vines; the disease is too serious to trifle with.

COWS AND WATER.

Water is an all-important commodity upon the farm. Trees and field crops demand it, but livestock should not be neglected because they can in a measure care for their wants. Milk is mostly water, even as it leaves the udder of the cow, and to produce it the cow needs water in plentiful quantities. She needs it, also, for the digestion and assimilation of her feed. See that the dairy cow has all the water she wants and that it is good water.

CUT OUT THE MUMMIES.

Get the brown rot mummies out as soon as possible, before the trees drop their leaves if it can be done. This practice lessens danger of infection and makes easier the detection of the sources. Cutting out the mummies does not eliminate the necessity of spraying to control the disease, but it does make the spraying more effective through the removal of these sources of infection. In any event, don't let the trees go into the winter with the mummies hanging from the branches, if the control of brown rot is at all desired.

TURKEY TIME IS NEAR.

It is getting close to Thanksgiving time, and the turkeys soon will be ready for harvest. Preparation for market is important. The turkey, in California especially, is a range bird and can best be fattened on the range. Begin to feed a month or so before time to ship, starting in lightly and increasing the grain until they are getting all they will eat. Feed morning and evening, before they start out to range and after they return. Market the birds that show best size and maturity at Thanksgiving, holding the smaller ones for the Christmas trade. Study the markets, ship to reliable dealers and consign only good stuff.

GROWING THE TOYON BERRY.

The Toyon berry, or California Christmas berry, is easily grown from seed. Hardy, requiring little in the way of soil or water, it is one of the most beautiful of native shrubs. That is not to say it will not repay trouble and expense in the matter of fertility and water; but it goes better without than do most other shrubs. Mash the seed coat from ripe berries and sow in a sandy loam that has been well spaded and raked. Cover lightly, sprinkle wood ashes on top and cover with brush for protection. Don't keep the seed bed too wet. Transplant to jars or cans when two or three inches high, and later plant as desired.

RAILROAD DAY IN MODOC

ALTURAS—PIONEER DAY WAS FITtingly observed Admission Day, September 9, with a banquet and a program of musical and literary numbers sponsored by Alturas No. 159. A large number of Pioneers assembled in the flower-bedecked rooms to enjoy the hospitality extended. They were cordially welcomed in a splendid address by Elma Dorris, a representative of one of Modoc County's foremost early-day families. Other speakers were Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster, Grand Trustee Irma Laird and E. C. Bonner, son of one of the county's pioneer merchants and bankers. Many of the guests related early-day reminiscences. Two of them were past 90 years of age, and one of them, Grandma Bare, delighted the assemblage by singing "Annie Laurie."

Alturas' members are looking forward to the official visit of Grand President Mae Himes Noonan October 6. Grand Trustee Laird and Past Grand President Gloster are laying plans for the institution of a new Parlor at Westwood, Lassen County, October 8. A large delegation from the Parlor will be present for that event.

Complying with a request from the Parlor the Modoc County Board of Supervisors has appropriated $685 for a fence to enclose Rachael Dorris Pioneer Park. This park was given to the county by the Dorris heirs and the Native Daughters have in charge its beautification. At the recent baby show conducted by the Civic Club and the Parent-Teacher Association two of the first-prize-winning babies were those placed in Alturas by Past Grand President Gloster while a member of the N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Central Homeless Children Committee.

Committees from Alturas Parlor are co-operating with the Chamber of Commerce and a citizens' committee in arranging for the celebration of railroad day. The Nevada-California-Oregon narrow-gauge road, which for thirty years has been Modoc County's connecting link with the world markets, is being broad-gauged. The work is about completed and the first standard-gauge passenger train will arrive in Alturas October 29. A monster celebration is being planned for the day and No. 159 will have its part in the event.

Busy Times Ahead.

San Jose—Vendome No. 100 and San Jose No. 81, with Observatory No. 177 and San Jose No. 22 N.S.G.W., marched in solid formation in the big Admission Day parade in Santa Cruz. The Native Daughters wore dainty gowns of organdie in pastel shades over slips of silk the same shade of the gowns, black shoes, atmosphere colored stockings and large black aeroplane hats, they carried vanity bags, the same colors as their gowns. The Native Sons wore white outfits and carried canes. The aggregation made a big showing and were cheered all along the line.

Vendome is in the midst of a paper drive, with Mrs. Alice Kady as chairman; the proceeds will go to the Native Daughters' new home. A rummage sale is to be held, with Mrs. Mae Sanderson as chairman; a large return, expected from this activity, will be devoted to the Parlor's charities. Plans are being made for an afternoon bridge party and the annual bazar. A whist party or two may also be featured this season. The sewing club has resumed activities, with Mrs. Emma Nelson as chairman. A delegation attended the Serra pilgrimage at Monterey City.

Invitations are again arriving, asking Vendome's glee club, the "Bird Seed Warblers," to appear on different programs. The club is to take up educational work this season and later will be heard in far different kinds of programs. Mrs. Clara Gairaud, secretary Santa Clara County Music Teachers' Association, is the director. The broadcast over K.Q.W. September 5 was a big success from every viewpoint; all the Santa Clara County Parlors contributed to the program. The "Warblers" were charmingly entertained in the beautiful home of Mrs. Charles O. Dean on the historic Alameda.

Vendome personals: Mrs. Anna Farnsworth has returned from a delightful trip to Los Angeles, Long Beach and San Diego. Miss Tillie Brohaska and Mrs. Irvin Hagan also enjoyed a southern trip. P.G.P. Mamie Pierce-Carmichael spent the summer in Brookdale. Mrs. Julia Waddington and Miss Martha Waddington are home after a five months' trip visiting all the beauty and historic spots of Europe.

One Hundred Pledged for Home.

Santa Ana—Santa Ana No. 235 was hostess September 14 at an entertainment featuring an interesting program and games. Several members of San Diego No. 208 were honored guests of the evening, and there were also present representatives from Long Beach No. 154, Grace No. 242 (Fullerton) and Santa Cruz No. 26.

The hall and the banquet tables were lavishly decorated with flowers and nut cups in the prevailing color, yellow. Prizes in the games were won by Elsie Case, Della Crolic, Lois McDougall and Mrs. Devenney. During the evening the Parlor pledged $100 toward the erection of the new Native Daughter home in San Francisco.

Country's Flag Dedicated.

Centerville—Officers of Betsy Ross No. 238 were publicly installed by S.D.D.G.P. Gertrude Morrison August 19, Alice Sacramento becoming president. In an address which will be long remembered Junior Past Grand President Sue J. Irwin dedicated the Parlor's new Flag of the United States of America. At the conclusion of her remarks the audience sang "The Star Spangled Banner," Jennie Brown accompanying. The hall was beautifully decorated in red, white and yellow.

Other speakers of the evening were Grand Secretary Sadie R. Thaler and Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher. Numerous presentations were made. A musical program was presented and punch was served. Lucy Day and Luella Mathiesen were in charge of the affair.

A neat sum was recently added to the Parlor's treasury by a dance in charge of Lucy B. Day. "Hot dogs" were served for a change. Everyone had a fine time. Several members, headed by Alice Simas, visited the Livermore Veterans' Hospital and presented the boys with cakes, jellies and jams.

Grand President Visits.

Oakland—Grand President Mae Himes Noonan paid her official visit to Piedmont No. 87 August 25. The ritual was exemplified in a very capable manner, and the Grand President highly complimented President Helen Ring and her efficient corps of officers. Under the chairmanship of Josephine Clark a tasty repast was partaken of.

The annual old timers' night was held September 1 with Gretta Murden in charge. This is an annual event which the members thoroughly enjoy. Prizes for old-time costumes were awarded Gladys West, Emma Swaney and Erna Jenkins. Following whist all retired to the banquet room, where plenty of good things to eat were at hand.

This was also the occasion for a jam and jelly shower for patients at the Livermore Veterans' Hospital and over 200 glasses of goodies were contributed. Edna Healey was in charge; she is also chairman of the Parlor's civics committee, which sees that something is sent the veterans each month.

District 20's Annual Frolic.

Hollister—The Parlors of district 20, comprising Santa Cruz, Monterey and San Benito Counties, will hold their annual get-together meeting at Asilomar Saturday evening, October 8. Dinner at 6:30 will open the festivities, after which adjournment will be made to social hall, where the first part of the program will be devoted to a few short talks on matters of interest and importance to the entire Order. Several Past Grand Presidents have signified their intention of participating in this feature. Stunts, musical numbers and community singing will conclude this part of the program, when all will repair to Sweet Inn to enjoy the usual midnight frolic. The inn is reserved for the enjoyment and comfort of the participating Native Daughters. Sunday will be given over to pleasures of the beach, in which all will participate.

Picturesque surroundings make an especially attractive setting for such an assemblage.

Building Fund Enriched.

Oroville—The building fund of Gold of Ophir No. 190 and Argonaut No. 8 N.S.G.W. was enriched $1,530.35 by the "Days of '49" celebration sponsored by the Parlors in May. Additional donations have been received for Gold of Ophir's collection of pioneer relics, among them a pack saddle used in the La Porte, Plumas County, mines in 1849 and a cabinet made from lumber shipped around the Horn in the early '50s. Florence Danforth-Boyle had charge of the celebration.

Plans for No. 190's sixth annual hope chest are in progress. The committee in charge is composed of Rosa Crum, Florence Boyle and Norma Levulett.

J. L. Armstrong of San Francisco, a Pioneer of 1849, recently paid a visit to Oroville, the first in forty years. He expressed his pleasure at the interest displayed by the local Native Daughters and Native Sons in things historical.

Admission Day Ball.

Santa Barbara—Reina del Mar No. 126 and Santa Barbara No. 116 N.S.G.W. observed Admission Day, September 9, with a reception for the Pioneers at Recreation Center. Following an informal program the old-timers related stories that recalled the days of old.

In the evening the Parlors had their annual Admission Day ball. Good music was provided and special dancing numbers were featured.

Reception for Grand Trustee.

Antioch—Following the August 23 meeting of Antioch No. 223 the members went to the home of President Alice Bloomfield, where the exciting game of hearts was played, Myrtle Welch taking the first prize and Nellie Nichols the consolation. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. September 7 several of the members of the Parlor accompanied D.D.G.P. Genevieve Field to Byron, where the officers of Donner No. 193 were installed. A splendid supper was served and beautiful gifts were presented Grand Trustee Estelle Evans, Past Grand President Amy V. McAvoy and D.D.G.P. Field.

Grand Trustee Evans, a member of No. 223, was given a surprise reception September 13. Cards were played, Estelle Beasley and Josephine Swartout winning, respectively, the first and the consolation prizes. A delicious dinner was served, the tables being beautifully decorated in pink and green. Mrs. Evans was the recipient of several beautiful gifts. Mary Houlihan, the Grand Trustee's mother, and Past Grand President McAvoy were guests from Pittsburg. NATIVESONISM

"NATIVESONISM IS A SUBSTANCE, which can be laid hold of with confidence. The character of those to be admitted should be of the very best. Our campaign cry, now and as it should always be, "Quality Not Quantity." Nativesonism has attained such a foothold in our state that booms are not necessary to keep it alive. So let us, in our daily avocations, exemplify the tenants of our Order, thus we can keep burning brightly the Nativesonism fire, in whose glow and warmth can be seen the proper conception of our duties as true native sons.

"Nativesonism teaches us to be united, harmonious and peace-loving. It adjures us to be in unity with our brothers, cautious in criticising their shortcomings, and ready in defending them against unjust censure. It teaches us to be charitable in dealing with those who deserve our assistance. It teaches loyalty to friends, to family, to community and to Order. The newly-made brother assumes no vow conflicting with duty to home and loved ones but, on the contrary, he is taught the laws of God and the laws of our commonwealth. No man can pass our portals who is not a firm believer in the existence of a Supreme Being.

"Nativesonism teaches us to carry our flowers to the living as well as to the dead. It provides for a sick and helpless brother, buries him when death darkens the home, sustains the widow and orphans with kindly words of sympathy and love and, when required, with the more substantial tokens of a fraternity that goes beyond the tinkling of cymbal and the sounding of brass. It teaches that life is something more than a ceaseless scramble for worldly things. That the man who, like Abou Ben Adhem, truly loves his fellowmen, is certain of a reward beyond the vale, if not before. It urges us to say kindly words and to do generous deeds today; tomorrow it may be too late.

"These are just a few of the things which Nativesonism teaches to the thousands of good men and true who seek the portals of our Order. Do all live true to N.S.G.W. vows? I grant you, no. Give me the time when all men speak the truth and do the right; I will sound the alarm of the millennium morn. But Nativesonism exerts an elevating, ennobling influence on every honest heart. It is especially attractive to young men just entering life's journey, and it should prove a defense against every evil, and help him so to live as is known to every man who wears the emblem of our Order.

"If these teachings appeal to you, we ask you to help us spread Native Son gospel. We do not cast a dragnet for recruits. We seek quality, not quantity. We want only men who know the meaning of fraternity—those who will prove true to Native Son vows. We ask, if we have interested you, that you pursue your investigation.

"Nativesonism loves the light, and Nativesonism is a light—a beacon that points the way along the path of life made fragrant by flowers of Friendship, Loyalty and Charity. We invite you to share that fragrance."

(This came to The Grizzly Bear from Palo Alto No. 216, with the following notation signed by that Parlor's publicity committee, Howard L. Cobb and F. W. Rayner: "The above was written by a Native Son, so we are sending it to be published in The Grizzly Bear."—Editor.)

Organize To Advance.

Oakland—Carrying out the suggestion of Grand President Charles A. Thompson, the Alameda County Extension of the Order Committee has been organized by Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb with these officers: E. F. Garrison (Athens No. 195), chairman; Judge J. D. Norris (Washington No. 169), vice-chairman; Geo. A. Oakes (Eden No. 113), treasurer; Edgar Hanson (Claremont No. 240), secretary.

The purposes of the committee are to work for the advancement of the Order and to benefit the Parlors socially, numerically and financially. It is composed of the president and three members of each Alameda County Parlor, and members of Grand Parlor committees, grand officers, past grand presidents, deputy grand presidents and district deputies affiliated with Parlors of the county.

Sub-committees of the Extension Committee include finance, membership, publicity, initiatory and visitation. Among the social activities provided for are an annual dinner and an annual picnic. Grand Trustee Hamb predicts that, as a result of this committee's activities, the Alameda County Parlors will increase their membership by at least 1,000 before the next Grand Parlor.

Costume Ball Brilliant Affair.

San Diego—The Admission Day costume ball given by San Diego No. 108 was a brilliant affair and was attended by several hundred couples. It was in the nature of a pageant depicting, in costumes, the history of California. The pageant was woven into a grand march, in which appeared Indians, Spaniards, Mexicans and Forty-niners.

In charge of arrangements for the event was this committee: Bud Hawley (chairman), Paul E. McHorney, Joe Switzer, Harold Stromberg and Bob Mahoney. Mayor Harry C. Clark issued a proclamation urging all San Diegans to observe the day.

Italian Night.

Ukiah—Ukiah No. 71 entertained September 2 in honor of Grand Second Vice-president Charles L. Dodge. An Italian night was featured, the committee of arrangements being Alfred Pioda, Charles Moffitt, Joseph Figone and Joseph I. Wilson.

Ukiah Troop No. 24, Boy Scouts of America, sponsored by the Parlor, has outlined its 1927-28 program. Awards were made September 27, when No. 71 entertained the scouts and their parents.

Past Presidents in State Meet.

Stockton—The general assembly of the Past Presidents' Association will be held here during October. Arrangements for entertaining the delegates are being made by San Joaquin Assembly No. 7, composed of past presidents from Stockton No. 7, Modesto No. 11, Lodi No. 18 and Tracy No. 186. R. C. Pagnello is the governor and W. A. Strong the secretary-treasurer of San Joaquin Assembly.

Visitors Exemplify Ritual.

Santa Ana—Santa Ana No. 265 entertained several visitors from Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) September 7. Three candidates were initiated, the ritual being exemplified by a team from No. 263, with the exception of first vice-president: D.D.G.P. William F. Durr, president; Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell, first vice-president; Stanley A. Wheeler, second vice-president; Vincent Hopkins, third vice-president; Ural Griffin, marshal; Edward E. Baldwin, junior past president.

Baldwin was put in charge during good of the order, and as a result the charity box was enriched considerably. Among the many speakers were Grand Third Vice-president Newell, D.D.G.P. Durr and President James Utt of No. 265. Ice cream and apple pie were served at the gathering's close.

Pioneer Memorial.

Merced—Yosemite No. 24 is to undertake the construction of a pioneer memorial to mark the course of the old Millerton road at boundary line of Merced and Mariposa Counties on the new Yosemite Valley state highway.

Over this historic road passed many of the Pioneers of 1849 in their mad rush to the goldfields of the Sierras, and over it was transported millions of dollars' worth of the yellow metal taken from the diggings of Mariposa County.

Ritual Contest.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais No. 64 and Marinita No. 198 N.D.G.W. will participate in a big parade here October 9 in recognition of Columbus Day. It will be a colorful pageant in which Columbus' landing upon the New World shores will be a prominent feature.

Arrangements for a ritual contest between the regular officers of Mount Tamalpais and Seapoint No. 158 (Sausalito) are being perfected. It promises to be most interesting, as both Parlors have splendid teams, and with a few rehearsals will be prepared to give good accounts of themselves.

CALIFORNIA'S FIFTY-EIGHT COUNTIES CONTRIBUTE TO MINERAL WEALTH.

Compilation of the final returns from the mineral producers of California for 1926 by the statistical section of the State Division of Mines and Mining (formerly the "State Mining Bureau") under the direction of State Mineralogist Lloyd L. Root, shows the total value for the year to have been $450,315,904, being an increase of $15,796,244 over the 1925 total of $434,519,660.

There were fifty-six different mineral substances, exclusive of a segregation of the various stones grouped under gems; and all of the fifty-eight counties of the state contributed to the list.

Petroleum accounted for an increase of $14,936,848 in total value due to advanced prices, in spite of a drop from 232,492,147 barrels to 224,673,281 barrels in quantity, or a difference of 7,818,866 barrels.

PIONEER NATIVE SON, LONG EASTERN RESIDENT, HEARD FROM.

The following interesting letter, dated at New York City, New York, August 17, 1927, came to the editor of The Grizzly Bear:

"Dear Sir—It may be of interest to you to hear from one of the oldest, perhaps the oldest, living pioneer Native Son of the Golden West. I was born in Union City, Alameda County, California, June 28, 1851. My father and grandfather were Pioneer settlers, going to California in 1849.

"Union City has long since passed off the map, but in a publication entitled 'History of Washington Township, Alameda County,' compiled and published by the County Club of Washington Township, 1904, there is an historical statement about Union City and Alvarado (page 46 et seq), and in it (page 49) it is stated that the first White child born in Union City was the daughter of Edward D. and Mary Gadding Clawiter; she was named Union Clawiter, and was born August 7, 1852.

"I have always understood that I was the first White child born across the bay from San Francisco, and my date of birth antedates hers by about fourteen months.

"In this same publication (pages 126 and 128), under the caption 'First Assessment Roll Washington Township 1854,' appear the names of my father, E. M. Knowles, and my grandfather, A. W. Richardson. My parents returned East when I was a very small child, and I have resided in the East ever since.

"Last June (1927) I had an opportunity to visit California for the first time since my birth, going to Los Angeles, being a guest of Mr. R. B. Stoddard of 200 S. Windsor Boulevard, a well-known oil operator in that city. While there I was made a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109, Native Sons of the Golden West, so that I am now in fact a full-fledged Son of the Golden West.

"I am now back in New York, and while I have no expectation of ever again going to California, still my thoughts and desires for the continued progress and prosperity of California are always uppermost in my mind, and I am fully in consonance with the objects and purposes of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, which I consider a bulwark for the preservation of California against foreign invasion and for its solidarity as one of the greatest states in the union.

"Hoping this communication may be of interest to you, and assuring you of my loyal allegiance to the Native Sons of the Golden West, I am "Very sincerely yours,

"EDWARD R. KNOWLES, C.E., E.E."

murdered by an English lady who wanted to regain control of a colonel, a Hindu Ranee seeking her diamond, or a mysterious Mexican bent on vengeance.

The novel, with its high literary merit, we regret as the last one of the author before his demise, as the reader will miss the doctor, and no more will we see him twirl his gold watch on its frayed piece of ribbon when in deep thought.

"THE WOLF PACK."

By Ridgwell Cullum; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

In this vigorous tale of the Canadian Rockies, the author explores the realm of stirring narrative with a discreet and unflattering tread and the reader needs no beckoning to follow in his footsteps.

The pack is composed of three disagreeably primitive people: Pideau, an Indian half-breed, killer, cattle rustler, bootlegger; Annette, his daughter, untamed, passionate creature of the wild, and the Wolf, orphaned son of Canadian missionaries who were killed in a railway wreck. The Wolf is adopted when an infant by Pideau, and grows to love Annette devoutly but to hate Pideau.

Annette, when she reaches womanhood, has an illicit affair with one of the Canadian mounted police, to whom she betrays, under promise of marriage, the secret cache of whiskey. The officer is shot in the back with the Wolf's gun and he is brought to trial for the murder, but the mystery is finally solved and Annette and the Wolf go back to the simple life of the woods.

Kiddies Picnic Guests.

Grass Valley—At a recent meeting of Manzanita No. 29, Past Grand President Alison F. Watt surprised the Parlor by presenting a complete set of new officers' regalia.

August 25 the Parlor entertained the kiddies of the members at a delightful picnic at Memorial Park. Following games and swimming a bounteous spread was served. The children, both large and small, voted the picnic a grand success and expressed the hope that it would be repeated next year.

Neat Sum Realized.

Ione—A delightful social function was the outdoor party at the home of A. C. Miner and wife for the benefit of the homeless children. Games were played, prizes were awarded and refreshments were served. A penny march was led by President Kate Riley of Chispa No. 40 and President Vincent Touhey of Ione No. 33 N.S.G.W. and a neat sum was realized.

The Parlors recently had a picnic at Silver Lake, in the high Sierras, and everyone enjoyed a happy day.

Anniversary Celebrated.

Halfmoon Bay—Vista del Mar No. 155 celebrated its twentieth institution anniversary with a "kid" party September 8. Charter members were special guests and, like everyone else, enjoyed themselves immensely. "Kid" games were played and refreshments in keeping with the nature of the party were served.

New Clothing for Homeless.

Oakland—Bahia Vista No. 167 has purchased a tree in the Pioneer Memorial Grove and named it in honor of President Clara Peralta, a descendant of the family who originally owned most of the land upon which this city now stands.

A substantial offering, new clothing made by the members, was recently sent the Central Homeless Children Committee. A box containing jams, cookies, smokes, magazines, etc., has been forwarded to the Arroyo Sanitarium. Each month the Parlor sponsors a surprise, arranged for by a committee.

Pioneer's Life Recounted.

Saint Helena—La Junta No. 203 initiated three candidates and received thirteen applications for membership September 6. An interesting account of the life of Pioneer Sam Brannan was related by Mrs. John A. Mitchell. Refreshments were enjoyed.

Everlasting Flowers Presented.

Salinas—Officers of Aleli No. 102 were installed by D.D.G.P. Josephine Snell August 25, Mrs. Frank Martin being the presiding officer. Among the visitors were Past Grand President Bessie A. Briggs and a large delegation from Copa de Oro No. 105 (Hollister).

Refreshments were served at tables decorated in marigolds and candle to match. Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Ben Le Boeuf and Miss Ramona Rianda. Baskets of everlasting flowers were presented D.D.G.P. Sophia Briggs and Mrs. Hattie Nichols, who is to make her home in Los Angeles.

Former Grand Officer Injured.

Upper Lake—Mrs. Laura Fraker Tollman, Past Grand Secretary, was the victim of a serious auto accident September 16, due to a defective steering gear.

In Memoriam

NELLIE CONNORS

Once again a beloved sister, Nellie Connors, has been called to her eternal home. Our hearts are filled with sorrow, and our hearts are pressed with grief at her loss. Her cheerful ways disposition endeared her to us during her residence among us, and her counsel and advice in matters and welfare of her associates will be sadly missed. Her loss to her in ties of fraternal love. We, the members of our ranks, we deplore her passing from us, and while submitting before the hand of Time had marked her for its own, we reverently bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will and trust that

"When the sunset gates unbar
We may see her waiting stand
And white against the evening star
Behold the welcome of her beckoning hand."

SAN FRANCISCO
THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

upon the East Branch of the North Fork of Feather River, came up from Yuba and Butte Counties, following the Mountain House Ridge, through Bucks Ranch Valley, then up to Spanish Peak and then down the backbone of the ridge to Indian Hill and Rich Bar. It was the shortest route. It was an old trail and the one used by travelers and packtrains several years thereafter.

"The present wagon road to Indian Valley over the mountain by way of Crystal Lake follows, a good portion of the way, the old Indian trail which had been traveled for centuries by the Redskins in journeying between American and Indian Valleys. The old trail from Onion Valley to Nelson Point was the one followed by the first Pioneers who came to Nelson Creek and American Valley from the Middle Fork section.

"The years 1853-54-55-56 were doubtless the most prosperous in the life of Elizabethtown. It is claimed that during that period, and within a circle of one and one-half miles from this spot, there was a population of from 2,000 to 2,500. Elizabethtown at that time, as described by a Pike County, Missouri, enthusiast, was 'a right smart chance of a town.' It was surely a busy burg; the first year the county was organized and officered, more than thirty county licenses being paid for by persons doing business in the place.

"The main street extended over the whole length of the flat. A stone store and warehouse was erected upon the point where we now are holding this celebration. There were several two-story buildings, many stores, saloons, gambling houses, shops, gilded palaces, lodging houses, eating houses, deadfalls, etc., which made it a miniature city. During a part of that time a lodge of the Sons of Temperance, with a membership of more than 200, was maintained. The lodge erected a two-story building used as a hall. This was before the days of prohibition, but the fact is, that notwithstanding having such a large temperance organization, a bountiful supply of liquid refreshments were always on hand to supply the demand of all those who walked up to the bar and said, 'Boys, let's all hands take a drink.'

"In 1857-8, Elizabethtown commenced to show signs of demoralization. The Frazier River excitement and the opening of the Comstock mines at Virginia City made a great inroad upon its population, hundreds joining in the exodus. Quite a number of the residents of Elizabethtown and American Valley went to Indian and Honey Lake Valleys, located upon lands and became permanent and prominent citizens of those localities. A number of the buildings were razed and the material transported to Quincy and there reconstructed. Quincy experienced quite a boom, and Elizabethtown was the unfortunate 'goat.' A majority of the business houses shut up shop and the proprietors hunted pastures anew.

"Slowly, but surely, the town was dwindling, its glory was departing, it was soon to become a deserted village, a dilapidated and defunct mining camp with naught but its history remaining. It shared the same fate as have many other mining towns in California.

"During all of the years of prosperity in Elizabethtown the citizens never erected any church edifice. No effort, so far as I could ascertain, was ever made in that direction. It never had a resident priest or pastor. Itinerant Gospel expounders, perambulating preachers and eloquent exhorters occasionally held services, took up collections, and then hiked to some other mining camp, there to repeat the entertainment. They never neglected to garner the sheckels.

"Mount Herman Lodge No. 94 Free and Accepted Masons was instituted in Elizabethtown May 6, 1856. December 24, 1859, it surrendered its charter. The Clampers Lodge was a live organization. Initiations were frequent, the ceremonies always interesting, especially so to the candidates.

"The hill rising from the point upon which this monument is erected is the well-known 'Emigrant Hill;' by whom, when, how or why it was so christened, I never knew. During its existence Elizabethtown was never damaged by a serious conflagration; a few miners' cabins went up in flame and smoke, but the loss was small. No lynchings took place. A miners' court was frequently in session and by its order a few of the undesirables were permitted to take their departure, and they seldom returned. No high school, grammar school or district school was ever opened in Elizabethtown. Not enough 'kids' of school age to warrant such action. Taking Quincy as a fair example, it shows that time has changed conditions in that respect very materially.

"The wagon road from Elizabethtown to Newtown, Blackhawk, Butterfly and adjacent mining camps went up yonder hill, which was called Posey Point. It was evidently so named by some former Posey County, Indiana, resident in honor of his home county 'back East.' I can assure you that it was no concrete paved highway; it was rough and tough and a powerful hard road to travel. That road had to answer its purpose for the reason that it was the only available way in to or out of those mines, and several hundred miners got all of their supplies from this place.

"At the first general election in Plumas County the location of the county-seat was submitted to the voters. There were three candidates, Elizabethtown, O'Neill's Flat and Quincy. The latter won out, much to the disappointment and dismay of the losers, especially Elizabethtown. It was a knockout blow. I take this opportunity to state that my first visit to Quincy and Elizabethtown was on Monday, October 18, 1858, nearly sixty-nine years ago.

"No newspaper was ever published in Elizabethtown. The first printed in the county was 'The Mountaineer,' of which J. K. Lovejoy was the owner and editor. It may be justly claimed that it was one of the spiciest papers ever struck off from any press. Lovejoy moved the whole plant from Quincy to Genoa, Nevada State, at the time of the excitement and great rush to the Comstock mines at Virginia City. The next was the 'Fillmore Banner,' a short-lived campaign publication; next the 'Plumas Argus,' owned by McElyain & Co. and the only paper in the county for several years. The 'Plumas Standard' and the 'Quincy Union' managed to exist for a limited time. The 'Plumas National' and the 'Plumas Independent' were next in succession and are still with us. Partial files of some of the defunct papers, excepting 'The Mountaineer,' are now in the possession of Plumas Pioneer Parlor, and are all worth preserving.

"A stage line, with stages making four trips per day, was run between Quincy and Elizabethtown for a number of years. There were three wayside stations along the route and a bar in each was the chief source of revenue for the proprietors. One of the stations was the two-story house of Sam Stinson, which was located at the south end of the present Long bridge over Spanish Creek, another was the Linton place, and the other Captain O'Neill's trading post and saloon upon O'Neill Flat, which is now known as the Riverdale mine.

"Traveling troupes of minstrels, hurdy gurdies and show people gave varied entertainments. Sports of different kinds were improvised, but gambling was the chief amusement. Nearly every one indulged in that pastime—they were willing and anxious to take a chance. It was ever thus, proving the truth of the old adage, 'It is human nature to gamble.'

"The name first given to this locality was Tate's Ravine, but in 1852, by unanimous consent of the residents, the name was changed to Elizabethtown, so named as a compliment to a daughter of Esquire Lewis Stark, who was united by marriage to W. A. Blakesley, one of the early Pioneers and permanent residents of American Valley. The tablet inserted in the monument this day dedicated makes due record of these facts.

"As has been before stated, this is the second monument erected in Plumas County to mark a historical place. The plan which was inaugurated by the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters, and which they are so successfully carrying on, was and is a praiseworthy one and is fully appreciated by all Californians. Let the good work be continued. There are several localities in the county which will probably receive due attention at some future date. May prosperity and success be with the Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Golden West. So say one, so say all of us."

(The other historic landmarks monument referred to by Senator Kellogg is at Rich Bar. It was erected by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West following the Oroville (1913) Grand Parlor, attendants at which visited, as guests of Argonaut Parlor No. 8 and Quincy Parlor No. 131, the site of what was once Rich Bar. —Editor.)

SCHOOLBOY RESERVES EFFICIENT.

While boys of a generation ago were in their glory "playing policeman," young America of today, as exemplified in San Francisco schoolboys, are actually performing the functions of police officers and, as members of the public school traffic reserves, are doing their duty with one hundred percent efficiency.

The traffic reserves were organized in the San Francisco schools several years ago by the California State Automobile Association's public safety department, with the co-operation of the police department and the board of education. Older boys in each school, proficient in their studies, constitute the youthful traffic policemen and they are charged with the responsibility of guiding their schoolmates at crossings near schools.

In some locations, pupils are instructed to follow certain routes to school, to avoid dangerous and unprotected crossings and to reach intersections manned by the schoolboy patrols. More than a thousand boys are members of this volunteer safety organization in the San Francisco schools. As a rule, the unit in each school is divided into three shifts, working before and after school and at the noon hour.

The automobile association supplies the youthful traffic officers with uniform distinctive arm bands and provides the form of organization and instruction in traffic control. San Francisco motorists have become accustomed to these directors of traffic at intersections near schools and the signals given by the boys are seldom disobeyed. So that traffic will be facilitated to its greatest degree, the schooyboy patrols have their schoolmates gather in groups at a corner. Then, at a given signal, traffic is halted and the group is escorted across the street.

HURRAH FOR THE WHITE HOUSE.

The White House was the only downtown San Francisco department store which remained closed Admission Day, September 9, and it had large advertisements in the daily papers paying tribute to the California Pioneers.

In behalf of Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. Secretary Hazel B. Nelson sent a letter of appreciation to the White House management.

SURPRISE LUNCHEON.

Mrs. Hannah Barry of Mission Parlor No. 227 N.D.G.W., about to depart on an extended Eastern trip, was recently tendered a surprise reception and luncheon at the home of Louise Cases. Many beautiful gifts were received by the honor-guest, the presentation address being made by the hostess.

The table was artistically decorated with flowers of every description. Colored lights, nestling in the greens, made an elaborate effect, and a pale lavender tablecloth blended perfectly with the pastel shades of the decorations. An impromptu program was presented by Ann Saxon, Hazel Groswird and Supervising D.D.G.P. May Rose Barry.

Fifty-ninth U. C. B. Class—The University of California at Berkeley, Alameda County, during August opened its doors to the fifty-ninth class since its incorporation as a state institution in 1869.

SUNSET ATHWART THE GOLDEN GATE

(W. G. BRATTON.)

As the sun goes down at the close of day
And sinks into the sea,
It casts a sheen of splendor o'er
The clouds that stretch from shore to shore,
That thrills with ecstasy.

No painter can with brush and paint
Depict such lovely scene;
He cannot blend the colors rare,
Nor near approach the shading there,
To make such gorgeous sheen.

'Twere vain for Mortal Man to try
To vie with Nature's work;
To try to paint the lily fair,
Or e'en essay the lightning's glare,
Is task that he should shirk.

And be content to ply his art,
And put his trust in Fate;
But ne'er attempt to match the glow
Upon the clouds that swing so low,
Across the Golden Gate.

—Mill Valley Record.

CALIFORNIA'S VOLCANOES AS ATTRACTIVE AS THE CLIMATE.

Another reason why California should be a mecca for tourists has just been offered by a graduate student at the University of California who came over from England to study volcanoes. This student, Howel Williams, one of twenty commonwealth fellows studying in America at the present time, says that California has by far the most interesting collection of living and dead volcanoes to be found anywhere in the United States.

He bases his opinion not on hearsay but on a personal inspection of thousands of extinct cones since he has been in California. He expects to spend another year upon the Pacific Coast before returning to England to apply his California-acquired knowledge to the analysis of the English volcanic topography. English volcanoes have been dead so long, he explains, that it takes an expert trained in the characteristics of the phenomena to recognize them.

Among the more interesting phenomena on which Williams has been working are the Marysville Buttes and an unique mud flow north of Mount Lassen, which probably occurred 300 years ago. The source of the mud flow is known as Chaos Crags, and the flow itself, some three miles long, a mile or more in width and in some places 300 feet deep, is known as The Jumbles.

The interesting features of the flow, Williams says, for which he can find no parallel in literature on volcanic action, is the fact that the entire side of the mountain apparently blew over and combined with snow and ice on the surface, forming a mud so thick that huge boulders as large as a room were carried along upon its surface. And, in addition, the flow after running down the side of the peak and across a valley continued up hill on the other slope for 500 feet, stopping with an abrupt wall 100 feet high marking its front edge. He has judged its age by counting the rings upon trees which have sprung up since the eruption took place.

Williams is also investigating a theory that many of the buttes and volcano cones in California were not formed by the solidification of liquid lava and the erosion of the earth from around them, but were pushed up from the earth in much their present form by internal forces, much as the spire of rock rose during the famous eruption of Mount Pelé on the island of Martinique in 1902.

Search for Oil Source—Preparations for continuing an investigation into the possibility of petroleum oil beds still being in the process of formation upon the floor of the Pacific Ocean are now being made at the University of California Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla, San Diego County.

Apple Show—Anderson Valley's second annual Apple Show and fair will be held at Boonville, Mendocino County, October 7, 8 and 9.

W. E. Coleman, sent to San Quentin from San Joaquin County for burglary, won the sympathy of C. W. Holt of Sacramento City, who had him paroled. He was taken into Holt's home, but temptation being too strong he appropriated $180 and some jewelry and was returned to the penitentiary.

HIGHWAYMAN WAYLAYS CHINKS.

Because the mother of a Chilean girl with whom he was desperately in love forbade him, through an interpreter, visiting the home, Percy S. Von Loesicke, a handsome young man, committed suicide at San Jose, Santa Clara County.

In a bath-house altercation at Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, C. M. Walker fatally shot Victor Fonk.

In a gin fight October 7 at Colusa, Colusa County, Marshal John T. Arnold killed Barry McCabe, a sporting man.

Three brothers named Behite were partners in a mining claim at Prospect Flat, Placer County. October 22 Albert killed Gus as a result of a quarrel.

Colonel Buffandeau, captain of the French Zouaves, a crack military organization, committed suicide while walking along Jackson street, San Francisco, October 16.

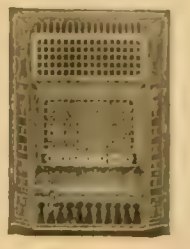
William Stone, a Sierra County miner, was killed October 11 by Chinamen attempting to rob his sluice-boxes.

At La Porte, Plumas County, October 5 five Chinamen employed a teamster to haul them and their outfit to Oroville, Butte County. When near their destination a highwayman stopped the team and demanded the Chinks' money. The driver demurring, the robber fired and killed one of the Chinamen. One thousand dollars, which his companions said he had upon his person, was missing when the coroner examined the remains.

A bonded warehouse at Sonoma and Green streets, San Francisco, burned October 10 with a $450,000 loss. It was filled with valuable imported goods.

Vacaville, Solano County, had a $75,000 fire October 11. J. D. Vance, a druggist, was arrested as the incendiary, but was acquitted.

The Southern Pacific depot at Woodland, Yolo County, was destroyed by fire October 10 with a $10,000 loss.



The steamer "Constitution," from Victoria, B. C., came into San Francisco Bay afire October 4. It was hauled to Mission Bay, where it burned for a day and became a wreck.

A Truckee, Nevada County, newspaper advised girls looking for husbands to steer clear of railroad men. A well-known railway conductor had dreamed a few nights before that he was aboard a runaway train and was setting the brakes as fast and hard as he could. He was aroused from his nightmare to find that he had saved the train—but he had his wife by both ears and had nearly twisted her head off.

LOS ANGELES

for the homeless children. The purpose being especially worthy, a large attendance of Native Sons and Native Daughters and their friends is expected. Refreshments will be served and attractive prizes awarded. October 26 will be given over to a dance.

BIG CROWD AT STOCK YARDS.

A crowd variously estimated at from 6,000 to 20,000 went to the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards September 9 to participate in the Admission Day festivities arranged by the Native Sons, the Native Daughters, and the managements of the Union Stock Yards and the Union Pacific.

Prizes in the various events were awarded to Gabriel Ruiz, Pedro Lugo, Louis Rico and the drill-team of Rudecinda Parlor N.D.G.W. (San Pedro).

SIXTEEN INITIATED.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. had the biggest gathering for a long while September 23, when a class of sixteen candidates were initiated. The ritual was impressively rendered by the officers of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 (San Pedro). Following the ceremonies Sepulveda's "'49 degree" was put on, to the amusement of those assembled, except the "gold panners."

A bounteous supper, prepared and served by Walter Slosson and his assistants, was then served. Gathered around the festive board, Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell told of the accomplishments and ambitions of the Order, and there were brief addresses by Deputy Grand President Sidney B. Witkowski and President Willard Buchanan of Sepulveda.

Those members of Ramona who fail to attend the October meetings will be disappointed, according to Slosson, chairman of that Parlor's entertainment committee, who says that surprise features are to be introduced; their nature and the dates are a guarded secret, but they will be of exceptional merit. October 21 will be initiation night in No. 109.

HURRY, TO SEE "7TH HEAVEN."

But a short time remains in which to see "7th Heaven" at the Carthay Circle Theatre, with the Jack Laughlin prologue and Carli Elinor's famous concert orchestra, for the last performance of this sensational success will be given the evening of October 5, after which, on October 7, the new Carthay Circle Theatre attraction, "Loves of Carmen," will commence what previewers predict will be another highly successful run at this beautiful theatre.

"7th Heaven" has been acclaimed as one of the few great screen dramas produced in the last ten years, and perhaps this is the reason why it has enjoyed the sensational run of six months at the Carthay Circle. Its story is said to be one of the most powerful narratives of love, courage and faith ever penned by man. To record "7th Heaven" in film cost the William Fox Corporation more than a million dollars, owing to the fact that thousands of people appear in the production, which features Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell and which was directed by Frank Borzage.

"Loves of Carmen," the coming new production at the Carthay Circle, features Dolores Del Rio and Victor McLaglen, and was directed by Raoul Walsh, the same directorial and co-starring combination which made such a notable success of "What Price Glory," another Carthay Circle triumph which enjoyed a run of more than six months.

JUDGES RECEPTION GUESTS.

A large crowd, including goodly delegations from all the county Parlors, attended the August 30 reception arranged by Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. in honor of three members of the Order appointed to the local superior court FAITHFUL WORKERS HONORED.

San Pedro—Gold cards for paid-up memberships in Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. for the next twenty-five years were presented James W. Mee and Joseph J. Kaveney September 1. Mee served as general chairman of the committee in charge of the Fiftieth Grand Parlor in San Pedro last May, and Kaveney acted as chairman of the committee which conducted a series of California barbecues, largely responsible for the financing of the gathering. The presentation address was made by D.D.G.P. William F. Durr. This was also "Jimmy Carroll Night," in honor of James V. Carroll, former recording secretary of the Parlor. Formerly general agent at San Pedro for the Union Pacific, he was recently transferred to Riverside in the same capacity for the company and has transferred his membership to Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 (San Bernardino). Among the many speakers were Grand Third Vice-president John T. Newell and John C. Swinford, the latter giving an interesting account of his trip to Europe. Supper was served by Harry Fairall, assisted by members of Rudecinda Parlor N.D.G.W.

The Los Angeles Board of Public Works has invited Sepulveda to lay the cornerstone of the new branch city hall now under construction in San Pedro. The Parlor will endeavor to secure a valuable bronze cannon as a display feature in the edifice, as the six-story building will have a large hallway suitable for the display of several articles of historical interest. Last January a small cannon was hauled out of the outer harbor by the anchor of a British steamer. It has the marks of the Spaniards' early firearms, and is believed to have once been used by the "Californians" who, for a time, fought occupation by the forces of the United States. The theory has also been advanced that the weapon came from one of the Manila galleons. In the Armistice Day parade the Parlor will be represented by an attractive float.

PIONEERS ENTERTAINED.

San Pedro—Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. entertained the harbor district Pioneers September 15. Fifteen were in attendance, and their number was augmented by several Native Sons and old-timers. Members of the Parlor appeared in costumes of the days of '49. D.D.G.P. Katherine Ronan presided and a welcome was extended by Rudecinda de Dodson.

A delightful program was given, each Pioneer responding as called on. In the presence of those who have known her from childhood Florence Dodson-Schoneman, the first district deputy appointed from the Parlor, was presented with the regalia of her office by Carrie E. Lenhouse, organizer of Rudecinda. Mr. and Mrs. James Dodson Sr. led the grand march to artistically decorated tables. Quaintly dressed dolls were the favors and a "dandy" supper was served.

The afternoon of Sunday, October 2, historic Drum Barracks at Wilmington will be marked by Rudecinda with an appropriate bronze plaque. It is hoped that Judge Savage, the only one living who served as a soldier there, will be in attendance. The Parlor's uniformed drill team will be on hand. It participated in the Admission Day festivities and appeared on the occasion of the official visit of Grand President Mae Himes Noonan September 23. October 8 the Parlor will observe poppy day for the benefit of the homeless children.

"WEINIE" ROAST A SUCCESS.

Long Beach—The beach party and "weinie" roast of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W. September 17 was well attended and a big success. Several candidates were initiated during the past month and many applications are being received.

The Parlor plans to present the Flag of the United States of America and the California State (Bear) Flag to the Frances Willard grammar-school.

RUMMAGE SALE PLANNED.

Long Beach—At the September 14 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. two candidates were initiated. Plans were made for a rummage sale, from the proceeds of which it is hoped to pay for the tree pledged for the Native Daughters' Pioneer Memorial Redwood Park in Humboldt County. An interesting report of the doings of the Federation of States Societies was made by D.D.G.P. Maud Klasgye, the Parlor's representative in the federation.

September 22, at the lovely home of Mrs. Laura Crowell in North Long Beach, the Parlor had a benefit card party. Thirteen members trekked to Santa Ana August 24 to visit the Parlor there, and many were in attendance at the Admission Day function at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards.

SUPERB SCENERY.

The Los Angeles Grand Opera Association has had built in Los Angeles City the six carloads of scenery which will be used in its season of grand opera which opens at the Shrine Auditorium October 3.

Artistically, the scenery owned by the association is superb. The various productions have been built by men of various European and American schools, and as a result each production presents a splendid contrast to the others. All has been done under the close scrutiny of George Leslie Smith and Merle Armitage, and properties and costumes have been designed and built on the same color-pallette for each opera.

SANTA BARBARA TO HEAR N.S. PIANIST.

Keith Corelli (Ramona N.S.), concert pianist, will make his initial appearance in Santa Barbara in October as soloist with the Santa Barbara Symphony Orchestra, Roger Clerbois, conductor. The engagement is being sponsored by Mrs. Wm. H. Bliss of Montecito. He will also play for the Santa Barbara Women's Club later in the season.

October 11, Corelli will present the opening program for the Cosmos Club at the new district federation headquarters on South Hobart boulevard. He will play again at federation headquarters October 26 for club presidents of the Los Angeles district.

CABRILLO

(JUDGE MERLE J. ROGERS.)

Intrepid one, who dared to pioneer,
To brave a distant sea unplowed of keel,
Along an undiscovered shore to feel
The way; among uncharted shoals to steer
The deckless, pigmy ship San Salvador;
His foot the first to tread this Western world;
His sovereign's flag the first to be unfurled
Along a thousand miles of golden shore.

For his king he found a wondrous land,
Pleasing and rich and fair as king could crave;
For himself he found but an unmarked grave
On desolate, storm-swept rock and sand
Of lonely San Miguel.

Four centuries—
Have dragged their days across that sepulchre
Nor left a trace of any days that were;
No mausoleum bars the breaking seas;
No tablet tells that here Cabrillo lies;
In all the land no city bears his name,
No place commemorates his deeds or fame,
No shaft proclaims his mighty enterprise.
He heeds them not, for here is something more:
A State has come where first his vision went;
A Commonwealth becomes his monument,
Columbus of the Western shore!

Country's Centers—The geographic center of the United States is near the center of the northern boundary of Kansas, and the center of population is in Owen County, southwestern Indiana. The center of industry of the United States in 1926 was 640 miles east by north of the geographic center and about 170 miles due north of the center of population. This information comes from the Geological Survey, Federal Department of the Interior.

Good News—"Victory again perches on the banner of the hustlers. The good news was received here Tuesday that the mines of Angels and Melones would be reopened and that the full dinner pail and the good ol' payroll would be with us again. And that's what makes the wheels go 'round."—Calaveras Californian, September 15.
